PARTED AFTER A HALF CENTURY.

Mrs. J. C. VanName Dies After Fifty-two Years of Married Life.

Saturday afternoon occurred the death of Mrs. J. C. VanName at her home on Elmwood place after an illness of two weeks.

Mrs. VanName was the daughter of Moses VanPelt, and was born at Mariner's Harbor, S. I., seventy-two years ago. She was married to J. C. VanName, and they took up their residence in this city a number of years ago. Two sons, Henry and Garrett VanName, and one daughter, Mrs. C. Kohler, survive her.

Mr. and Mrs. VanName had lived together fifty-two years and were very devoted to each other. She was a faithful member of the First Baptist church and was a steady attendant.

The funeral services were held this morning at eleven o'clock from her late residence, Rev. Dr. Yerkes officiating. Interment was in Hillside cemetery, Mariner's Harbor, this afternoon.

A Delightful Drive.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Schuyler, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Roberts, John Meeker and the Misses Hewson, of this city, and William Chamberlain, of Westfield, drove on Friday to Fox Hill, where they remained over night and on Saturday continued their journey to Chester, Morris county, where they were the guests of Frank Hewson, whose father, William Hewson, kept the City Hotel in this city in the latter part of the '70s. The delightful trip was immensely enjoyed, and their reception and treatment at Chester a long to be remembered. event. The party returned last night.

A National Sermon.

Rev. Dr. Riggs delivered a very excellent national sermon yesterday morning in the Trinity Reformed church, to an appreciative congregation, selecting as a text for the foundation of his sermon, Deut. 33: 29, "Happy art thou, O Israel; who is like unto thee, O people saved by the Lord."

The national colors covered the pulpit and were also draped each side of the organ. The Sunday-school room was also appropriately decorated with flags and stramers of red, white and blue.

He Is a Fool,

so the great Homer thought, "who only sees the mischiefs that are past." He is wise who, anticipating the mischief that may result from inattention to care of his eyes, seeks the advice of a reliable optician, and learns how to provide against loss of sight and the ills that follow in its wake. Go to Collier's then, and get timely counsel on this important subject. All examinations free at 103 Park avenue.

Union Service.

The regular mid-week prayer service in Trinity Reformed church will be omitted on Wednesday evening on account of its nearness to the Fourth of July celebration, and a union service with the Christian Endeavor Society will be held this evening at eight o'clock in the lecture room of the church. Visitors always welcome.

Tennis Tournaments.

The Hillside Tennis Club will hold an open singles tournament on July Fourth, snstead of the club tournament previously announced. The open tournament, which was to be held on the courts of H. E. Rider, of East Front street, on July 3, has been postponed until July 12, so as not to conflict with the Hillside Tennis Club's tournament.

An Important Feature.

One of the most important features of the Fourth of July celebration has arrived in town. It is a young pig who will be greased and let loose upon the Crescent Oval on the afternoon of the Fourth. He arrived from Somerville, and as a squealer does credit to the town from which it hails. The pig will be shaved by Brown.

Made Rich in a Day.

Daniel Sorrell, a poor painter, who lives in East Grand street, Elizabeth, has received word from England that he has fallen heir in that country to $75,000 by the death of a relative. He will sail for England this week to claim his fortune.

Music and Salvation.

The Salvation Army held a very interesting meeting on North avenue yesterday afternoon and evening. The musical part of the service was led by three cornets.

A Crushed Thumb.

While Robert Rand was trying to fix the chain on his bicycle yesterday the thumb on his right hand caught in the chain and was severely crushed.

OFFICIAL LINE OF MARCH.

How the Division Will Form and the Streets on Which They Will Go.

Amos Andrews, chairman of the parade committee of the Fourth of July celebration, today announces the official line of march and the points at which the different divisions will form are as follows:

Second division—On Crescent avenue, right resting on Seventh street, extending down Crescent avenue towards Park avenue.

Third division—Right resting on Crescent avenue, extending down Watchung avenue towards Ninth street.

Fourth division—Right resting on Watchung avenue, extending down LaGrande towards Richmond street.

The line of march is as follows, the only change from the proposed line published on Saturday being the substitution of Eighth street for Seventh street, the latter thoroughfare not being in condition to draw the heavy floats over it:

From Watchung avenue through Seventh street to Park avenue, through Park avenue to Arlington place and countermarch to Eighth street, to Liberty street, to Front street, to Washington avenue, to Mercer avenue, to Grove street, to Linden avenue, to Somerset street, to Craig place, to Grove street, to Front street, to Richmond street, to Fifth street, to Park avenue, to North avenue and dismiss.

TOM PLATT AND THE FOURTH.

He Will Send Out the Famous Express Wagon for the Parade.

Manager Mills, of the U. S. Express Company, has at last succeeded in securing the company's World's Fair exhibition for the Fourth of July parade. It consists of the largest, handsomest and most complete express wagon ever placed on wheels, together with four of the largest horses owned by the company. The harness is gold mounted.

Mr. Mills had great difficulty in securing the rig, and was obliged to go personally to President Platt. The order for it was received Saturday. The Plainfield branch have also been given the privilege of keeping it four days to deliver goods. Mr. Mills also received a requisition to decorate the company's office.

Why Go Away From Plainfield?

While some friends are discussing summer schools established in different parts of the country that have recognized the fact that children are benefited by a little study in summer, they do not know that in Plainfield at the Manual Training and Grammar school, on East Front street, there is a class of boys and girls meeting three mornings in the week for instruction from Miss Dalziel in clay modeling. This accomplished young teacher, who has recently returned from Philadelphia where she has been studying under Prof. Platchvart, has a happy group of boys and girls about her, who have found in substituting clay, for the sand-pits at home, great satisfaction in the better results of their scientific play. A glance at their cheerful faces will convince parents and friends of children that a little work during the long vacation is of great value, and that it is also true that "All play and no work work makes Jack a dull boy."

THE PLAINS TEAM DEFEATED

Y. M. C. A. TEAM WINS A VICTORY BY FOUR RUNS.

Few Errors Made By Either Team, Though the Ball Was Wet and Slippery—Billy Lee at Short.

Even water cannot check the enthusiasm of the cranks, especially if they have a chance to see the home team win, and so it was at the Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon in the baseball game between the Y. M. C. A. team and the Scotch Plains club, when the Y. M. C. A. boys won by the score of 5 to 1.

Despite the fact that the ball was wet and slippery, neither team made many errors, although some of the Scotch Plains infielders seemed inclined to juggle with the ball. The Plainfield boys won their game fairly, out-fielding and out-batting their opponents. Burt seemed a perfect puzzle, and although his delivery was hit, yet only one was hit safely. It seemed like old times to see Billy Lee on the diamond again, but he now plays short instead of his old position at third. He did not play his old game, however, except in the fourth inning when he made one of those famous left-hand cathes of an apparently safe hit of Townley's.

Four of the five ruus were scored in the third inning. Schenck was first to bat and hit to third, who threw him out at first. Dupee got his base on balls, and ran around to third on Erickson's fumble of Schoonmaker's grounder. Schoonmaker stole second, and then Egan put one in Billy Lee's hands who dropped it. Dupee crossed the plate and Schoonmaker took third. A prettty base hit by McKelvey sent Schoonmaker home and Egan on to second. By this time the cranks were enjoying the game to their heart's content. Johnson lost his nerve and sent Burt to first on four balls forcing Egan to third and McKelvey to second. Egan tried to do a rash thing, to steal home, and succeeded, while McKelvey and Burt each advanced a base. A long fly of Davis's enabled McKelvey to score the fourth run on the throw in. Wyckoff ended the inning by striking out.

The other run was made in the sixth by Wyckoff on errors by Johnson, Lee and C. Frentz. Lee made the only run for the Scotch Plains nine on an error by Schoonmaker, a sacrifice hit, a stolen base and a hit by Johnson.

At the end of the second inning, play was suspended for a time on account of rain, but was resumed in a few minutes.

After one half of the seventh inning had been played the rain came down so hard that umpire Theirs called the game.

The score by innings was as follows:—

Merchants who are building floats for the Fourth of July parade should not build them over 11 feet high on account of the railroad bridges being only 12 feet from the roadway.

The Union County Equal Suffrage Association are arranging for both public and parlor meetings to be held during the fall.

To Orate.

FOR GOOD GOVERNMENT.

DR. LEWIS TALKS TO YOUNG PEOPLE ON THE SUBJECT.

Says the Present Movement Resembles the One Before the War, But Along Different and Just As Important Lines.

A very interesting "Good Government" meeting was held in the Congregational church, last evening by the Christian Endeavor Society of that church. John V. Beekman, Jr., president of the society, acted as leader. After several opening hymns, a selection of Scripture was read, after which Rev. C. L. Goodrich led in prayer.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis was then introduced as the speaker of the evening. He spoke of the prophetic movement that occurred in 1860, when the military tactics were used so extensively in the presidential campaign, and how it prepared the young men of the time for the coming war. The present "good government" movement, he said, is the forerunner of a grand movement that is coming in the next century by which the many questions that stand so prominently before us today without any apparent solution, will be definitely settled. Attempts are now being made to settle them by legislation but the true solution will be the adoption of practical Christianity in the government. I do not agree, he said, with the party that believe that as soon as the words "Christ" and "God" are put in the Constitution, everything will be all right, but I believe that when the time comes, and it will come too, that this country is governed from a Christian standpoint, these questions will no longer trouble us. It is the young people of today that will see the beginning to this great movement and they must be prepared to do their share. It is not likely that there will be war as in '61, but the issues will be just as important if not more so.

DEATH OF MRS. BERRY.

Was an Active Worker in the First Presbyterian Church.

Deborah Berry, wife of John C. Berry, passed away quietly Sunday morning at her home, 27 Craig place. Two weeks ago in coming down stairs Mrs. Berry slipped and fell, injuring herself internally. She never rallied and Plainfield lost a good and Christian woman and the First Presbyterian church an active worker. Mrs. Berry had been a resident of Plainfield for thirty-five years, coming here from New York. Her husband survives her. Mrs. Berry's nephew, D. S. Berry, lives at 25 Craig place, and Mr. Cox and Mr. Spangenberg are both related to her. She had three daughters, Mrs. David Shotwell, now in Florida, Mrs. Harriet Bailey, who resided with Mrs. Berry, and Mrs. A. C. Sutton, of Riverton. She also had four grandchildren of whom Oliver Sutton of Dunellen is one.

The funeral will take place at the house, 27 Craig place, tomorrow afternoon at 2:30. Rev. C. E. Herring will officiate. The interment will be at Hillside cemetery.

A Watermelon Party.

The mention of a watermelon party suggests great times, and the one given by Andrew Wilson, of Washingtonville last Friday evening to a number of his young friends, was equal to the expectations. After an evening of singing and instrumental music the melons appeared. Among those who enjoyed Mr. Wilson's hospitality were the Misses Jessie Coddington, Jennie Simpson, Josie Fritts, Lena Smalley, Minnie Smalley, May McLoughlin, Miss Speer, Harry Coddington, Allen Coddington, Will Kitchen, Robert Clark, Edward Clark and Will Titus.

Why, of Course, They Will.

Several people on North avenue have been wondering whether any of the merchants are going to decorate their places of business. In view of the fact that North avenue will receive the visitors from out of town, it seems as though they ought to go into the decorating business with a good will.

A MOVING FESTIVAL.

But The Little Girls Made Money Just the Same.

A lawn festival in the rain was not to be thought of and so the young people who were to hold one on the lawn of E. H. Hannagah, of Craig place and Grove street, Saturday afternoon and evening, moved to a vacant house on Craig place kindly ient for the occasion by Mr. Hannagan. The festival was started on the lawn in the afternoon, but when the rain came and the waitresses had to pass the ice cream from under umbrellas, the moving began. John P. Emmons gave the use of his wagon and he and Mr. Hannagan did their best in assisting. Mrs. Hannagan, Mrs. C. H. Smith and Miss Safford helped to rearrange the booths and by eight o'clock the festival was in full swing.

At a pretty booth at one end of the room Miss Edna Smith and Miss Aimee Emmons sold delicious candies. Lemonade was passed out by Miss Della Grant, while the root beer, in a regular gypsy's kettle, was presided over by Miss Genie Hannagan. Miss Marion Safford and Miss Clara Woodward were in charge of the cake department. Mrs. Hannagan served out the ice cream which was served by the Misses Dora Waring, Helen Walter, Mildred Everett and Blanche Heideloff. Miss Maud Emmons was the flower girl, and Frank Emmons looked after the grab bag. Orville Waring and Herbert Cathcart took tickets at the door.

The net profits were $21.

SHE WOULD NOT BUDGE

Efforts To Pull Defender Off Her Cradle.

Hawsers Parted, and the Attempt Abandoned Until To-day — The Boat in No Danger, as Divers Report That She Is Resting Easy in the Cradle.

Providence, R. I., July 1.—The Davis Coast Wrecking company's tug Right Arm, Captain Davis, tried hard to pull the Defender off the ways yesterday afternoon. Two bights of manilla 12-inch hawser were taken out on the tug's stern and rove singly through an endless strap attached to the cradle. The Right Arm had two anchors ahead fifty fathoms, and with her steam windless and propellor she began to work.

The Hawser Parted.

The engines had not been going a great while before the 12-inch hawser snapped off short in two places. The anchors, which weighed 6,000 pounds apiece, were being hove home, when one of the 8-inch hemp cables parted without moving the Defender the least bit. The job was then given up until to-day, when another new 12-inch hawser will be brought into use.

Resting in the Cradle Safely.

Captain Davis said that his diver, Bradley, had been down with the diver, Duncan, but could not see anything the matter, as the boat was on the cradle all right. Captain Davis told the reporter that she can be gotten off the ways just as well at low water as at high, as she has no bouyancy whatever in her present position, and therefore no displacement. She rests in the cradle just as safely as if she were in the shops without any strain.

BUCHANAN'S CASE.

The Attorney General Refuses To Instruct Warden Sage To Go Ahead.

Sing Sing, July 1.—The electrocution of Dr. Buchanan, which Warden Sage expected to have carried out this morning, is giving the officials an unusual amount of worry. Warden Sage considers his position one of great perplexity, and the action of the attorney general has angered him. The warden has sent several messengers to Albany in the past two days with the original papers of appeal to the United States supreme court, served on him by Buchanan's lawyers, but they returned without any written opinion from the law department. Last night the attorney-general was at his home in Syracuse and Warden Sage sent him the following dispatch: "I decline to act without direction from you, either write or telegraph." The attorney-general replied: "I do not think the last proceedings operate as a stay. I have no further advice to give."

VISIT TO CORNELL BOYS.

What the Ithaca Athletes Are Doing at Henley.

Henley-on-Thames, July 1.—A representative of the United Press visited this place Sunday for the purpose of seeing the crews that are to take part in the coming rowing regatta. He found the river rather lower than usual, owning to the light rainfall of late, but the reaches from Kingston upward were as green and as beautiful as ever. The Canadian oarsmen complain of the heat.

In the Pink of Condition.

The Cornell crew are in the pink of condition, and henceforth will only seek to maintain all that hard work has done for them. They now practice spurts and starts. They have received many social invitations, but their training precludes their acceptance.

Entertainment for the Ithaca Boys.

The Ithaca boys recently visited the Leander, Cadas, Cambridge and other clubs. Some of the members of the Cornell Glee club visited Henley yesterday. They will attend the regatta, and will probably give a concert here. The Cornell crew have accepted the invitation of Guy Nickalls to dine with him and stay over night at his house after the race. The London Sports club, of which Mr. McCalmont is president, is also anxious to entertain the American oarsmen, but no date has yet been fixed for their entertainment.

To Test Cornell Strength.

Eton college has entered a crew in the race for the grand challenge cup. This college has never competed before. It is understood that the object in entering a crew this year is to try the strength of the Cornell crew. The entries though fewer this year than they were in 1894 represent a better class of oarsmen.

Pistol Shot the Starting Signal.

The start will be made in the coming regatta on the firing of a pistol instead of electric bells as heretofore. The electric plant has been struck by lightning and its usefulness destroyed.

HONORED BY THE QUEEN.

Decorations Conferred on the Retirement of the Rosebery Government.

London, July 1.—The list of honors conferred by the queen on the occasion of the retirement of the Rosebery government has been published. Lord Houghton, the retiring lord lieutenant of Ireland, and Lord Carrington, the retiring lord chamberlain, become earls. The following are created barons: Sir Henry Brougham Loch, recently governor of Cape Colony; the Right Hon. Herbert Gardner, M. P., the retiring president of the board of agriculture; Sydney James Stern, M. P., and James Williamson, M. P. The baronets include the lord mayor of London and Mr. Leyland, an ex-M. P. The Right Hon. Henry Fowler, secretary of state for India in Lord Rosebery's cabinet, is made a knight grand commander of the order of the star of India; the Right Hon. H. Campbell-Bannerman, the retiring secretary of state for war, a knight grand cross of the order of the bath, and Mr. Giffen, a knight commander of the same order.

BROKE HIS NECK.

A Boy Falls Three Feet and Is Killed.

Springfield, Mass., July 1.—Arthur Collins, aged 16, son of William Collins of this city, was instantly killed by a fall from the Armor street bridge, this city, last evening. He was standing on the guard rail of the bridge and reached out his hand to touch one of the telegraph wires that ran over head. The shock was greater than he anticipated and fell over backwards, striking on the back of his head and breaking his neck in two places. The fall was only about three feet.

MRS. LEASE ON A BIKE.

She Causes a Sensation by Appearing in a Syrian Costume.

Wichita, Kan., July 1.—Something of a sensation was caused in this city yesterday by Mrs. Mary Lease appearing in a bicycle costume and elaborately dressed in a Syrian costume, including large trousers buckled. In an interview she said she abominated bloomers. She says the Syrian costume is the proper thing. Bicycle riding, she says, is the next thing to having wings.

To Consider Yale's Reply.

New Haven, Conn., July 1.—Sherman Day, president of the Yale Track Athletic association, left this morning for New York city. He will confer with Captain Sheldon of the Yale track team, ex-Captain Sherill and McLane Van Ingen, relative to the reply of Yale to the English challenge. Yale's acceptance will suggest that the winner of the Oxford-Cambridge games come to this country in September and meet Yale.

Completion of a Big Bridge.

Jeffersonville, Ind., July 1.—Three hundred expert track layers yesterday completed the connections and laid the track on the new Big Four bridge between here and Louisville. The work was begun November 15, 1889. The contract provided the bridge should be ready for a train to cross it by July 1, 1895. The bridge cost $2,000,000 and not less than one hundred lives.

Favors an Official Organ.

St. Paul, July 1.—Secretary M. J. Dowling of the Republican National league believes that a weekly newspaper, to be known as the official organ of the league, would greatly strengthen the organization and has given his approval and support to the Republican League Leader which is to be started in New York in October by Sam A. Phillips.

Will Ignore Lord Wolseley.

London, July 1.—The Chronicle says to-day that it is rumored that the Marquis of Lansdowne, the new secretary of state for war, intends to make General Lord Roberts commander-in-chief of the army, ignoring field marshal Lord Wolseley, whom Mr. Campbell-Bannerman, the late war minister, intended should have the position.

Seaman Jury Fail To Agree.

Detroit, Mich., July 1.—The jury in the Seaman murder trial were unable to agree and were discharged. Dr. Seaman was taken back to jail. His second trial will begin before a new jury this morning.

A LITTLE GIRL STOLEN

Taken from a Bed in Which Three Were Sleeping.

Afterwards Deserted by Her Abductor in a Graveyard—Mother, Niece and Sister Chloroformed—The Child's Absence Not Discovered Until After She Had Been Found.

Chatham, N. Y., July 1.—The 3-year-old daughter of Mrs. George Taafe, a widow, was abducted from her bed soon after midnight Saturday night by an unknown person who had gained entrance to the bedroom, which was on the second floor, by means of a ladder which had been placed outside a window. Mrs. Taafe, her two children and a niece, all occupying the same bed, were all chloroformed, and the abducted child was literally taken from her mother's arms.

Abandoned in a Graveyard.

The abductor subsequently abandoned the child, unclothed except for her night clothes, in a neighboring cemetery, where she was found at about 1 o'clock in the morning. Mrs. Taafe did not discover the child's absence till a messenger called her up to learn whether the child was missing. Possibly the abduction was undertaken with a view to securing a ransom. No motive for the deed is known.

A PARCEL OF DEATH.

Infernal Machine Received by the Berlin Authorities.

Berlin, July 1.—A wooden case weighing twenty-five pounds arrived Saturday night at the parcel office in Oranienburger-strasse, this city, from Euerstenwald. The case was addressed to the chief executive of police, Colonel Krause. The sender had given the name of Thomas. A liquid trickling from the bottom of the case aroused the suspicions of the officials. The bottom was loosened when it was discovered that the liquid was benzine. The police were summoned and they found that the case contained five liters of benzine in seven bottles joined together with lint and connected with an alarm clock set at 10:30. There was also in the case a five chambered loaded revolver, the trigger of which was connected by a cord with the lid of the case and the clock. Thus, at half past ten o'clock, or upon removing the lid, there would have been an explosion. The police are searching for the sender of the infernal machine.

GASOLINE LAUNCH ACCIDENT.

A Party Forced To Jump Into the Water from a Burning Boat.

Adrian, Mich., July 1.—Albert Houghtby, his brother John, and wife, John Lane, his sisters Johnnie and Annabel and Miss Emma Schults of Manchester were out in a launch Saturday evening on the river Raisin when the gasoline used for fuel took fire. The occupants sprang into the water. Lightened so suddenly of its load forward, the engine and boiler in the stern brought it under water and it sank. The accident happened near the river bridge, where a number of people were fishing. By reaching fish poles to those in the water some were drawn out and with the help of a boat which chanced to be near, the others were soon brought to shore.

CONSULTED A CLAIRVOYANT.

Fuller Says He Was Duped Into Buying Worthless Land.

Kansas City, Mo., July 1.—George P. Fuller, of Kalamazoo, Mich., has asked the United States circuit court to release him from a contract involving $47,550 with which he purchased land in Barton county, Missouri, in 1892. The land was owned by Augustus De Lissa. Fuller consulted a clairvoyant, who pretended to find that the land in question was rich in deposits of gold and other valuable minerals. It proved to be nearly valueless. Fuller now claims De Lissa and the clairvoyant conspired to defraud him.

Suicide of Mlle. Lamont.

New York, July 1.—Mrs. Charles Walcott, aged 22 years, an ex-professional aeronaut who was known to the public as Mademoiselle Nellie Lamont, took a dose of morphine in her room in the boarding house on East 14th street yesterday afternoon and died without regaining consciousness in Bellevue hospital four hours later. About a year ago she met with an accident which left her a cripple for life.

An Overdue Steamer Arrives.

Port Townsend, Wash., July 1.—The steamer Chehalis which was supposed to be lost on the way down from Sitka to Juneau to this port arrived Saturday night ten days overdue. The lateness of her arrival was caused by the bad weather forcing her to seek shelter in nearly every port on the way down.

Preparing for Durrant's Trial.

San Francisco, July 1.—The police are giving considerable time to the preparation of the Durrant murder cases for trial. The intimation is given out that the detectives are holding a great deal of important evidence in the background, intending to overwhelm the defense with the unexpected at the trial.

Fatally Stabbed.

WORKING GIRLS.

WILLING, ABLE, AND AMBITIOUS,

But Often Held Back by an Illness They do not Understand.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

A young and intelligent working-girl of Brooklyn, N.Y., graphically pictures the working-girl's life.

Day in and day out, month after month, she toils. She is the bread-winner of the family, and must work that others may live. Rain or shine, warm or cold, she must get to her place of employment sharp on time. With the sunshine and gladness all crushed out of her life, she goes on until she falls.

Oh! this pictures only one of thousands. Some work in cramped positions, but the great majority of working girls, so to speak, live on their feet.

Among the latter the symptoms of female diseases are early manifested by weak and aching backs, pains in the lower limbs and lower part of the stomach. The "monthly period" is irregular: with some profuse, with others a cessation. The sure symptom, leucorrhœa, is present, and with faintness, weakness, loss of appetite and sleep. She may be sure that a womb trouble assails her. She knows not where to go for aid.

Miss Mary Smylie, of 2078 Susquehanna Avenue, Kensington, Philadelphia, Pa., urges her fellow working-girls to have faith in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She says: "I am a working-girl, and must stand eleven hours every day. I have suffered terribly from painful menstruation and kidney trouble; and my head was so dizzy I could hardly see. I began to take your Lydia Pinkham's Compound some time ago. It was highly recommended to me by a friend. Now I feel like a different girl: no more aches and pains. I am praising it to every one. Our Druggist sells lots of it.

MYSTERIOUS SCHOONER

Cuban Vessel Held at Key West, Fla.

She Arrived Without Papers and Her Actions Cause Suspicion—Tried To Run Away After Seizure. Great Excitement Among the Cuban Residents.

Jacksonville, Fla., July 1.—A cablegram from Key West, Fla., says: Considerable excitement was created in this city yesterday afternoon by the arrival in port of the British schooner Attic, from Nassau, without papers, having left Nassau on June 19. Her captain is a Spaniard by the name of Arteaga, and the crew is composed of Cubans. She also has five Cuban passengers. The captain claims to own the schooner, and is bound for Tampa. Being short of provisions, he put into this port. On June 28 she put into Cocoanut Grove, looking for a pilot.

Attached by Customs Officers.

The customs authorities have attached her, and an inspector has been detailed to duty on board. Shortly after having been boarded by the officials, she weighed anchor, and, it is believed, intended leaving the port. The revenue cutter McLane, lying at the government dock at the time, sent a boat off to the schooner with orders to come to an anchor, which she readily complied with.

Spanish Warship Sighted.

The shore was crowded with Cubans, as it is reported that many of those on board are known in this city. It is also reported to be part of the expedition that left here with Holoff. Just at sun down a steamer was sighted going up the gulf and by some was reported to be a Spanish warship.

REPORTED CAPTURE OF MACEO

No Confirmation of the News Received at Washington.

Washington, July 1.—It is now three days since the report of the capture of the insurgent general Maceo was first made public and no one in Washington, not even the Spanish minister, is able to confirm the story. It is looked upon in diplomatic quarters as erroneous. Minister de Lome himself says that had there been any truth in the report he would have been advised of it before this. The report of the capture of this insurgent general followed closely upon the heels of the announcement that the Spanish cortes contemplated the issuance of a budget of considerable proportion of the war with Cuba. The rumored capture of Maceo tended to "boom" the proposed financial scheme.

Operations To Begin in Earnest.

Latest advices from Spain indicate that the home government intend dealing with the insurrection in Cuba with an iron hand as soon as the rainy season is at an end. That will be early in September. Just now the conditions prevent active military operations. All the rivulets are now swollen streams that cannot be forded. It is impossible to chase those in retreat or give battle to those who stand their ground and no effort will be made to attack the insurgents seriously until the weather changes.

More Vessels Needed.

Arrangements are being made for a perfect patrol of the island and for the capture of any filibustering expedition that may attempt to land. With the limited number of vessels now at the disposal of Gen. Campos it has been impossible for him to keep up an effective patrol. His present force is small, although a number of his ships are gunboats of light draft that enables them to run in and out of the arms of the sea and the rivers where unwelcome craft seek a landing. This is the arm of his service that is to be materially strengthened.

The Boats Now in Service.

The navy now on duty in Cuban waters consist of the second-class cruiser Reina Mercedes, the Barcaiztegui, 1,800 tons; the Jorge Juan, 1,800 tons; Infanta Isabel, 1,200 tons; Conde Venadito, 1,200 tons; Nueva Espana and Filipinas, between 600 and 700 tons; the Galicia, Yanez Pinson, Martin Pinson, Magallenes and Concha, each 500 tons, and the Alcedo of 300 tons.

Warships To Be Sent from Spain.

There will soon be started to Cuba the second-class cruiser, Isabel II. and the gunboat Marques de Molins. Six small gunboats built at Cadiz will be ready to send to the island by the end of July. A commission composed of Admiral Cervera and Captains Forello and Villamil has been appointed to purchase eighteen gunboats and these will be secured in England at a cost of $1,290,000.

25,000 More Troops in Waiting.

The 600,000,000 pesetas, equivalent in American money to $120,000,000 voted by the Cortes as an emergency fund for the suppression of the insurrection in Cuba, is at the command of the government and 25,000 men are ready to embark as soon as Gen. Campos gives the word. It is confidently expected, therefore, that soon as the rainy season ends the combined land and sea forces will be pushed forward and some decisive engagements with the insurgents may result.

Berlin Newspaper Scandal.

Berlin, July 1.—The long pending scandal connected with Baron von Hammerstein's management of the Kreuz Zeitung, newspaper, has ended in his resignation from the paper. Dr. Kropatschek, a member of the Reichstag, has been appointed director of the Kreuz Zeitung to succeed him.

Four Americans Drowned.

Mazatlan, Mexico, July 1.—Four Americans, among them Howard Trevins, a wealthy manufacturer of California, were drowned off the coast sixty miles north of here last Wednesday. They were making a pleasure cruise in a sailing vessel when it capsized.

Resumed on Advanced Wages.

Tonawanda, N. Y., July 1.—Work was resumed at the Ironton Iron works this morning with an advanced schedule of wages. The works have been shut down for three or four weeks.

Orangemen Fight Expected.

Tacoma, Wash., July 1.—Indications point to an old-fashioned Orangemen fight on the 4th of July.

DRY SUNDAY IN NEW YORK.

Only a Few Places Where Even the Side Doors Were Open.

New York, July 1.—Yesterday was a particularly "dry" Sunday in this city. The saloonkeepers generally kept their places closed. In a few instances the side doors were open, but in order to gain admittance a person had to be very well known to the sentinels on duty. There had been a number of private tips circulated Saturday night to the talent, and some of these places that were conspicuously closed had private bars rigged up in the back or on the floor above, where thirsty mortals imbibed their fill.

Tenderloin Closed Tight.

The resorts in the famous Tenderloin were closed as tight as a drum, and in some of the hotels a drink could only be obtained by those who were well known. A party of gentlemen, who were more or less thirsty after Saturday night's jollification, after vainly trying several schemes to obtain a morning cocktail, took a room in a hotel and had their liquid refreshments sent up to their room. The result of the strict enforcement of the excise laws, according to some who are well posted, will be the introduction into this city of the "speak easy," so well known in other cities where the excise laws are even more stringent than they are here. These places are without license of any kind, and the owners claim they are justified in opening them, as the authorities, by the strict enforcement of the Sunday laws, have placed a premium on this kind of traffic.

COL. BOB STRONG DEAD.

For Thirty Years He Was the Hangman of the District of Columbia.

Washington, July 1.—Robert Strong, familiarly known as Col. Bob Strong, who executed Guiteau, the assassin of President Garfield, died in this city Saturday of infirmities, incident to old age, being close upon his 80th year. He had been an officer of the district jail nearly thirty years and during that period executed eighteen criminals, the last one only a year ago, when his nerves seemed as steady as if not strained by the wear and tear of seventy-nine years of life. He was born in Albany, N. Y., and in early life went for a sailor, and the knowledge he thus acquired of ropes and knots led to his selection as the district hangman. Before settling in Washington he went out to California with the forty-niners and assisted in building the old San Francisco mint. He afterwards took a hand in building the house wing of the capitol. Notwithstanding the grim nature of his professional duties he was a jovial, kind-hearted man in private life.

SHE IS A WORTHY BOAT.

The Olympia Proves To Be a Valuable Addition to the Navy.

San Francisco, July 1.—The cruiser Olympia, on a trial trip, has demonstrated beyond all question that she is one of the worthiest of her class in the fleet of white fighters comprising the United States navy. An official trial was called for by the government, such as is always the case with new vessels entering the navy. It was to be a trial, and was, for that matter, conducted exclusively by government officials, and was to comprise a thorough test of everything pointing to the workings of a modern war cruiser, from the firing of immense bow-chasers down to cutting pigeon wings with a limited space in mid-ocean.

TO BE CANCELLED BY HAND.

Use of Postage Stamping Machines Will Be Discontinued.

New Haven, Conn., July 1.—Postmaster Beach has received a telegram from assistant Postmaster-General Jones, ordering him to cease the use of cancelling machines in the New Have office, and to employ clerks to cancel stamps by hand. It is understood that this order is due to a conflict between the government and the owners of the machine over the question of rent. The abandonment of machines here will necessitate the employment of two extra clerks.

Baseball Players Escape from Police.

Lincoln, Neb., July 1.—The Western association ball game between Lincoln and Quincy, which was to have been played at Cortland yesterday, was stopped before the finish by the police, who declared the players under arrest. Each player ran for the train, and it pulled out for Lincoln with all on board. Five innings were played.

A Body Found in a Lake.

Meadville, Pa., July 1.—The body of a man was found yesterday in Sugar lake, about ten miles from this city. Attached to one arm was a heavy piece of gas pipe and his hat was wired to his head. There is nothing to show whether it is a case of suicide or murder and his identity has not yet been learned.

Big Bicycle Race.

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 1.—The bicycle race between John S. Johnson, Walter Sanger and Harry Tyler will take place here to-morrow at the Comstock park track in conjunction with the Michigan Big Four Driving circuit. The race is for $1,000, winner to take all.

KIEL FETES SCANDAL

Flagrant Misuse of Certain Free Passes Charged.

A Number of Members of the Reichstag and Press To Be Prosecuted for Entertaining Their Friends at the Expense of the Government. Jew-Baiter Ahlwardt Accused.

Berlin, July 1.—The imperial treasury authorities are about to begin legal proceedings against certain members of the reichstag and members of the press for their flagrant misuse of the free passes to the canal fetes with which they were furnished under specific restrictions. Each member of the reichstag had the privilege of taking with him one personal attendant and each member of the press was permitted to have with him one assistant.

Palmed Off Personal Friends.

Instead of complying with this regulation many of them palmed off their personal friends as "personal attendants" and "assistants," and had them boarded and lodged at the expenses of the treasury. It is alleged that Herr Zimmermann, a member of the reichstag and editor of the Deutsche Wacht, published in Dresden, brought with him as a "personal attendant" Louis Kohler, an enormously wealthy man and the owner of the famous Schiller restaurant in Dresden.

Ahlwardt Accused.

Rector Ahlwardt, the Jew-baiter, is accused of having taken with him as his "assistant" the wealthy hotel keeper, Bodek, who is the financial backer of Ahlwardt's paper, the Volksrecht. The Kölnische Volkszeitung denounces these acts as public scandals, the perpetrators of which, it declares, ought to be punished with the utmost severity permitted by law.

ALL WERE MUTILATED.

Feared That It Will Be Impossible To Identify Da Gama's Remains.

New York, July 1.—The Herald's special cable from Buenos Ayres says: The friends of the late Admiral Da Gama in this city say that they fear it will be impossible to identify the remains of the dead rebel leader, owing to the wholesale mutilation of bodies by the Brazilian troops after the battle near Santa Ana.

To Be Given Honorable Burial.

President Moraes has ordered Governor Castilho, of the province of Rio Grande do Sul, to make a search of the battlefield for the bodies of the several naval officers who fell in the fight and give them honorable burial. This may be somewhat difficult on account of the butchery indulged in after the fight.

TRAGEDY IN A SUNDAY SCHOOL.

A Woman 35 Years Old Commits Suicide After the Services.

Richmond, Va., July 1.—A sad and startling tragedy occurred here yesterday afternoon. While the last hymn of the service, "Awake My Soul, Stretch Every Nerve," was being sung at the Second Presbyterian church, a sharp report was heard as if coming from the rear of the building. Two of the church officers went out and in the infant class room found Miss Minnie Wilkinson, a lady about 35 years of age, stretched dead upon the floor. She had shot herself through the heart with a pistol. Miss Wilkinson was an earnest worker in the church and was greatly beloved by the congregation. Recently she had been suffering from melancholy and had told friends that she did not wish to live.

TO ELEVATE THE HUMAN RACE.

A Remarkable Religious Organization Chartered in Kansas.

Topeka, Kas., July 1.—A remarkable charter was granted Saturday by the secretary of state to the American Co-operative Evangelical association of Kanaopolis. The paramount object of this association is the speedy elevation of the human race by education in the grace of God and the highest type of manhood and womanhood. It is the heartfelt and deep-seated belief of the members of the association that people cannot be good without God and to that end the association is formed to send out evangelists, singers and musicians to secure the abolition of every thing wicked.

Attempts To Burn Mills.

Willimantic, Conn., July 1.—Two attempts have been made to burn the large mills of the Willimantic Linen company. The mills were flooded by water. Loss, $1,000.

When you shut your closes door, lock it with a promise.—Ram's Horn.

The Newark Advertiser says that Assemblyman Codding wants a third term in the Legislature, and that if he gets it he will make a contest for the speakership if the Republicans are on top.

The Metuchen Courier is anxious to know when the trolley line will be built from Plainfield through Metuchen to New Brunswick; Perth Amboy, Rahway and Woodbridge. Good things come slow.

It is said that the difference between the tariff in the Wilson and in the McKinley acts on imported firecrackers means a loss of a half million dollars to the government. But the consequent jubilancy of the patriotic youth and the noise incident thereto are ample recompense for all such loss.

The power-of-removal bill passed by the New York Legislature for the benefit of Mayor Strong ceased to become operative last Saturday. The passage of such laws as the removal bill, in the view of popular suffrage at the ballot box, is one of the curious anomalies of American government in 1895.

In the City Court.

Two cases came up before Judge Coddington at the city court, this morning. George Lewis was charged by Maria Station with disorderly conduct and the calling of vile names. He pleaded guilty, but claimed extenuating circumstances. Lawyer George W. DeMeza acted as his counsel. Sentence was suspended. Elizabeth O'Hara charged Mary McGrath with abusive language, and brought forward several witnesses to prove the charge. Judge Coddington bound her over for $200 to keep the peace for one year.

Barnes, was happily surprised Saturday night, the occasion being the thirteenth anniversary of his birthday, and the members of Grace church choir, of which he is a member, together with P. ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.

Charles Keiderling Receives a Discharge of Lead in His Leg.

Charles Keiderling, a barber in the employ of George Richter on Somerset street, and living at 74 Wilson avenue, went out for a stroll yesterday afternoon toward the mountains with his cousin George Rilling. The latter had a 32-calibre revolver which he took along. They had not gone very far when the revolver went off. The ball entered Keiderling's right leg above the knee cap. He managed to walk home, when Dr. Adams was sent for. He probed two hours for the bullet, but was unsuccessful. He called again today, but thought best to wait until tomorrow, when he will again try to find the piece of lead. Otherwise Mr. Keiderling is doing very well and is resting quietly.

The July Forum.

The Forum for July has an uncommonly interesting table of contents. One of its notable articles is by Dr. Max Nordau, the alienist and author of "Degeration," who makes his first appearance in an American periodical with an article in The Forum, entitled "Society's Protection Against Degenerates," showing to what extent the degenerate in art and literature degrades society, and the best method by which society may defend itself against them. The article is in effect a supplement to "Degeneration." Two important financial articles are "Coin's Food for the Gullible," in which Prof. J. Laurence Laughlin, of Chicago university, relentlessly exposes the fallacies and misrepresentations in "Coin's Financial School;" the other article is by William Salomon, a prominent banker of New York, on "Sound Currency the Dominant Political Issue." He declares sound money to be the dominant issue in the coming campaign, and urges all who are able to throw any light on the intricate financial problem to do so; and he predicts that that political party which shall make sound money its platform will win the next Presidential election.

At Hymen's Altar.

Wednesday, at 5 p. m. Mr Ernest Barrett of Plainfield and Miss Delia Casey were united in the bonds of wedlock, in St. Francis' church, by the Rev. Father Freeman. There was a very large attendance of deeply interested spectators. The charming bride was attired in a lovely white silk dress, and carried a bouquet of bridal roses. The bride's maid, Miss Mary Tilford, wore an exquisite dress of pale green silk. Mr. David Power was best man. There were four ushers, namely: Messrs. James Power, John Power, T. Barrett, and L. Townley. At the close of the ceremony a splendid reception was given at the residence of the bride's mother. The happy couple were the gratified recipients of many hearty wishes for their future happiness. They left on the 7:53 east bound train for Jersey City whence they took a late train for Washington D. C. Mr. Barrett is a very superior young man. Mr. David Power took charge of the church decorations which were very tasteful. Mrs. Townley discoursed appropriate organ music before and at the close of the ceremony.—Metuchen Courier, Patriotic Boy, Dangerous Gun.

Last June Dick Crawford brought his twelve-months-old child, suffering from infantile diarrhœa, to me. It had been weaned at four months old and had always been sickly. I gave it the usual treatment in such cases but without benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born, or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25 cent size had been used a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny constitution disappeared, and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by this remedy. J. T. Marlow, M. D., Tamaroa, Ill. GEN. LEE'S AMNESTY.

His Application to President Johnson the Result of Patriotic Motives.

Thirty years ago this month, General Robert Edward Lee, the great soldier of the Confederacy, never greater than in the hour of the failure of his cause, wrote to President Johnson a letter applying for the benefits of amnesty and restoration to his civil rights as a citizen of the United States.

Johnson's proclamation of general amnesty had been issued on May 29. Sixteen classes of persons were specifically excluded.

Lee was excluded not only because he was a West Pointer and had been a military officer of the Confederate Government ranking higher than Colonel, but also because he belonged to the thirteenth class excepted, namely, those persons who had voluntarily participated in the rebellion, and the value of whose taxable property was over $20,000. The amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865, provided, however, that special application for pardon might be made by any person belonging to the classes excepted; and Gen. Lee therefore wrote the subjoined letter:

"Richmond, Va., June 13, 1865.
"His Exc'y, Andrew Johnson,
"President of the United States.

"Sir: Being excluded from the provisions of amnesty contained in the proclamation of the 29 ult., I hereby apply for the benefits and full restoration of all rights and privileges extended to those included in its terms.

"I graduated from the Military Academy at West Point in June, 1829; resigned from the United States Army, April, 1861; and was a General in the Confederate Army; and included in the surrender of the Army of N. Va., April 9, 1865.

"I have the honor to be, Very respectfully, Your obedient servant,
(Signed) "R. E. LEE."

The copy we have of this document is attested by Gen. George Washington Custis Lee, the eldest son of the great Confederate Commander; and Gen. G. W. C. Lee adds this highly interesting historical note concerning his father's motives in making so promptly an application to President Johnson for amnesty:

"When Gen. Lee requested me to make a copy of this letter to President Johnson, he remarked: It was but right for him to set an example of making formal submission to the Civil Authorities; and that he thought, by so doing, he might possibly be in a better position to be of use to the Confederates who were not protected by military paroles; especially Mr. Davis.

"G. W. C. LEE."

In laying to-day before our readers and the general public Gen. Robert E. Lee's application for a pardon, and his own declaration of the motives prompting him to one of the most heroic acts of a life full of heroism, The Sun feels that it is adding lustre to a noble fame which is constantly growing as the years pass, and which is justly appreciated and generously prized in the North as well as in the South.—New York Sun.

WAGES THE WORLD OVER.

Enormous Variations from State to State and Country to Country.

It is popularly suppose that the immutable law of supply and demand operating throughout a country makes the wages for the same labor uniform in every part of it, as a dearth of labor in any one place cannot be of long duration while men are employed elsewhere. A recent supplementary bulletin of the manufactures of the United States, however, shows this general view to be false.

In Colorado the average yearly earnings of an employe of a manufacturing company was $720; in Montana, $722; in Nevada, $718, and in Wyoming, $768. In the States where colored labor is abundant the total average earnings are con- is $376; in Mississippi, $310; in North Carolina, $216; in Georgia $307, and in South Carolina, $267. In New York the average is $550; in Pennsylvania, $492; in Ohio, $479; and in Massachusetts, $494.

When it is considered to what extent the female and child labor enters into the factory operations in New York the figures are suprisingly high. The total wages paid in New York manufacturing enterprises amount in ordinary years to $500,000,000.

England stands at the head in Europe as the best market for labor. Scotland and France are a little behind her. Then there is a heavy drop until Austria, the Netherlands, and Belgium are reached; the scale goes still lower in Germany where the rate is the same as in Ireland. Spain, Russia, Sweden and Italy follow here in the order given. According to the table of Bodio, an Italian authority, glassblowers are the best paid mechanics in Italy, and paper makers the poorest. The rate of wages in Italy, low as it is now, was still lower twenty-five years ago. In England the increase in the rate of wages has been about twenty per cent. in twenty-five years. A French bricklayer gets fifty per cent. more wages now than were paid for his work in France forty years ago.

The Mean Thing.

"David," exclaimed Mrs. Fogg, as her lord and master entered the house on a muddy day, "I'd be willing to bet almost anything that you didn't wipe your feet on the mat before you came in here."

"Well, I guess you're about right, Hannah," replied Fogg; "but I did wipe my shoes on it."

And then the aggravating thing laughed like a hyena, just as though he had said somethidg awfully smart.—Boston Transcript.

A horse kicked H. S. Shafer, of the Freemyer House, Middleburg, N. Y., on the knee, which laid him up in bed and caused the knee joint to become stiff. A friend recommended him to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which he did, and in two days was able to be around. Mr. Shafer has recommended it to many others and says it is excellent for any kind of a bruise or sprain. This same remedy is also famous for its cures of rheumatism. Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

FAITHFUL FOR TWENTY-ONE YEARS.

An Indiana Romance that Would Be Hard to Match.

In January, 1875, Lebanon, Ind., was thrown into the wildest excitement, occasioned by the killing of George T. Galt, one of its wealthiest residents. Three years prior to the tragedy John C. Davis was cashier of the First National Bank of Lebanon and a highly respected citizen. He was the father of three girls and upon them he bestowed all his affections, his wife having died a few years before. His greatest desire was that his daughters might each wed a man who was well supplied with this world's goods and of irreproachable character.

When May, the eldest, began receiving the attentions of William Jackson, a young law student, with apparent favor, the father entered strenuous objections and forbade the would-be lover to again call upon his daughter. Unlike the hero of modern romances he accepted the edict of the parent and desisted. With the possible exception of a painful smile and friendly salutation when they chanced to meet in the ordinary walks of life, nothing further passed between them at that time, and about a year afterward May was married to George T. Galt, a widower, who, besides being one of the wealthiest men in Lebanon, was known to a few to be quite a sport. He lived high, drank to excess, and made a specialty of trifling with the affections of women, all of which was unknown to Mr. Davis. Happiness did not reign supreme in the Galt home, and as the husband grew more reckless, Mrs. Galt left him in December, 1874, and began suit for divorce, choosing as her attorney young Jackson, who had in the mean time been admitted to the practice of law. Crazed by jealousy and liquor, Galt accosted Jackson on the street, and in the presence of several persons accused him of being the destroyer of his home. Without a word Jackson drew his pistol and fired four shots in rapid succession. Galt fell to the sidewalk and died in a few moments. Jackson was immediately arrested and charged with murder. Mrs. Galt came to his rescue and spent a large sum of money left her by her husband in securing counsel and otherwise assisting Jackson in defending himself against the charge, but the family of the murdered man vigorously prosecuted him, and he was convicted and given a sentence of 21 years in the penitentiary.

Efforts to obtain a new trial and subsequent petitions for a pardon were unavailing, and Jackson was doomed to serve out his sentence. Immediately after his conviction Mrs. Galt opened a dressmaking establishment in this city and began to live a quiet life, never attending social events, and rejecting the attentions of any one other than a few female acquaintances. Here she lived and worked until last week, when Jackson was released from prison. He telegraphed her of his coming, and for the first time in nineteen years a smile of gladness lit up her face and she appeared to have undergone a great change in her personal appearance.

Jackson arrived Wednesday, and Friday evening was married to Mrs. Galt at the home of the Rev. John Garret, who performed the ceremony which united Mrs. Galt with her first husband, over twenty years ago.

Fredrick W. Bowden, of The Daily Press composing room, is confined to his home on South Second street, with pneumonia.

Sometime ago I was troubled with an attack of rheumatism. I used Chamberlain's Pain Balm and was completely cured. I have since advised many of my friends and customers to try the remedy and all speak highly of it. Simon Goldbaum, San Luis Rey, Cal. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. A FORGETFUL SENATOR.

And the Trouble His Absentmindedness Caused in His Household.

"In matters purely social," remarked a Cabinet officer to a reporter for the Washington Star, "I never like to be quoted, so in what is to follow you may omit my name.

"Last winter one of our best known Senators from one of the Gulf States lying between Louisiana and Florida was at the theater. After the performance, he, with a friend, repaired to a German restaurant to be refreshed.

"For the first time in his long and well spent life he encountered that powerful confection known as Limburger cheese. He was delighted with it as with a revelation in gastronomy. He craved of the owner of the hostelry a specimen of the cheese that he might convey it to his household, there to be exhibited and taught to them as a lesson in the palatable, and all to the end that large quantities of the cheese might be purchased and consumed by them. The good natured restaurateur gave the statesman an entire cheese, wrapped in the usual tinfoil which is its market overcoat.

"The Senator blithely received the cheese and stowed it away in the stern sheets of his dress suit. Then he went home, and hanging his costume in the wardrobe, went to bed.

"In the morning, with the approacing cares of a tariff day overshadowing any memory of that Limburger, he pulled on his every day suit and went down to the Senate. When he sought his home again at 6 p. m., he found doors and windows open, while his family went about in furs and similar defenses against the cold.

"There were artisans about who had taken up flooring boards, sawed into the wainscot and torn ragged holes in the frescoes over his head. The house looked as if some plumber who loved his art had been looking for a leak.

"'What's the trouble here?' demanded the Senator with a strain of irritation in his tone.'

"'There's a dead mouse in the wall or floor somewhere,' said his wife from out her sealskins. 'We've got to find it and get rid of it. We can't live in the house.'

"Then the statesman remembered the faithful Limburger lurking in his dress coat. It was removed from office, and a colored person was employed to carry it to leeward of the Senator's household as far as he could go for two bits."

HE WAS WILLING.

Time Had Tempered His Grief for His Lamented Partner.

There was an old man with a big and bulky satchel at his feet and a weed on his hat leaning against the Griswold street front of the Detroit post office the other day, when a vag who had been hanging around for the right sort of man to appear, approached him and said:

"I see that the grim destroyer has invaded your hearthstone."

"The which?" asked the old man.

"The grim destroyer—the angel of death. I take it your wife has gone hence."

"Yes, gone hence."

"Allow me to extend my heartfelt sympathies.

"Yes, you kin extend 'em."

"You must be lonely."

"Yes, purty lonely."

"I have lost the partner of my own bosom, and I know how it feels. You seem to be all alone in this great world?"

"Yes, that's the feelin'."

"Life appears to be a desert to you?"

"Yes, reg'lar desert, with sand a foot deep."

"But in your loneliness—in the seeming emptiness of your life—has it not occurred to you that you could do something to add to the happiness of your fellow man?"

"Yes, it has."

"And will you do it?"

"I will. It's 'leven months now since my wife was taken away, and if you'll pint me out a woman about forty years old who wants to gets married I'll pop the question so gaul-durned quick that it will make her heels lift up. You betcher life I want to do sunthin' fur my feller man, and I'm waiting right here to get another sight of a woman whom I've follered fur three miles and winked at over a dozen times."

Bicycles Cutting Railroad Earnings.

The passenger earnings of many roads are not only being cut into locally by the trolley lines, but by the bicycles. Since the warmer weather set in people living out a few miles from their business places who have been patronizing suburban trains now ride the bicycle. Where there are cities but a few miles apart the passenger men say that between the electric roads and the bicycle competition their local earnings are showing a marked decrease.

A passenger official who had just returned from Boston states that within a radius of eight to ten miles hundreds come in on bicycles on pleasant mornings and return in the evening in the same manner, and hundreds more find the electric cars quite an attraction, so that altogether the Boston steam roads are losing quite heavily on this particular portion of their income.

He say that Boston passenger men told him that trains that were formerly crowded are now fairly well filled, and in some instances a number of trains run for surbuban business have been taken off and those kept on are hauling fewer coaches.—Indianapolis Journal.

Here is a sentence from the new book on labor and the money power which Mary E. Lease is writing: "Rolling back the dark and tear stained curtains of the world's history, and looking down the long vista of years to connect the past with the present, it becomes manifest that two great agents or factors have ever controlled and robbed the hive of labor. These two factors have been the titled nobility or aristocracy of royalty and the aristocracy of wealth or the power of gold."

QUEEN ONLY IN NAME

THE GOOD VICTORIA LIVES MOSTLY IN SECLUSION.

She is Seventy-six and the Climate of England is Conducive to Rheumatic Pains. That the Prince of Wales May Become Regent is a Future Possibility.

For many years Victoria has ceased to be more than a name and a memory to the great mass of her people. Since the death of her beloved friend and servant, Beaconsfield, she has taken little or no interest in public affairs. The jubilee year, indeed, did rouse her to some little social activity, and with it there came something like a renaissance of the old royalist spirit in Great Britain. But that was soon followed by even closer seclusion and a still further weakening of the thread that binds the personality of the sovereign to the lives of the people.

To-day the Queen is almost an invalid. Her rheumatism has grown upon her to such a degree as to render a residence in the wet, foggy and changeable climate of England extremely undesirable. She longs constantly for Italy, it is said, where she has passed so many months of peace and comfort of late years. She cannot walk at all except with the support of a cane and an attendant, and in England she cannot venture out during the late autumn, the winter and the spring months.

This confinement is extremely wearisome and depressing to the Queen. She no longer attempts to keep in touch with the affairs of state. She does not even dictate the responses to personal letters, which until recently she has always done. Her secretaries write all her letters for her, except those to her immediate family, which are written by Princess Beatrice.

Loved and revered in her own immediate circle, gentle and considerate always to those about her, Victoria has drifted apart from the ideas, the aspirations and endeavors of her people and practically belongs to a past generation. The political and social movements that are dominant forces in the England of to-day neither disturb nor interest her. Her days are given up to her family and to the three delights of an old woman's life—religion, match making and the society of her grandchildren. Her appearances at the royal social functions are now increasingly rare and are made great state occasions.

Yet withal, the abdication of the Queen is extremely improbable. It would be without precedent, and, as far as possible, the English do nothing of this character without precedent. James II. did, indeed, abandon the crown to William of Orange, but from the monarch's point of view it was a case of exile and flight from armed rebellion rather than of abdication. The mad and mischievous old king, George III., yielded the reins of power to the regency of his infamous and worthless son; but that was a case of absolute necessity, and the king was still king in name.

There yet remains in England a peculiar and intense veneration for the monarchy, which an abdication would tend to greatly shock and disturb. Although in the British theory of government the monarchy is purely the creature of Parliament, it is not so in the minds and hearts of the people.

Every foot of land surrounding the home of Queen Victoria is historic. At the foot of the hill lies the village where Shakespeare first met Mistress Davenant and where, the characters of Mistress Page and Mistress Ford, of Justice Shallow and Master Slender, of Fenton and Sweet Anne Page, took shape in the poet's brain. Back of the castle, with its miles of open glade and dense woodland stretches the historic park where Falstaff was burned by the fairies—the hunting ground of many generations of English kings, and still the source of the venison that furnishes the royal table. A few miles below the park the Thames divides at Magna Charta Island, and there you may stand upon the very spot where King John signed the first declaration of independence, and under the very tree which tradition says is a scion of the oak about which the barons were gathered. Across the river from the castle is Eton, the mother of many generations of illustrious Englishmen, her walls scarred with immortal names, carved by boyish hands for centuries—Eton, upon whose playground Wellington testified that he got the training which enabled him to beat Napoleon at last.

Nor is Windsor itself less striking and significant than its surroundings. The great gray towers which have seen many a stubborn siege guard a treasure of surpassing excellence and beauty. From the Waterloo room, with its great battle painting and historic trophies, to the old oak paneled banqueting hall, with the arms of every knight of the Garter, from King Edward's time down to the present, hung upon its walls; from the old bed chambers, with their quaint furniture and their portraits of Stuart, princes and fine court ladies, by Lely and Kneller, to the splendid chapel of St. George, with its noble monuments, Windsor Castle, more than any other spot, except Westminster Abbey, embodies the national spirit of the English people.

Of course, the Queen occupies only a comparatively small portion of the present castle herself. Her private apartments are in a wing, the approaches to which are guarded by soldiers, even when her Majesty is not in the residence.

The Queen seldom enters the state apartments now. When she receives the Prime Minister or any member of the royal family it is in her own room. One of the very few occasions when the grand staircase has been used of recent years was when Gen. Grant and Mrs. Grant visited the Queen at Windsor, and her Majesty received them at the head of the staircase. All presentations now are during the limited season when the Queen is at Buckingham Palace.

THE FATAL KISS.

He hastened his steps along the well-lighted street. A blaze of electric lamps attracted him. He walked mechanically in the direction of the brilliant lights, and found himself presently on the sidewalk gazing absently into the open window of the Oldorf Hotel. A charming oriental reception room, with divans in colored stuffs, met his gaze. It made a richly somber interior, lit with subdued red lamps. No one appeared to be in the gorgeous room. It was an hour when the guests of the great hotel were at the theaters or in the cafe or another part of the house. The room seemed vacant. He was about to idly turn away and return to the theater, when, at another window, he saw something that riveted his gaze. Eleanor Armitage—he was certain he knew that willowy, beautiful English figure (although her back was turned to the window)—stooped and kissed a man, an elderly looking gentleman, who seemed asleep. His bald head was thrown back, in his easy chair and rested on its cushioned head rest. He was a fat, plethoric, ruddy, jolly-looking, round faced Englishman. So this person was the sender of the telegram. So this little old fat beast she could bring herself to kiss. Burnett turned down the corners of his mouth.

She kissed him affectionately, but did not otherwise touch or disturb the fat little Englishman. He saw her glance at her tiny jeweled watch. "Ah, she realizes she must hasten back to the theater and play the part she loves—Camille," he muttered half bitterly. Then he saw her do another odd thing. She had gone half way to the door, then turned back, and going swiftly to the Englishman's side, laid her soft, white little mouchoir over his fat face. Then she quickly left the room, and he watched her, a moment later, coming out of the ladies' entrance of the great hotel, and entering her cab drive quickly away. He looked after her a moment, then entered the hotel, and approached the office at the desk. The clerk was talking to a servant.

"What did Miss Armitage want?" he asked of the boy. The clerk, who knew everybody, had seen her hurriedly enter.

"Dunno, sir. The lady came in, asked for Mr. Lord Somebody—Lord Holton—asked if Mr. Lord Holton had come yet, an' if so I was to fetch 'im. She seemed in a tearin' hurry, the laidy did—yes, sir. An' I said 'yes,' and went ter 'is room, sir; an' he wa'n't in; no, nor anywheres to be found. You know him as come to-night on the Teutonic."

"Did you look in the reception room?"

"Wy, no, sir. She went in there herself, an' w'en she come out she said, 'No matter'—jest like that, 'No matter.'"

Burnett glanced over the register. A recent signature—there may have been half a dozen names below it—indicated that J. P. Holton—Lord Holton, of Birmingham, England, and valet—had arrived and taken suite No. 461. He did not care to interrogate the clerk.

He hurried out into the warm night air, and jumping into a cab directed the driver to take him to his club. Arriving before the spacious club house, he ran in and upstairs to the library in hot haste, and got down the thick volume of Burke's Peerage. What was his relation to his goddess? He would hunt this little round fat Englishman to his very ancestors! Burke's Peerage record read as follows:

Holton (Sir John Philip Besmith)—Lord Holton, Baron of Birmingham County and a Baronet.

Lineage—The family of Holton was seated in Lancaster, afterward Birmingham, as early as 1381. Thomas Holton in 1472 married a Lancashire lady, by whom he had ten sons and three daughters. (Then follow two columns of lineage, then Lord Holton's immediate family.)

James Philip Holton m. Elizabeth, d. of Sir Thomas Few.

B., son, John P., b. 1837.

B., son, Thomas, b. 1839, d. 1867.

B., dau., Elizabeth, b. 1845, d. 1892.

John Philip Besmith married Lady Camilla Barton, 1869.

Issue—John Philip, b. 1871, d. 1884; Henry, b. 1872, d. 1875; Camilla Elizabeth, b. 1873.

Burke's Peerage thus showed that Lord Holton had no son living, hence Eleanor Armitage was either not his daughter, or, another conclusion, Eleanor, if not his daughter, had no brother. He could, in that case, draw the one conclusion—that the "brother" he knew was, must be, her husband. But if, on the contrary, she was not the daughter of Lord Holton, "born in 1873" (which would bring her to about the right age), then what relation did the English peer sustain to her? Was he her uncle? Burke's Peerage record satisfied him that Lord Holton had no brothers or sisters living, but was the only surviving son of a wealthy Birmingham baronet. Who was he, if not her father? And her real name, Camilla Elizabeth, born in 1873?

His knowledge of the world made him shudder and gasp at the possibilities of Lord Holton's relations to the beautiful girl, in case he was not her father. Otherwise, why had she shown such an apparent affection for the queer little Englishman.

Still, clinging to the one thought—her perfect innocence and uprightness of character—the assumption became clearer in his mind that the "brother," Edward Armitage, was, and only could be, her husband and Lord Holton was her own father.

So, he concluded, she was married. And yet, she had allowed him to fall in love with her. How could this be consistent with perfect innocence, perfect honor?

Aye, truly, if she could do this with her beautiful smiling face, what depths of depravity could she not attain? He became gloomy with despair as he hurried down to his cab and drove back to the theater. A man never forgives a woman for deceit in love—his specialty.

THE SECOND ACT.

Entering, he took his seat near the stage before Marguerite Gautier's boudoir, in Paris. Marguerite had just received Armand's letter from Nanine, and was reading it aloud to Count Giray. "Let us both forget that we have known each other, and that, for one instant, we thought ourselves in love." As she read this, Miss Armitage looked up suddenly and caught his glance, as he sat near the stage. Certainly it seemed to Burnett that "she suddenly, strangely, sweetly blushed," and yet, he felt the words, "Let us both forget," to be oddly applicable just then. They contained wisdom. Still, if—if she had begun to love him! A devil leaped in his heart at the thought. Her curious agitation, as her eyes met his over the footlights, was not merely worldly wisdom for him, but it seemed to his lover's sense a confession. As such, it set his heart beating again and drove away his timidity and distrust, and he felt he loved her madly, and fell into the spell of her charm and her marvelously sympathetic acting. Yes, maid or wife, he loved her!

The Marguerite Gautier of the play, in Eleanor Armitage's conception of the part, was given a subtle and new interpretation. There was apparent not only the truth that the woman who truly loves is always really virtuous in her love, but that the woman who played this part could herself not be but innocent. At the end of the act Burnett kept saying to himself, "I believe she is purity itself; she takes the part of this creature so chastely; her high soul permeates and shines in Marguerite, and makes this poor creature of Dumas' a true heroine—a creature of soul."

Yet the vraisemblance was so great, too, that her last words, after Armand returns, when Nanine says, "The Count awaits an answer," and Marguerite replies, "Tell him there is no answer," made him furiously and unreasonably jealous of that rather boisterous country lover. Good God! he asked himself repeatedly, who and what was this glorious girl? An angel, or a witch? She makes one suffer so.

THE SECOND ENTR' ACTE.

He rose from his seat and went into the lobby. He had no desire then, in his exalted state of feeling, to go behind the curtain—to see Eleanor. A row at the door immediately attracted his attention. Two stern looking men were trying to get past the doorkeeper who stood there. There was an altercation.

"Do you know me now?" said one of the men, opening his coat and showing a detective's badge.

"Who do you want?" asked the manager, coming on the scene.

"A party behind the scenes," said the other, shortly.

"Will it stop the play? We can't stop the play——"

"A grave crime has been committed—'t is my duty——"

"I don't care if all the crimes in the calendar have been committed—you must wait till eleven o'clock, and the play's over," replied the manager, angrily.

The detectives consulted a moment.

"Very sorry, Mr. Manager, but it's our duty. You see, sir, there has been a murder——"

"A murder?"

"A murder?" exclaimed Burnett, who overheard, and who nodded to Swift, the detective, an officer he had known several years.

"Don't say it loud," said Swift, cautiously. "Yes, Mr. Burnett, your paper will have it all to-morrow, I suppose. A murder—it'll make a big sensation, I'm thinking. We feel sure we've got the party, an' the party's well known, and the party's a woman, and the party's beautiful, and a big actress. Yes."

Burnett turned white.

"You see, as all we know, an Englishman, Lord Holton, arrived on the Teutonic at six to-day, went to Oldorf at seven, dined at eight an' was chloroformed at nine, or say nine-fifteen, to be quite correct. Chloroformed in the reception room at the Oldorf—people passing in and out, too—queer, wasn't it? Now, can we do our business, Mr. Manager? I guess it may stop the play—that can't be helped. But she's got nerve, hain't she! to go on play acting while her victim lies a dead corpse not four blocks away? Can we go behind and see her?"

Burnett felt the lobby whirling about his head. Good God! what could it mean?

"What, man, not Miss Armitage?" exclaimed the manager, aghast. "Not really? You don't suspect her?"

"Yes, it's her's the party. The facts point to her. She was seen by four persons to enter the reception room at the Oldorf, where Lord Holton was asleep—taking an after-dinner nap. She was known to have been in that room about four or five minutes, at about 9:10 o'clock."

"This evening? Impossible! She has not been out of the theater. I'll swear it!" said the manager, earnestly.

"Oh, yes; she came out at the end of the first act. Why, she was seen and recognized, and what's more, she went off and forgot to take her handkerchief with her when she chloroformed him! Why, it's a dead easy tip! Yes, sir, she left the handkerchief laying right over his face—then got scared, probably, and hurried back to the theater—see here?"

Detective Swift produced a dainty belaced mouchoir, in one corner of which were Eleanor's initials, "E. A."

"This is positive," said Mr. Swift. "We don't want no better proof."

"Are you sure he's dead?" asked the manager, in a state of excitement and bewilderment. "I don't smell any chloroform on this—are you sure he's dead?"

"Dead? Well, they called in a doctor—a young chap living in the hotel—and he pronounced him stone dead, presumably of chloroform—and the odor was in the air, they say. Oh, yes, I'm sorry to say he's dead fast enough. A man of sixty, I should say. Very rich, I'm told. A peer and a Birmingham manufacturer. Just arrived in America. They told me he punished a terrible big dinner at the Oldorf—the last he was to git, poor old chap—oysters, clams, trout, venison, game—and two quarts of champagne. Well, I'm glad he did eat and drink hearty. He won't have no more chance to eat now, poor old man! He's where eatin' an' drinkin' is changed off for hymns and psalm singin'."

Burnett, recovering from his astonishment, began to see things with a clearness which carried a vague surprise at himself in his own mind along with it. He saw that Eleanor was surely innocent. He had seen her in that oriental reception room, and had noted the evident affection with which she treated the sleeping Englishman. She would not even spoil his nap! She kissed him—would a murderess kiss her sleeping victim? Yes, she was innocent—and he determined coolly on his first step. The detectives must not approach her until after the performance. He tapped Swift lightly on the shoulder.

"You remember me, Mr. Swift?—in the Roller diamond case—where, I rather flatter myself, we newspaper men outwitted you of the police force?"

Mr. Swift, who was a slim, tall, good-natured man, not very keen, laughed doggedly.

"Oh, yes, I remember you, Mr. Burnett. You were pretty sharp in that Clausen murder, too. Now you're on the staff, are you just as sharp?"

"A man on a great daily has to keep his wits about him. But time presses. I have a favor to ask—don't make this arrest till the play's over—innocent or guilty, it will ruin Miss Armitage's career for life——"

"Sorry, but I am under orders, Mr. Burnett—see?" said the honest fellow. "I've got to go and take her right now."

Burnett gave a smothered cry of despair and protest. "You shall not!" he cried.

"Well, who's going to stop me?"

"I!" and Burnett defiantly folded his arms and stood in the detective's way.

BEING A WOMAN.

He laid the magazine down. "That is a good bit of work," he said, "one of the cleverest things you have done. How came you to write it?"

She laughed softly. "I knew you would ask. I said to myself, he will scarcely recognize it as mine."

"True! for you to be the author of an intense little love song, where one can almost feel the heart beating, the warm blood leaping, seems to me slightly incongruous."

"And yet I am no Puritan."

"In one sense—no; but you nevertheless embody my idea of the self-controlled woman of the world—a woman who will never let passion sway nor feeling govern her actions."

"Being a cold woman," she said, "a criticism like yours will necessarily not phase me."

"When did a criticism of mine ever phase you!" he retorted. "You are too confident, too self-assured for that."

"What a disagreeable sort of person I must be," she mused. "How can you bear to be with me? Do you come to see me from pure kindness—because you do not wish to wound me? Surely you can find no pleasure in talking to one so unfeeling."

"Nevertheless I do: I rarely leave this house without registering a vow never to return, but as surely as the day comes round I find myself once more ringing at your gate."

"No doubt ringing several times before being admitted," she laughed; "but you who believe in sentiment, will forgive poor Maxwell; he is in love with one of the maids, and is therefore incapacitated for the trifling duties of every day."

"Doubtless you find the case interesting from a psychological point of view?"

"I do. Mamma wishes to dismiss them both, but I have begged that they be allowed to remain. I tell you this to show you what an overflowing fund of sympathy I possess—to let you see how little you have appreciated the nobler attributes of my character."

"Whatever else I have done," he said, "I have never underrated your facility for turning things into ridicule. It is a fatal gift—that of seeing always the comic side of life. It is all well enough while you are young; but some day——"

"'Some day, I know not when or how,'" she hummed, "by that time, my friend, I will have grown so indifferent to everything that nothing will matter much one way or the other. In the meanwhile, 'vive la bagatelle!'"

"And is it to be always thus?" he cried. "Will you never grow weary of the husks of life? Will you never crave something better than admiration and flattery—the mere surface pleasures of a society woman's existence? Have you not sometimes thought there would be more happiness in love?"

She lifted her eyes. "So you think then I have not been loved?"

She got up and from the drawer of a cabinet took out a book of photographs. "I am going to do an unconventional thing," she said, when she was seated again, "but you do not know any of these men, so there can be no breach of confidence. Come here"—she motioned him to the ottoman at her side. "This man," she touched the first picture lightly, "is a distinguished Northern physician. I met him one summer in Canada. We were both of us off for a rest (sometimes people are at their best then); be that as it may, we saw a good deal of each other, and before we parted in the autumn he offered me—more than friendship."

"He has a fine face," he said.

"This other is a lawyer who graduated with distinction from a celebrated Eastern college; he has a clear and logical mind, one that cannot be deceived by mere appearances. He also"—she turned the page. "This boyish looking fellow is the only son of an English nobleman. I might have been 'my lady' and dated my letters from 'Something-or-Other Park' or from my townhouse in London had I desired. The dark haired foreigner is a Russian—the De Vaures introduced him to me in Paris; he has written several articles on the American woman's femininity. The man in uniform is a German—but why go on?" flicking the pages slightly. "I have gained my point, have I not? You believe now that I occasionally inspire affection?"

Her tone was wistful, though she smiled.

"How you misunderstand me," he cried. "You know very well I never said you were incapable of awaking affection (you can make any man love you if you wish), but the game once won, the conquest made, and your interest in the affair wanes—that is what I complain of, your incapacity for appreciating a man's devotion."

"Of all those men," he went on, "was there none whom you could care for, no one whose pleadings awoke a responsive echo in your heart? Your heart!"—scornfully—"why should I speak of what you do not possess?"

"True," she echoed, leaning toward him; "long ago, ere I had grown so worldly wise, or learned to guard and fence, to weigh and ponder—I gave my heart away! Gave it away to one who valued the gift so lightly that he scarcely realized it was his. And are you so lost to chivalry that you would mock me for my poverty?"

"Margaret!" he exclaimed.

"I, who look at sentiment from a psychological point of view—who care only for the surface pleasures of a society woman's existence—who see the ridiculous side of life and not its pathos—have all these years fed my fancy on a dream."

He passed his hand over his brow.

"Are you in earnest? Is not this some jest to torture me? I cannot believe the man lives who is indifferent to your affection. Perhaps you wrong him, perhaps he is awkward at expressing his

THE OLDEST WAR VETERAN.

Said to Be Israel Rickard, Who Marched in a Decoration Day Parade.

Cortland N. Y., claims the honor of having among its residents the oldest veteran of the civil war. He is Israel Rickard, a veteran of Company G, Seventy-sixth Regiment, New York State Volunteers, and he fought as a private all through the war, which began when he was 60 years old. On last Decoration day, despite the heat, he turned out for the Cortland parade and marched with as firm a step as the best of his fellow veterans. It is probable that he was the oldest marcher in any memorial day parade that took place this year in the country.

On the last day of the year 1800 Israel Rickard was born in a town in northern Massachusetts, and two years later his father took him to Truxton, Cortland county, a section of the country then almost a wilderness, in which bears and panthers abounded.

The elder Rickard owned the only team of horses for miles around, and on one of these horses it was Israel's proud distinction when he attained the age of six years to ride to the mill carrying bags of corn. The boy's early life was made up of a great deal of work and little play, with hardly any time for schooling.

He became a farmer, and removed to Cortland when a young man, settling down there with the intention of living out his life on his farm. For many years he lived quietly with no disturbing element in the quiet routine of existence until the war broke out. At an age when most men are beginning to look forward to rest as the greatest of all things to be desired, he caught the martial fever and started for the front. He was, in spite of his sixty years, as straight as an arrow and much more powerful than the average man of half his age.

His first work was to take charge of a wagon train, his long familiarity with horses having marked him as suitable for this duty. But he wasn't satisfied with it. When his company went to the front and the smell of powder reached his nostrils he made his way to headquarters and secured an audience with his commanding officer.

"General, I want a gun," he said.

"What do you want with a gun?" asked the officer. "You can't drive horses with a gun."

"No; and you can't shoot rebs with a mule gad," returned Israel. "I want to do some shootin'."

He got a gun a few days later and proved himself a sharpshooter and an excellent soldier. After the war was over he returned to his farm, where he has lived anything but a sedentary life ever since. He is up with the lark and hard at work all day. It is no unusual thing for him to take a walk to Truxton and back, a distance of nearly sixteen miles.

This year he expressed a desire to march in the Decoration Day parade. When this came to the notice of the Parade Committee they sent a message to Mr. Rickard, saying that they would be glad to furnish a carriage for him, but he wouldn't have it.

"I'd sooner tramp," said he. "I had to in the war times when the roads were harder than these, and I had more to carry. Marchin' with the boys will make it seem more like a real celebration to me."

So he turned out with the other veterans, most of them two generations younger than himself, and the spectators cheered him as he passed. There is but one man in Cortland county who is Mr. Rickard's senior.

FRUIT PRESERVED IN BORAX.

Experiment that Have Given Surprising Results.

Frank M. Smith, the borax king, believes that he has solved the problem of preserving fresh fruit so that it can be put on the Eastern market in a satisfactory condition. For some time he has been experimenting with borax and finds the ingredients of that salt adapted for precluding vegetable decomposition.

The discovery is the result of a suggestion made to Mr. Smith one day while lunching with a friend. The gentleman was discussing the success that had attended the experiment of boraxing fresh meat, when Mr. Smith was asked why he had never tried preserving fruit in the same way. He said that it had never occurred to him, but that afternoon he gave the subject so much thought that as soon as he returned to his home in East Oakland he packed several pounds of cherries in a box of powdered borax.

This box was placed in the cellar and along side of it was placed a large glass dish filled with the same kind of fruit. Then he awaited developments. The next day he visited the cellar and found that the cherries in the dish were beginning to turn. In three days they were so decomposed that it was necessary to throw them away.

In order to make a good test he determined not to disturb the packed cherries for three weeks. At the termination of that time the box was opened and the fruit was found as fresh and in as good a condition as when first placed there.

Mr. Smith was amazed, and he was delighted over the result, and determined to experiment on a larger scale. He had a quantity of cherries packed in a barrel of borax and sent to Chicago by slow freight. He received a telegram a few days ago saying that the fruit had arrived in perfect condition and was bringing surprisingly high prices. Since then a number of barrels of cherries have been packed in borax and are now ready for shipment East.

BOARD OF EDUCATION REFUSE TO BUY COAL AT HOME.

The June Meeting Transacts a Great Amount of Midyear Business—Repairs to Be Made to the Buildings.

There was a considerable amount of business transacted at the regular July meeting of the Board of Education held last evening, but the chief topics of interest were fire, water and repairs.

All the members were present after Clerk F. B. Clark read the minutes of the June session, which were approved. A large batch of bills were presented and all were ordered paid, excepting the one of D. C. Heath for $74.75 which the board was not acquainted with. It was contracted for by Principal Maxson, and when found correct it will be paid. Another bill of Miss Fanny Comstock, of Connecticut, for botany topics, with additional cost for notary public fees as certification, was also not paid as the board decided they had no right to pay the fees. The matter will, however, be settled satisfactorily.

Collector Johnson reported that $1,230.68 had been collected from 1886 to 1895, the interest on same was $161.97, making total $1,392.65. Of that amount, $664.67 had been deposited in the First National Bank and $727.98 in the City National Bank.

Captain George F. Edwards sent a communication to the board which he desired to have forwarded to Adjutant General Wm. A. Stryker asking that he be appointed captain to drill the boys in the schools. The board did not think in their best judgment it would be wise to introduce drills at this time and on motion it was laid on the table.

A communication was received from Mrs. J. Brown in which she stated that she would clean the vaults at the various schools for $8 each, and other work of a like nature at proportionately low rates. It was received and filed.

Mr. Lounsbury stated that he had seen a representative of the firm of H. P. Smith, of New York, in regard to the changing the size of coal to be used in the furnaces, and that they advised against using small coal as it could not be depended upon to give the desired heat. He also said that he had received estimates on proposed repairs on the High school building, and the cost of the work, including ventilators, new floors and stairs, would be about $1,600 or $1,700, and it might possibly cost $2,000. Mr. Lounsbury said that Principal Maxson was anxious to have the assembly room changed so that there might be a study room, and that would cost $500 more. He read a letter from Mr. Maxson, in which the latter gave his idea on the changes.

It was figured that about $2,500 would be necessary for the changes, and an additional $2,200 for fire escapes. $3,000 had been set aside for fire escapes and repairs, and another $1,000 would probably be needed.

It was thought that it would be a good idea to make the repairs, and borrow the additional money and charge it to next year's account, as the repairs were most urgent.

John Abbott submitted an estimate for furnishing a flag pole to be erected between the Franklin and Stillman buildings, which were $60 for one 75 feet long, and $125 for one 100 feet long. The board thought it best to secure the longest one, which will be spliced and will be 100 feet above ground. It was also decided to have the pole on the Franklin building taken down, as it was not safe.

The matter of water for the Irving school was brought up by Dr. Probasco, he stated that the company would not put pipes in before next April and only then if the board would pay $85 a year. Mr. Lovell said the company had made a contract that water would not cost them over $20 dollars a year and that they had promised to put it in last April.

Letters were read from E. R. Pope and Frank Bergen explaining matters, but Mr. Lovell thought the company ought to fulfill their contract and offered a motion that was carried, that the clerk be instructed to write the company and respectfully ask them to do as they promised.

Mrs. S. E. Collins, in a communication, asked the board to remove an elm tree on school property adjoining her property at 211 West Fourth street, as the bugs and insects made it impossible for her to hang any clothes in the yard. The matter was referred to the building committee. Mrs. A. J. Praed living next to the Washington school asked the board to erect a new fence on the line as the old one was worn out. This matter was also referred to the building committee with power.

Principal Maxson reported $1,041 collected for tuition from out-of-town scholars.

The matter of persons playing tennis in the Bryant school yard was referred to the building committee.

On motion of Mr. Finch a vote of thanks was tendered to Miss Petrie, principal of the Irving school, for the very excellent entertainment recently given for the benefit of the school library and which netted $75.

The committee on fuel then reported bids from the coal dealers. All gave the same quality of coal and prices except TenEyck & Harris. The others were Upper Lehigh and pea coal $4.50 and $3.75 per ton. TenEyck & Harris's bid was $4.40 for Lehigh coal. The others bidding were: L. A. Rheume, agt., George O. Stevens, C. H. Rugg, F. W. Hand, Boice, Runyon & Co., and J. A. Thickstun.

Dr. Jenkins recommended that the contract be given to a Plainfield dealer for upper Lehigh at $4.50 per ton, 2,240 pounds to a ton.

Mr. Lounsbury said he always supported Plainfield trade, but he had no sympathy with anyone who would not make concessions for a large order such as they would give. He thought the Plainfield coal dealers unjust, as they charge the same for a large number of tons as they do for one ton.

Mr. Lovell said he thought they were duty bound to give the contract to the lowest bidder, whether he lived in town or not, and he made a motion to the effect that it be given the lowest bidder. It was carried, Dr. Jenking voting against it.

Mr. Lounsbury stated there was too much independence in Plainfield dealers, and cited an instance when he recently wanted a stone walk laid, and asked a man to measure it and give his figures, when the man replied, "it will cost so much per foot, you can measure it and figure it up as well as I can." Dr. Jenkins thought the board ought to secure the kind of coal they advertised for and not an inferior grade, and said that he had figures in his pocket that might prove startling, but he had promised not to show them. He thought the contract should be kept here. He made a motion that each ton be weighed before it was delivered and that the weight be handed over. It was adopted.

A short recess was then taken and the members went through the build- to see about needed repairs. When they met it was decided on motion that the building committee investigate the matter and report as soon as possible at a special meeting of the board.

The meeting then ajourned subject to the call of the president.

TRILBY AT THE NETHERWOOD.

Miss Lewis Will Present Her Own Version Thursday Evening.

Miss Catherine Lewis, who is to bring her company to the Hotel Netherwood on Thursday evening, July 11th, will be remembered most kindly by all theatre-goers for her long list of successes under Mr. Daly's and other managements. She is to present in the drawing room of the hotel her own condensed version of Trilby, she playing the title role. The Countess of Castelvecchio plays Svengali, which in itself is a sufficient novelty to draw a good house. The rest of the players are well known and it was only on the competence of the caste that A. M. Palmer gave his permission to the playing of this new adaption. An excellent programme is to fill up the evening, and thanks to Mr. Spitler the Netherwood guests ought to have a treat.

Evidence of Reliability.

W. V. Mundy, agent for the Traveller's Accident Life Insurance Company, of Hartford, Conn., yesterday handed George Kesselring, the Park Avenne tonsorial artist, a check for $57, for sixteen days disability, resulting from a fall. Mr. Kesselring has only been insured for four weeks, and considers himself very fortunate in being insured in such a reliable comaany as the Traveller's.

Inspection by Chief Doane.

Chief Doane last night completed a thorough personal investigation of all cellars and out buildings in the central part of the city where there was any combustible material and cautioned all owners and tenants to exercise care on the Fourth in preventing fires.

To Join the Camp.

Albert Finch, of Belvidere avenue, and Benjamin O. Bowers, Jr., of Franklin place, will soon join the Y. M. C. A. camp at Northfield, Mass. Several of their friends are talking of joining the party.

BALL TOSSERS OF OLD TIMES

FAMOUS CRESCENTS RESURRECTED TO PLAY THE Y. M. C. A'S.

Greatest Ball Game of the Season to Be Played Saturday—Secure Your Tickets Early and Avoid the Rush.

The reconstruction of the old Crescents in the baseball diamond is a fact hailed with delight by the cranks of the city of Plainfield, and this fact will be demonstrated and uniquely exemplified at the Crescent Oval on Saturday afternoon next, at 3:45 p. m., when the veterans will don their uniforms that have been gathering dust upon the shelf for nearly a decade and the way they will make the ball twirl and twist and spin all over the diamond will be a phenominal feature not to be forgotten. It will bring most vividly to the 1,500 spectators in the grand-stand, cheering their respective favorites on to victory, the memory of bygone days when enthusiasm ran high, pulses beat fast, and brilliant stops and catches brought forth volley after volley of cheers and applause.

The Stonewalls will be there, and will form a regular barricade, invincible and impregnable.

Joe Gavet will don the mit and plant himself on first base and with an eye like a hawk will swoop in every ball sent in his domain.

Samuel St. John McCutchen will look after the interests of second base, with a zealous care, as in the days of yore.

George Cornwall will prance around that portion of the diamond known as the short stop's territory with the alertness of a youth in his teens; and pick up the ball with the grace and cleverness of a second Fuller or a "Shugart."

J. Hervey Doane will hug third base and keep his eye on Joe, and you just watch the ball go to first.

"And what about the battery?"

"It's all right!"

Walter Freeman, the first man that ever pitched a curved ball in Plainfield, will toe the mark, while James W. MacMurray, as backstop, will send out every batter with a cipher.

And you ought to keep a sharp eye on the outfield if you want to see some grand stand catches.

Demarest will be there.

Roger Murray and Roger Murray will be there, too.

Yes, of course, we'll all be there. Hurrah for the old Crescents.

The Old Bell Will Parade.

There has been some doubt as to whether or not the old fire bell would be allowed in the Fourth of July parade, owing to the objection of the New York firm who bought it some time ago. However, at the earnest solicitation of Chief Doane and several prominent business men, permission has been secured. The bell will be mounted on a new wagon, and drawn by six large horses, donated by John D. Runyon. An escort of exempt firemen will accompany the bell along the line of parade.

Tomorrow afternoon at three o'clock on the premises, the heirs of Levi Hetfield, dec'd, will sell a valuable piece of property at public auction, to the highest bidder, to close the estate. Left the Hen and Chickens.

Thieves broke into the wagon house and granery of Bizzilla French at Union Village, Saturday night, and stole forty bushels of corn, a set of harness, and about thirty-five hens. All they left was one hen and a dozen little chickens.

Disorderly House Raided.

The police made a raid last night on a disorderly house on Cottage place run by "Tip" Thompson, the bootblack. Several inmates made their escape, but "Tip" was captured. He will be given a hearing this evening.

The second of the summer subscription dances in the Casino took place last evening, and was quite largely attended. The evening was a splended one for dancing and Rogers and Conde were at their best. The ever moving throng of dancers with the black and white of the men's costumes and the many colors of the women's made a beautiful sight which only came to an end in the small hours of this morning.

The second dance was a greater success than the first if it were possible and all expressed themselves delighted. The next will occur sometime in September. The committee in charge consisted of Howard W. Beebe, Fred W. Waltz, and Laurens VanBuren.

The tickets will be good to return until July 31st.

Excursion tickets, good going via one route and returning via another, will be sold on the same dates at a slight advance over the one-fare rate for the round trip.

Scrapers of a Dusky Hue.

The North avenue railroad station was the scene of a lively fight last night about 7:30.

James Morris, colored who runs the bootblack stand for Thomas Timbo, was seated in his chair when a young man, also colored, named King, came along and the two had some words. The latter finally hit Morris and then they pitched into one another. King bit Morris in the throat, injuring him.

Persons standing near were obliged to separate the would-be puglists. King then dissapeared and today he went on the excursion to Asbury Park. He will be arrested on his return and properly dealt with.

The rear section stopped at Netherwood to pick up excursionists from there.

RAILWAY EXTENSION SLEEPS

NOT A WORD SAID IN REFERENCE THERETO LAST NIGHT.

The July Meeting of the Common Council Taken Up With Small Business—First Steps in Watchung Avenue Opening.

When the Common Council was called to order last night, thirty-four minutes after the announced time, there were six councilmen, besides President See, in the chamber. They were Messrs. Frost, Ginna, Bird, Moore, Frazee and Westphal. Clerk MacMurray talked 500 words a minute for thirty minutes before the reading of the minutes of the June meetings were finished, and then it was after nine o'clock before any real business was got down to, which consisted principally of petitions and remonstrances, though Councilman Ginna introduced one or two important ordinances.

Michael Harrigan, Thomas Callahan and Thomas Leary protested against the granting the right of way on Richmond street for the extension of the street railway.

In a remonstrance couched in language that brought laughter from the councilmen and much trouble to Clerk MacMurray in deciphering the writing Mrs. J. L. Tobin protested against paying taxes on the property of Peter Collins. Mrs. Tobin averred that Assessor Hubbard was unjust in assessing the place more than what she considered it worth. She stated that Collins and his wife were poor and that she had taken care of them for some time, and therefore saved the city the expense of caring for them. Now the property was advertised for sale by Justice Nash for delinquent taxes. She threatened to throw the old couple on the city if the council did not recognize her arguments forthwith. The petition was referred.

Petitions for lights and hydrants were received and granted.

The invitation of the executive committee of the Fourth of July to review the parade was accepted.

Mrs. C. DeForest petitioned for the privilege of erecting a drinking fountain on West Second street, for man and beast. W. R. Codington asked for the privilege of building a brick addition to the store at 105 Park avenue. The Public Library report was received and placed on file.

It was ordered that one two-way hydrant be placed on Kensington avenue, West Eighth street, and corner of West Sixth street and Arlington avenue. The Dunellen Electric Light Company were ordered to remove poles and wires illegally erected on West Front street and Rock avenue.

Councilman Ginna offered a resolution, which was adopted, that the city treasurer be authorized to borrow $500 to apply to the poor fund, and $8,000 to apply to the payment of sewer work. He also offered an ordinance seeking to establish curb lines along lower West Front street properties.

Councilman Westphal introduced a resolution that Honan & Son be requested to clear the streets of obstructions over which the Fourth of July parade was to pass. It was adopted.

Councilman Ginna offered ordinances to establish curb lines on Arlington avenue, and to regulate the grade on Watchung avenue from East Ninth street to Cedar brook. They were both read first and second time and ordered advertised.

Mr. Ginna also introduced an ordinance looking to the widening of Watchung avenue, from Front street to Green brook.

On the motion of Mr. Ginna it was laid on the table.

Councilman Westphal from the committeee who were appointed to confer with the general Fourth of July celebration committee introduced a resolution that the sum of $100 be appropriated for the celebration.

Mr. Ginna questioned the propriety of the appropriation inasmuch as it would establish a precedent for all future public celebrations, and besides the city had no more money on hand than was needed. He said he wanted to see a proper observance of the day, but thought it bad policy for the council to give any money.

Mr. Frazee explained the reason the resolution had been introduced was that the celebration committee were not meeting with much financial aid in the borough. The resolution was carried, Messrs. Ginna Frost and Moore voting No.

Councilman Frost from the committee on sewers announced that John Marshall, of New York, was the successful bidder for the main outlet sewer.

Councilman Moore wanted to know if the contract called for a size of pipe that would be large enough to answer the purposes of tide water disposal.

Mr. Frost said that the pipe would not have to be changed no matter where the sewage was taken to.

The council adjourned to Monday, July 8th.

CUPID BUSY IN JULY.

Month of Weddings Past, But His Work Does Not Let Up.

A very pretty marriage was solemnized in New Providence, yesterday afternoon. The happy couple were Louis Frentz, of Scotch Plains, and Miss May Bonnell, of New Providence. H. Frentz, brother of the groom, was the best man and Miss Ella Frentz, his sister, was the bridesmaid.

The bride was dressed in a pretty traveling dress of tan cloth, trimmed with brown satin and eredesent beads. She was given away by her uncle, W. Crause, of Staten Island, who celebrated his golden wedding only two weeks ago. Miss Mamie Dickenson played the wedding march. The house was decorated with roses and ferns and was well filled with numerous wedding gifts which were both useful and ornamental. Rev. Mr. True, of the All Saints church, of Scotch Plains, performed the ceremony. The newly married couple left immediately for a trip through New York State.

There was a large number of guests present from New Providence, Summit and Scotch Plains, in addition to these there were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Putnam and child, of this city, and Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Jimmerson, of Westfield.

Mr. Frentz has followed the trade of carpenter in Scotch Plains for several years and will resume his work as soon as he returns. He is also well-known as the reliable first baseman on the Scotch Plains nine that played here last Saturday.

LET HER BOOM.

Everything Is Ready for the Great Celebration.

Two more days and the Fourth of July will be here with all its noise and parade. The preparations of the day are almost completed and last evening the general committee met in Red Men's Hall to make the final arrangements. The reports of the various committees were made and accepted and everything promises a day long to be remembered in Plainfield.

The executive committee met at the conclusion of the other meeting and listened to reports of the sub-committees. The finance committee reported that their part of the work was progressing very favorably. The music committee reported that the Union Band of New Brunswick had been secured for the parade. The question of the arch over Park avenue was brought up and thrown aside as there were not sufficient funds to make a success of it. The fireworks committee reported that everything was ready for a grand exhibition of pyrotechnics. The other committees reported everything completed or being constructed.

MR. CORIELL VINDICATED.

The Court of Chancery Decides That His Actions Were Proper.

The Press congratulates William Wallace Coriell on his important victory in the New Jersey Court of Chancer. Mr. Coriell is well known in Plainfield as a man of integrity. The case that he has just won involved the charge that he had committed fraud in inducing John Warren to sell the entire estate left by the latter's mother, Sarah C. Coriell, who was Mr. Coriell's stepmother. The plaintiff is a resident of Brooklyn, where he was formerly employed in the navy yard, and was represented in this suit by able counsel from Plainfield, assisted by New York counsel.

Craig A. Marsh was retained by Mr. Coriell, and, as generally happens when Mr. Marsh takes charge of a case in the higher courts, he won his case. The court not only holds that the plaintiff failed to prove his case, but also that his charges had been disproved. Mr. Coriell is vindicated, and he retains the property.

SAYS WE AID REBELS

Havana's Mayor Makes a Serious Charge.

New York, July 2.—Segundo Alvarez, mayor of Havana, Cuba, is in this city. "Of course the people and the government of the United States are not entirely to blame for this state of affairs. There are a great many Cubans, prominent in business and politics, who come to your country and become citizens simply for the purpose of arousing friendly sentiment here. They do not renounce their citizenship in Cuba.

Says Spain Will Win.

"The present war may last one, or even two years longer, but Spain will win in the end. The principal opposition comes from sympathizers in the United States. I speak from the Spanish standpoint, for I was born in the province of Asturias in Spain. I own the largest cigar factory in Havana, and all we property holders hope that Spain will succeed in putting down the rebellion." Mayor Alvarez will go to Saratoga for a few weeks, and then to Cuba.

SITUATION SERIOUS.

Turkish Soil Invaded by Bulgaria Bands.

London, July 2.—A dispatch to the Pall Mall Gazette from Sofia says that the situation is serious, almost amounting to a state of war, between Bulgaria and Turkey. News has been received at the Bulgarian capital that two bands, composed of 75 or 100 men respectively, have crossed the Bulgarian frontier into Turkish territory, where they captured two Turkish soldiers, who were taken across the frontier to Dubitza, Bulgaria, twenty-two miles south of Sofia. One man was wounded.

Asked Turkey To Explain.

Sofia, July 2.—The government of Bulgaria has requested the Turkish government to explain the orders issued to the commander of the Turkish troops at Adrianople to act on his own initiative along the Bulgarian frontier. The government has also notified the porte that the duty of watching the frontier compels Bulgaria to take military measures required under the circumstances.

NEWFOUNDLAND AFFAIRS.

Discontent over Reforms—The Financial Situation.

St. Johns, N. F., July 2.—Sir Herbert Murray, the British relief commissioner, left for England Saturday night after a three-months' stay. His relief operations included the whole country. It is estimated that he distributed $120,000. The government is paying all the claims of debenture holders and its obligations of every character. The retrenchment in the civil list and the reduction of grants began yesterday. General discontent exists over the reforms. It is alleged by the opposition press that New Foundland offered to give Canada the whole of Labrador as security for a loan of $9,000,000, thus giving Canada full control of the principal fisheries. The legislature is providing additional legal machinery to wind up the suspended banks. The fishery operations which are going on along the whole coast show the best prospects in twenty years.

THE NEW ENGLISH CABINET.

Re-election of Balfour and Chamberlain—Irish Secretaryship.

London, July 2.—A. J. Balfour, the first lord of the treasury, and Joseph Chamberlain, the secretary of state for the colonies, were both re-elected without opposition in east Manchester and west Birmingham respectively, their re-election to membership of the house of commons being made necessary by their acceptance of positions in the new cabinet. The Yorkshire Post says that Gerald William Balfour, brother of A. J. Balfour, first lord of the treasury, 42 years old and private secretary to the latter in 1895, has been appointed chief secretary for Ireland.

NEW TEMPERANCE LAW.

The Nicholson Act Goes into Effect in Indiana.

Indianapolis, July 2.—The Nicholson temperance act became a law yesterday by proclamation of the governor. In some parts of the state a disposition to resist the provisions of the law is reported, but the Brewers' association has advised saloon keepers to observe the law until the supreme court has passed upon it. The law places all saloons on the ground floor, abolishing all musical features and separates the saloon from any other business. It takes down the screens and defeats a license application on the petition of a majority of the residents of the ward.

DISTURBANCES IN FORMOSA.

Withdrawal of the British and German Guards.

Hong Kong, July 2.—The British admiral has withdrawn the guard from the island of Formosa and has offered to take foreigners on board his ships. The German admiral has made a similar offer to Germans. It is believed that the reason for this action is that it is inexpedient to retain the guard with the Japanese forces advancing, and fighting likely to occur.

Asbury Park Bicycle Races.

Asbury Park, N. J., July 2.—The race committee has decided to have a professional race during each of the three days of the coming bicycle meet. The purse in each case will be $150, divided as follows: $100 to first; $35 to second, and $15 to third. Two of the races will be for a mile and the other for two miles. A quad will be used for pacemaker.

Dr. Whitman's Acceptance.

Washington, July 2.—Rev. Dr. B. S. Whitman of Colby university, Maine, has formally accepted the presidency of Columbia university, this city, to which he was some time since elected. The sum of $75,000 is to be raised to develop and extend the institution of which amount $53,000 has already been subscribed.

Gift to Union College.

Troy, N. Y., July 2.—Mrs. Harriet C. Porter of Waterford has given $6,000 to Union college as a fund to aid worthy graduates of the college who shall take up the study of law. The bequest is made in memory of Mrs. Porter's husband

HE PREFERS AMERICA

Cardinal Gibbons Declines a Vatican Offer.

Asked by the Pope To Surrender His Diocese of Baltimore, Md., and Reside in Rome and Take Part in the Politics of the Vatican. Views of the Cardinal's Friends.

London, July 2.—A dispatch received here from Rome says that the pope has invited Cardinal Gibbons to surrender his diocese, that of Baltimore, Md., and to reside in Rome and take part in the politics of the vatican, but that Cardinal Gibbons declined the offer.

Opinion at Baltimore.

Baltimore, July 2.—A dispatch was received here last night from Rome stating that cardinal Gibbons had declined the pope's invitation to surrender his American diocese and to reside in Rome, taking part in the politics of the vatican. No significance is attached to the dispatch by the cardinal's friends in this city. One of them said:

Would Not Abandon His Charge.

"Even admitting it to be a fact that the pope would extend to his eminence such an invitation, which is very unlikely, it would be contrary to all of Cardinal Gibbons' ideas to abandon the distinguished and responsible position as the head of the church in American to engage in the affairs of the vatican.'

A Very Patriotic American.

"Those statements doutless grew out of the very prominent place which the cardinal just now is occupying in the public eye, both in this country and in Europe. Cardinal Gibbons, while a strong churchman, is also a very patriotic American, and knows he can render the church far greater service in his present eminent station than in any which he would be called upon to accupy at Rome."

CONFIDENT OF A NEW TRIAL.

Efforts Begun in Behalf of Clarence and Sadie Robinson.

Buffalo, July 2.—Clarence and Sadie Robinson, convicted of killing Montgomery Gibbs, will, through their counsel, Judge L. Q. Hardesty, apply for a new trial on newly discovered evidence. During last week the relatives of the convicted couple were in Buffalo in consultation with Judge Hardesty, and at a conference Saturday it was decided to make the appeal as soon as preliminary details are arranged. It is said that the sensations created by the trial will be mild compared with the affidavits which will be read on the motion for a new trial.

Will Establish a Complete Alibi.

Eight witnesses for the defense have been secured who will establish, Judge Hardesty says, a complete alibi for the prisoners. Two witnesses have been secured who will indicate that Gibbs was killed by another person. This will constitute the new evidence. Judge Hardesty feels certain that a new trial will be granted on his evidence.

EMERY LEFT DIME NOVELS.

It Is Thought Cottle's Abductor Has Gone to St. Petersburg.

Toronto, Ont., July 2.—The police have taken possession of all the effects belonging to John C. Emery, the abductor of Lawyer Cottle of Buffalo, consisting of a few dime novels. A year ago Emery paid a four months' visit to St. Petersburg, Russia, and it is thought that he has again left for that city with the $5,000 paid him by Cottle's son. Three weeks ago in the barroom of the Elliott house he took ten one hundred dollar bills from a big wad and offered it to a certain man provided he would assist in the abduction of Cottle, but the man refused.

Smith Testimonial Fund.

Boston, July 2.—Andrew Carnegie has sent $400 toward the Dr. S. F. Smith testimonial fund. Yesterday Curtis Guild, chairman of the committee which has the testimonial to the author of "America" in charge, received Mr. Carnegie's check for that amount, which brings the fund to the desired sum, $2,000.

No Municipal Suffrage for Women.

Hartford, Conn., July 2.—The senate by a unanimous vote, one senator absent, rejected the bill conferring municipal suffrage upon women. The bill passed the house last week. The senate then by a vote of 6 to 17 refused to repeal the existing law conferring upon women the right to vote in school matters.

STOLE THE CLOCK'S HANDS.

Hanover's Graduating Class Then Cut Them Up for Souvenirs.

Bellows Falls, Vt., July 2.—Last Wednesday morning, commencement day at Hanover, visitors and the faculty at Dartmouth missed the hands of the old college clock, which for over ninety years had told the hours in the front gable of old Dartmouth hall. Much wonder and surprise were expressed at their disappearance. The clock was still running and striking, without pointers. It now leaks out that one of the last acts of the class of '95 was to appoint a committee of three to get into the attic that morning, remove them and divide them into sixty-eight parts, and that each of the graduating class has a souvenir which would be highly coveted by thousands of the alumni. They were of pine wood, over three feet long and made siza le pieces even when divided so many times. Few mementoes so intimately connected with college life could have been selected.

BIG FIRE IN PARIS.

Military Equipment Works and Gas Meter Factory Burned.

Paris, July 2.—One of the largest fires that has occurred in this city in some time broke out at noon in the military equipment works in the Rue Rochechouart in the northern part of the city. The flames spread with the greatest rapidity and the employes were quickly driven into the street. The fire extended to buildings on Rue Petrelle to the north and Rue Coudorcet to the south. The immense building on the latter street devoted to the manufacture of gas meters was destroyed. Altogether eight buildings, including several dwellings, were burned. It was not until late in the evening that the fire was extinguished. The loss is very heavy. Two firemen and dozens of civilians were severely hurt.

Defender Afloat.

Bristol, R. I., July 2.—The Defender was pulled off the cradle late yesterday afternoon by the tug Right Arm. The strain did not damage her in the least.

warden and witnesses left the death chamber, Warden Sage seemed greatly relieved. The uncertainty as to his duty in the matter has greatly worried him and there is no wonder that he felt relieved. Everything possible was done by Buchanan's lawyers and his devoted wife to save him and Warden Sage gave them all the assistance possible. He had not fully made up his mind to go ahead with the execution yesterday until after considering for several hours the dispatch from the attorney general. Then he notified Buchanan that he must prepare for death. The condemned man almost broke kown and inquired as to his wife's efforts with the governor. Just at that moment the following dispatch was handed to the warden which he read and passed to Buchanan:

His Agony Pitiable.

Rhinecliff, N. Y., July 1.

Warden Sage:—"All pleadings in vain. Governor cannot possibly interfere.

"Annie Buchanan."

When Buchanan read this dispatch his agony was pitable. He asked that his wife be allowed to see him when she returned, but the warden denied the request, believing it best for both. Shortly after 10 o'clock Buchanan sent again for Warden Sage. He had finished a breakfast consisting of one bowl of milk. When they met the warden displayed the greater feeling of the two. The warden asked what was wanted. Buchanan thanked Warden Sage for the kindness that had been shown him in the prison, and then added with much earnestness.

Protested His Innocence.

"Warden, these are probably my last words, and I want you to be in a position to speak with certainty concerning my confession which in the future you may hear I have made. I want to say to you now that I am entirely innocent of the crime for which I am about to be executed. There was no more morphine in that woman as administered by me than there is in you at this moment. I suppose I am not the first innocent man to be executed."

A Wronged Wife's Devotion.

When Mrs. Buchanan returned to Sing Sing she went at once to the prison and asked to see her husband. This was denied her as the witnesses were already assembled in the death chamber and the minister was preparing Buchanan for the final moment. Mrs. Buchanan then went to a hotel, where she remained until the end. Mrs. Buchanan's condition was indeed more pitiable than that of her husband. Deceived and subjected to the most cruel treatment by him, cast aside for another who took her place, she labored with the heroism of a strong nature to save Buchanan, and, failing, finds herself alone, penniless, without friends, her child a charge on the city of New York.

FOR NEW TORPEDO BOATS.

Proposals Will Be Received by the Navy Department.

Washington, July 2.—The navy department has invited proposals for the construction of three steel twin-screw sea-going torpedo boats for the navy. The material used in their construction is to be of domestic manufacture. The vessels may be constructed of steel or other metal, or alloy.

Must Make Twenty-six Knots.

The contracts require a speed of not less than an average of twenty-six knots per hour, maintained successfully for two consecutive hours. If they fail to develop and maintain twenty-six knots, but exhibit an average speed of not less than twenty-five knots an hour they will be accepted, so far as speed is concerned, at a reduced price, the reduction being at the rate of $10,000 a knot. If the speed falls below an average of twenty-five knots an hour it will be optional with the secretary of the navy to reject the vessels or to accept them at a reduced price, to be agreed upon between the secretary and the contractors.

Where They Will Be Built.

The act of congress authorizing provided that one of them should be built on or near the coast of the Pacific ocean, one on the Mississippi river and one on the Gulf of Mexico. The act provided further that in case the vessels could not be built at these points at a fair cost they should be built at any place in the United States.

Kunley Killed Himself.

New York, July 2.—The inquest touching the death of George C. Kunley, alias George Rouis, who shot himself in the Alpine flats, on June 25 last, was held yesterday, and the jury found that Kunley had taken his own life. Rouphure Rouis, who was suspected of having shot Kunley, was discharged from custody.

HER PITIABLE GRIEF

Mrs. Buchanan Prostrated and Penniless.

Dragged from the Coffin Containing Her Husband's Remains—The Dead Murderer's Lawyers Will Continue the Proceedings Before the Supreme Court.

New York, July 2.—The body of Dr. Robert Buchanan arrived at the Grand Central station at 8:30 o'clock last night. It was brought from Sing Sing by undertaker Anthony Huhna of No. 127 Varick street. The body was taken to the undertaker's rooms at 9 o'clock. A large crowd of people in the neighborhood collected in front of the house and were admitted to view the face of the electrocuted murderer. A line was formed and for hours a steady stream of humanity filed past the casket.

A Pathetic Scene.

At 10:30 o'clock Mrs. Buchanan, the electrocuted man's widow, came down stairs, while the doors were temporarily closed and the crowd kept out. She had been with the undertaker's family for an hour and had not seen the body of her husband since his death. A most pathetic scene occurred when she entered the room. Her face was bloodless, her eyes swollen from weakness and lack of sleep.

Kissed the Cold Lips.

Dressed in black she walked to the casket and threw herself upon it. She kissed the cold lips of the man she loved. "Oh Robert! Robert!" she cried, "you are gone from me, and how I loved you." She sobbed violently and kissed the red mark made over the right eye of the dead man by the strap that held him in the electric chair.

Would Not Leave the Body.

Lawyer George W. Gibbons tried to console the grief-stricken woman and, after a time, endeavored to lead her away, but without success. Undertaker Huhna also tried to get her up-stairs to quiet her. "No, No!" she cried. "They shall not take me from you, Robert. Oh, mother; oh, my darling!" and she became wrought up to a high pitch of excitement. The lawyer and undertaker then tried to lift her from the casket to get her away, but she clung closer to the corpse and cried out to be let alone.

Her Shrieks Heard in the Streets.

Then she let out shriek after shriek that was heard out on the street, and caused the people to mass in great numbers about the house and try to get in. Finally Lawyer Gibbons and the undertaker had to almost carry her out of the room. After much difficulty she was gotten up-stairs in a hysterical condition, where the undertaker's wife soothed her.

Prostrated and Penniless.

Mrs. Buchanan is to-day a decided object of pity. She is completely prostrated and unable to leave her bed. Besides she is absolutely penniless.

WILL NOT DROP THE MATTER.

Buchanan's Lawyers To Proceed as if He Were Alive.

New York, July 2.—Col. George W. Gibbons, who with A. C. Butts labored hard and earnestly to save the wife-murderer, Buchanan, from the electric chair, stated last evening that he did not intend to let the case drop now that Buchanan had been electrocuted. "Nothing, however, can be done," he said, "until the United States supreme court decides the question of our appeal. We will perfect our appeal, perhaps making some modifications, to suit the present condition of facts, and then ask for an opinion. We will proceed exactly the same as though Dr. Buchanan were alive."

All Rests with U. S. Supreme Court.

"Will you commence an action against the state, or the warden at Sing Sing, for damages, holding them responsible for the death of your client?" Col. Gibbons was asked. "Well, you see, we can do nothing in that direction until we get an opinion in regard to our appeal. If the United States supreme court decides against us, we will have no ground on which to stand. If, on the contrary, the decision should be in our favor, we will push the case to the furthest limit."

A Parallel Case.

Col. Gibbons, when asked if there were any precedents of counsel continuing to fight the case of a murderer after execution, said that the case of the Japanese, Jugiso, had many parallel lines, and it was upon the decisions in that case they hung their hopes. "It is pretty hard at this time," said Col. Gibbons in conclusion, "to say just what we will do, so far as I know, we will pursue that policy."

Mrs. Buchanan Declines To Talk.

Mrs. Buchanan arrived in the city at 3 o'clock from Sing Sing, accompanied by her child and a representative of Col. Gibbons. She declined to make any statement. The remains of Buchanan arrived last night from Sing Sing in charge of a Varick street undertaker.

BEFORE THE ELECTROCUTION.

The Condemned Man Gave Up Hope Only at the Last Moment.

Sing Sing, July 2.—Although it was necessary to apply the current twice before Buchanan was declared dead, the physicians present express their belief that the condemned man was unconscious after the first shock and that he suffered no pain. Others present, however, seemed to believe that electrical executions were still a matter of experiment and uncertainty.

Dr. Gibbs' Statement.

Before the autopsy Dr. Gibbs made the folowing statement: "I think the cause of the apparent partial failure of of the first application of the current was the fact that the straps were drawn too tight about the neck and chin, perhaps preventing the immediate expulsion of the air from the lungs and therefore causing the slight pulsation of the heart, which we observed. I believe Buchanan was unconscious after the first shock and was beyond resuscitation before the current was turned off the first time. The evidence of life, which we found, however, was sufficient to render it necessary, in our opinion, to apply the current the second time."

Warden Sage Greatly Relieved.

When Buchanan's remains were carried to the dissecting table and the

Dr. Jenkins would have performed a public service if he had announced the facts in reference to this matter which he had at hand last night.

That New Jersey stands well in comparison as a desirable place to live in is shown by the fact that in the migration to and from other States the balance is in her favor. The last Federal census shows that while 180,399 persons born in New Jersey had moved away, the number of persons who have come from other States reached 183,788.—Trenton Times.

Kelsey; an Attorney General to succeed General Stockton; three Supreme Court Justices to succeed Justices VanSyckel, Dixon and Reed; a Clerk in Chancery to succeed Allan L. Funeral of John Weir.

A large number of relatives and friends attended the funeral of John Weir yesterday afternoon at five o'clock from his late residence, 72 Willow avenue. Many floral offerings bore testimony to the regard in which the deceased was held. Miss Bessie Blair, Miss Gussie Runyon, C. W. McCutchen, and Will Runyon, formed a quartette, who sang "Asleep in Jesus," and "Beyond the smiling and the weeping." Rev. Dr. Barnes, of the Methodist church, assisted by Rev. M. E. Dwight, conducted the service. The interment was at Hillside cemetery at the hour of the sunsetting.

Mr. Dodd Didn't Give Up.

A. H. Dodd, of this city, was stopped Saturday night on the county road near Garwood, by a couple of footpads, one of whom caught his horse by the bridle, while the other stepped up to the carriage and demanded money. Mr. Dodd was so surprised that he did not reply for a moment. When he, however, refused to grant the demand for money the highwayman standing near the wheel of the carriage grabbed a lap blanket, and, calling to the other fellow, both ran into the woods.

THE DECLINE IN ORATORY.

The Present Generation Can Talk, but It Lacks Style.

According to Mr. Fletcher Osgood, who writes in the "Forum" of the peculiarities of the American voice in speaking, the enunciation of the rank and file of our men of business, as well as our women, is lamentably defective. Hon. Henry L. Dawes, it will be remembered, enlarged, in an article published last winter, upon the decadence of oratory in the halls of Congress, and illustrated his article by some apt and forcible examples, quite disassociated from the familiar "Where am I at" episode.

Mr. Osgood pertinently asks, how many college students, or college professors, know that habitual speech is undermined and incrusted by "elocutionary distempers"? The fact is, that the ethics of pure colloquial elocution have been substantially ignored by the instructors in our schools and colleges. We are, as a nationality, experts at offhand speaking, so far as matter is concerned, but in manner and in art our speakers are woefully deficient. It is true that at the present time we lack the typical models that existed in the middle age of the century. Then we knew Edward Everett, Henry Ward Beecher, George William Curtis, Charles Sumner, Wendell Phillips and James T. Brady—all models of clear-cut distinction and of flawless enunciation. It is certainly not a little remarkable that there is hardly a platform orator to-day who would be critically compared with the orators of the last generation. It cannot be denied that the attribute of earnestness remains to the speakers of our time, but what we may call the mechanics of the voice appears to be as a sealed book to most of the speakers

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

WHEN CHARLES I, WAS BEHEADED, only one man in the vast crowd present knew why the blood spurted from the Monarch's dissevered arteries—namely Dr. Harvey, the Court Physician, who discovered the circulation of the blood.

For asserting this fact he was reviled and persecuted, and came near to losing his own head. But the world has grown more intelligent and broad-minded since then, and when the Shakers of Mt. Lebanon, (N. Y.) announced their discovery of an absolute remedy for indigestion and dyspepsia it was welcomed both by the people and the physicians.

For ages dyspepsia has been the bete noire, the black beast, the bug-bear of the medical profession.

We know it to be the real cause of nine-tenths of our ailments, yet have never been able to master it. Its symptoms are numerous and perplexing—many of them falsely considered (and wrongly treated) as distinct diseases. Among them are: distress after eating; sickness and nausea; pains in the head, chest, sides and back; bad taste in the mouth and offensive gas rising to the throat; costiveness and irregularity of the bowels; variable appetite; heart-burn and palpitation; sick headache; ringing in the ears; nervousness and loss of sleep; weakness and mental depression, etc.

The Shaker Digestive Cordial relieves and cures this condition as nothing else ever did. It is prepared with rare mountain herbs, cultivated by the Shakers. For many years this people have studied the disease, and humbly and faithfully sought the remedy. Having found and tested it they confidentially offer it to a world—full of sufferers. None who try it will be disappointed. It relieves immediately.

That you may learn whether it is adapted to your case the Shakers have placed trial bottles on the market at ten cents—for sale by nearly all druggists.

The Ideal Panacea.

James L. Francis, Alderman, Chicago, says: "I regard Dr. King's New Discovery as an Ideal Panacea for Coughs, Colds and Lung Complaints, having used it in my family for the last five years, to the exclusion of physicians' prescriptions or other preparations."

Rev. John Burgus, Keokuk, Iowa, writes: "I have been a minister of the Methodist Episcopal church for fifty years or more, and have never found anything so beneficial or that gave me such speedy relief as Dr. King's New Discovery." Try this Ideal Cough Remedy now. Trial bottle free at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

It May Do as Much For You.

Mr. Fred Miller of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a Severe Kidney trouble for many years, with severe pains in his back and also that his bladder was affected. He tried many so-called Kidney cures but without any good result. About a year ago he began use of Electric Bitters and found relief at once. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to cure all Kidney and Liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c for large bottle, at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

Karl's Clover Root, the great blood purifier, gives freshness and clearness to the complexion and cures constipation 25c, 50c, $1. Sold by all druggists.

Mrs. T. S. Hawkins, Chattanooga, Tenn., says: "Shiloh's Vitalizer saved my life. I consider it the best remedy for a debilitated system I ever used." For dyspepsia, liver or kidney trouble it excels; 75c. Sold by all druggists.

Shiloh's cure is sold on a guarantee. It cures incipient consumption; it is the best cough cure, only 1c a dose; 25c, 50c, $1. Sold by all druggists.

Chamberlain's is the best of all. Vincent S. Barkl, of Danbury, Iowa, has used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy whenever in need of a medicine for coughs and colds, for the past five years and says: "It always helps me out. If anyone asks me what kind of cough medicine I use, I reply, Chamberlain's, that is the best of all. 25 and 50c, bottles for sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North Avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Last June Dick Crawford brought his twelve-months-old child, suffering from infantile diarrhœa, to me. It had been weaned at four months old and had always been sickly. I gave it the usual treatment in such cases but without benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born, or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25 cent size had been used a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny constitution disappeared, and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by this remedy. J. T. Marlow, M. D., Tamaroa, Ill. For sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North Avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

W. H. Nelson, who is in the drug business at Kingville, Mo., has so much confidence in Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy that he warrants every bottle and offers to refund the money to any customer who is not satisfied after using it. Mr. Nelson takes no risk in doing this because the remedy is a certain cure for the diseases for which it is intended and he knows it. It is for sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North Avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

THE SHIRT WAIST.

COOLEST AND MOST CONVENIENT OF WOMEN'S GARMENTS.

Two Suits of Stylish Cut, One of Crinkly Silk, the Other of Gray Alpaca. Sashes and Bows Should Now be All Loops and No Streamers.

One of the distinguishing features of this season's styles in dress is that most sashes and bows are all loops and no ends. The ribbon belt or sash invariably ends with big, bristling bunches of loops. The long, floating streamers of former years seem to have almost disappeared.

When well fitting in every respect, properly laundered and carefully adjusted, the shirt waist is a stylish and becoming garment. When ill-fitting, badly laundered and, instead of reposing peacefully at the waist line it bulges at the shoulders and lets the dress shirt band show below the belt, the shirt waist is most unbecoming and non-stylish. This year's shirt waist is noticeable for a decided improvement in make. The improvement, too, extends to its wearers. The majority of shirt waists that are seen nowadays are worn with style and grace, and as one sees several hundred daily, this may be taken as conclusive. The only way to insure a shirt waist keeping in place is to have a waistband at the waist line. At the back it should also have large metal eyes, upon which the dress skirt should be hooked. The outside belt should then be pinned down in the back, after which there can be no danger of the unwelcome gap.

Here is a gown with several novel characteristics to recommend it. First, its skirt is slightly trimmed. Second, its sleeves vary just a trifle from the season's ordinary arm covering. Third, its bodice is of a cut becoming to almost any style of figure. The color of the gown is a medium shade of light blue, with trimmings of jet and butter-colored lace. Its material is crinkly silk. The skirt, which flares well all round, has in the front two long V-shaped insertions of minor velvet of a darker shade of blue and ending with jet ornaments near the waist line. The only other touches of velvet about the gown are the plain round belt and the high choker collar, over which are two little tabs of French muslin edged with butter-colored lace. The bodice is of plaited black chiffon over blue silk, drawn down tightly in the back and sagging in the front. A yoke effect is supplied by bands of black jet trimming placed across the front and downward from the shoulders. The sleeves are all of the silk, but the enormous puff is caught up much higher than is usual, leaving quite a length of tight-fitting sleeve below. This puff is apparently held in place by a big, butterfly-shaped bow of yellow lace. At the wrist the sleeve is ornamented with a lengthwise trimming of jet. The hat worn with this gown is broad brimmed and is turned up in the back. It is of black straw, with two blue plumes and a mass of yellow lace to give it color.

Another gown is of gray alpaca. Its skirt is full and flaring. Its plaited bodice is drawn down tightly under a belt and extends below in a brief but very full skirt. This bodice also has a yoke effect, produced this time by deep, rounding pieces of yellow lace. A black ribbon stock with spreading loops is at the neck. The belt, also of black ribbon, is fastened in front with a rosette and falling ends of the lace. The sleeves hang in large puffs to the elbow and fit smoothly below. The puffs are caught midway with rosettes of the yellow lace. Down the bodice front is a double row of gaily plated gilt-frame buttons.

VOTED AT 115.

A Colored "Aunty" of Wichita, Kan., Casts Her Ballot for Mayor Cox.

Previous to the recent municipal election at Wichita, Kan., Mrs. Harriet McMurray, a colored woman, appeared before the city clerk and desired to be registered.

"What is your age, Auntie?" asked the head of the registration department.

"Law me, Cap'n! Ax me sump'm easy," ejaculated the old lady. "All I kin tell you, sah, is dat I wuz in the resolutionary wah. My ole massa's Bible wuz dun bu'ned by the fiah befo' he sold mammy and me and Sophy to dat dah Runnel'Robi'son."

The city clerk listened with curiosity and viewed the old lady sceptically.

"I want ter vote for Massa Cox," continued Aunt Harriet, "for he dun gib Dick, my daughtah Cha'ity's man, work in de streets when de poo' niggah needed it."

The mathematicians and the historians of the Registration Bureau piled the old lady with questions and finally gathered enough data to put her down at 115 years of age.

"I 'spec' I be that ole, anyway," said Aunt Harriet, "and maybe mo'."

Ten days afterward "Auntie Harriet" rode down to the polls in Alderman Mellinger's carriage, bearing herself as proudly as a peacock. And she voted. She was arrayed in the fashionable bric-a-brac of a century. She wore a shawl that her old "missus" gave her in Tennessee three-quarters of a century ago; a quaint looking white cap, resplendent in a wealth of ruffles, which her young missus had given her as a wedding present, and an antique cloth cape, brilliant in glass beads, which had fallen into her hands at the death of an old maid sister of her last master, about twenty years, she thinks, before the era of freedom.

Aunt Harriet is a very sensible old woman, but she has one dominating weakness, and that is to be in touch "wif de quality." In her estimation she reached the apex of honor when she rode in the carriage of an alderman to the polls and had Mayor Cox, who was running for re-election, tip his hat to her.

But that ride—that triumphant ride—may cost her her life, for through vanity she discarded her woolens to wear the ancient finery of bygone days and caught a bad cold, which has developed into the grip.

"No, sah," she said in reply to a question. "I kean't jus' tell how ole I am, but dat town clerk done figured me out at 115. He told me I was ole enough to vote," and the old lady laughed heartily at her own wit.

"How far back can you remember?" she was asked.

"De furtherest back I ken remember is the 'Resolutionary' wah. I was den a little tot, but I remember hearing the guns fiahing neah Baltimo', and the sojers bringing a kernal dat was done shot thro' the bowels into daddy's cabin and mammy nu'sing him till he died. My massa wuz Kernel Desplane den, but he died soon an' my young missus marry one of dem dar Irishmen dat wuz in de wah. He done run through all the poo' chile's property, and in de break up mammy and me and Sophy was sold on de block to Blunt Rob'son an' taken to Tennessee."

HIS OLD FRIEND COL. B.

A Detroit Young Man Puzzled by a Striking Resemblance.

"My dear, dear old boy!" began the effusive young man as he entered a Woodward avenue car and slapped a middle aged man on the back; "but I was just thinking of you a moment ago! How do you do, anyway?"

"I am well, sir!" frigidly returned the man, as he turned full around.

"Ah! Beg pardon for my mistake. I was certain it was my dear old friend, Col. B."

"I said I was well!" repeated the man who had been slapped.

"Yes, I know, and I beg you to excuse me. It's the first time I ever made such a mistake. The resemblance is wonderful."

"Did you wish to speak to me, sir!" demanded the other, in tones about forty degrees below zero.

"I slapped you on the back by mistake. I am sorry for it. You look like the twin brother of my old friend Col. B. and I mistook you for him. Sorry—very sorry, and I hope you'll overlook it."

"Are you addressing me, sir?" came in cold and flinty tones across the car.

"Yes, sir. When I came in I took you for my old friend Col. B., and it was not until after I had slapped you on the back that I found out my mistake. It was very rude of me, and I beg pardon and hope you will overlook it."

"What do you wish me to overlook?"

The young man got up to go all over that speech again, but a plumber who was about to get off took him by the arm and walked him out and dropped him on the asphalt, and said:

"Young man, you must have drunk one too many cocktails. That's old Col. B. himself you've been talking to all this time!"—Detroit Free Press.

She Would Do Her Best.

"Madame," he said, wearily, "I'm a discouraged man, I am. I've been trying for two days to get arrested so's I could get somethin' to eat an' a place to sleep."

"And haven't you succeeded yet?" she asked sympathetically.

"No'm. I'm hungry and sleepy yet. I've got ter ask for assistance. An' I ain't goin' away till I get it."

"Well," she answered, thoughtfully, "I'll help you."

"You will?"

"Yes. My brother-in-law's a policeman, and he'll be home in fifteen or twenty minutes. You just hang around here for that time and I'll use my influence with him to have you arrested."—Washington Star.

A DRAMATIC EVENING
BY
John Seymour Wood

(Copyright, 1895, by Irving Bacheller.)

WAS SHE SO INNOCENT?

"Oh, come, come, Mr. Burnett, this won't do; you're defying the law!" said the detective.

"You must have some discretion about this thing, Swift. You can watch your quarry until the curtain drops. Suppose there has been some mistake?"

"Oh, I guess we know our business, Mr. Burnett. You newspaper men think you know it all, but——"

The manager broke in, "But, Mr. Swift, it will ruin us to have the play stopped. Suppose she's innocent, it would hurt her houses all over the country to have it known she was even accused." And he wiped the perspiration from his brow.

"I'll be personally responsible to you, Swift," said Burnett. "She shall not leave the theater, except with your permission. And I give you my word that if anyone killed Lord Holton, she did not, and I feel certain I know who it was."

"Oh, it is utter rank nonsense to think of accusing her," said the manager. "She is the dearest, nicest girl on the boards to-day; and the best girl, too. She turns all her notes and billetdoux over to me, with orders to burn 'em! She do such a thing? Oh, absurd! I guess not!"

"Perfectly ridiculous!" chimed in Burnett, who was still very pale. "I will prove it!"

"You won't arrest her now? Come," said the manager, taking the detective's arm. "I'll put you in a proscenium box, where you can step on the stage any time, and you can keep your eye on her—and she's a neat thing to keep one's eye on, too—if it don't get dim with tears in that last act, eh, Burnett? Come along. I'm sorry if Lord Holton is her father and is killed—a d—d inhospitable thing to do to a foreigner the minute he arrives. But she didn't do it, don't you be alarmed!"

The good-natured detective hesitated a moment, then said: "Well, gentlemen, I'll not stop the play—if she can act with murder on her heart 'n mind—so I'll wait."

Burnett gave a sigh of relief.

Mr. Swift looked at his watch. "It's now just 9:45," he said. "I'll use my discretion and wait; I guess there ain't nothing to be gained by stopping the play. I'm always willing to oblige you, Mr. Burnett."

"And the play's over at eleven fifteen or twenty," said the manager. "So—it's not long—and afterwards, Mr. Swift, if you will see me—ahem."

The detective gave a deprecatory wave of his hand.

"Well, show me the bix; I'll wait," he said.

Burnett grasped his hand and half turned away.

"We cabled Birmingham police at once, of course," said the detective, "and their answer, giving details of who Lord Holton was, family, friends, enemies, troubles, etc., if any, are at headquarters now, and Superintendent Byrnes is by this time probably reading a full account of Lord Holton and his affairs. A large property owned in England, sir. This murder will make a big stir over there."

"But what cause had she?" asked the manager.

"A mystery to be cleared up. She may be a relation—or she may not be—and, what is often the case, he may have ruined the girl, and this is her first chance to get even."

Burnett's eyes grew fierce as a wounded tiger's. "No, no! she is guiltless!" he cried. "You say you will not arrest her till the end of the play." Burnett looked at his watch. "It is now 9:46. The curtain for the third act rises in five minutes. Excuse me. I'll go down and see Byrnes."

Swift's heavy hand was on his arm like a vise. "No funny business, Mr. Burnett! You are young—you—like her, eh?"

Burnett looked at him. "I am as anxious as you to find the murderer."

Swift grinned. "But not the murderess, eh? You must work with us, not against us, sir. Even if the lady is—a stunner!"

"Certainly—good night. I will see you again at the end of the play."

Burnett went straight to Eleanor's dressing room behind the scenes. As he was a privileged character, no one paid much attention to him. He knocked.

"I can't admit anyone, I'm dressing," said a voice.

"Put on a cloak; I must speak to you."

The door opened. "You are very pressing," laughed the voice in its rich contralto.

Eleanor looked out upon him in a long white morning dress. It was a lovely Paris "creation" in lace and tulle.

"Is is the way I look at Auteuil," she smiled. "Do you like it?"

Such merriment in her eyes! She must be innocent!

"I—can't like to see Armand and you playing at marriage, of course. It is not an agreeable scene."

"How pale and earnest he is! Mr. Burnett, if you knew that Armand had been eating onions in his salad at dinner, perhaps you would not min... Oh, he is a disgusting pig; not that he means to be."

She made a wry face.

"I have something to say to you," he said, sternly.

"Then hurry. It is three minutes before the curtain goes up—and how I detest this most trying scene with the respectable Duval pere! It is the hardest, most trying scene in Camille—with me."

"It is what you are your greatest in."

"You are very kind. But, my friend, you have something on your mind?"

"Yes—intuitions."

"A man with intuitions! I am curious."

"I will explain. You have an enemy?"

"Plenty, I suppose," laughing and leaning her pretty head against the frame of the door. "They say every man is the enemy of a woman if she's pretty, and you think me pretty?"

Burnett frowned. "You prefer being Miss Armitage to—Mrs?"

She stared at him in silence, her smile disappearing.

"I credit you with a legal husband—in that 'brother' of yours!"

"Mr. Burnett! You must think me a flirt, then."

"I credit you with hating him."

"Don't agitate me—before this trying scene. You have guessed my secret. I—I——"

Burnett sunk his voice. "I don't mean to disturb you; but I must, a little. You despise this husband of yours. You plan to be rid of him."

"You have no right——" Then the seriousness of his eyes made her add, "I can trust you. Yes, since you have guessed it, I do despise him—yes, I hate him!"

"I HAVE SOMETHING TO SAY TO YOU."

"He is capable of anything—any step, even a crime?"

"I know him to be a gambler, a cheat, a liar, a villain!" Her eyes flashed.

"And your pride makes you keep him near you?"

"Yes."

"You married against your father's wish?"

"Yes."

"Runaway match?"

"I was a young school girl, Mr. Burnett——"

"I understand."

"He was an actor then; I believed in him. He deceived me."

"And now?"

"Oh, I long to be rid of him! But I can't yet. I will soon." She clenched her hands.

"He had a special grudge, of course, against your father?"

"Yes, my father horsewhipped him once."

"I see—capital! capital!"

"Why do you say 'capital,' Mr. Burnett?"

"Oh, I don't know; I'm glad he was horsewhipped, that's all. I have always detested his pale, fat face!"

Eleanor laughed. "He is a coward—a beast. I keep him near me because I can't get rid of him, and partly to keep him in order, that's all; and I give him all his pin money. The other day he tried to kiss me—the wretch!"

"But——"

"I told him to keep his distance; that if he tried anything of the sort I'd call the police." Her eyes flashed. "Yet, he is useful; he is an excellent chaperon."

"One thing more. That dispatch announced Lord Holton's arrival?"

"Yes. How could you know?"

"He is—your father."

She was growing more agitated than he wished, as she answered "Yes; why conceal it from you?"

The call boy sung out, "All out for third act," and Burnett bowed and withdrew, but before he did so whispered abruptly:

"Where is your handkerchief? You will need it in this tearful scene with old Duval."

"He has it."

"Who?"

"My father—Lord Holton," she said, with a smile.

"He? How's that?"

"I saw a fly buzzing over his poor bald head and laid it over his face. He was asleep at his hotel. I did not wake him, as I had no time. When he wakes, or awoke, he found it; it will show him that I was by his side as he slept. He used to call me his 'good angel,' and I feel sure he has come to America to forgive me and be reconciled."

Burnett's eyes seemed to blind her. She turned away, and a moment later Marguerite was talking with her friends Nichette, Gustave, Prudence and Armand at the country house at Auteuil. The famous third act had begun, in which respectability, in the person of M. Duval, was to triumph.

Burnett walked thoughtfully away, and out of the stage entrance. In a shadow he saw two detectives; it gave him a shock. They were waiting for her.

Murdered! How the thought of the English peer lying dead, and in dying accusing her with his unwarranted taking off, drove him to act—to come to her aid in some way, and with what intensity of mental strain! As he jumped into a hansom and told the driver to hurry, to the police headquarters at Mulberry street the thought of what she was facing, an innocent girl—nearly crazed him. Did she ever cast her lovely tearful eyes (it was admitted that the new English Camille shed tears in this third act) in the direction of that left proscenium box, and have occasion to observe that tall, quiet-looking man gazing at her? He was not dressed for an evening performance. His coat was buttoned tightly to the chin, there was something hawk-like in his glittering detective eyes, and which she, if she was guilty—the words entered his mind unbidden (a devilish suggestion, and he hurled them out of it instantly)—if she was guilty she would be quick enough to take the alarm. She would expect Mr. Swift.

If she was guilty! It would come back to plague him. What must be her storm and stress of mind as she went through her part of replying and yielding to the arguments of the respectable M. Duval? If she was guilty she was clever, and she would recognize the detective—would realize that her handkerchief had been found, would either plan to escape, to commit suicide, or to submit to fate and imprisonment.

But in deciding which momentous alternative, how could she still have mind left to act her part before a critical audience? The acting would necessarily drop to routine—it would become purely mechanical. She would forget her lines, hesitate, and, if a weaker woman, certainly be overcome. Ah, if guilty, he pitied her in that third act.

If guilty (it occurred to him now, as he rattled swiftly down Broadway, that he must consider this side of the case and discuss it—he must face it). If guilty, the motive was not far to seek, and the telegrams which would arrive at police headquarters by the time he got there would throw full light on this Birmingham peer, who, she said, was her own father.

The cab horse was a good one, and the driver, spurred by the five-dollar bill Burnett had thrust into his hand, drove like a reckless Jehu. As they flashed by an electric light he looked at his watch. It was now 10:05, and the third act was well begun. "If guilty," he said, ardently, gnawing his dark mustache, "if guilty, I will save her, and, if she will have me, follow her to the ends of the earth. Innocent or guilty, she shall be mine!"

Then he felt the cab give a lurch and swerve to one side across Broadway. He heard the driver shout a warning, then a cable car struck them and he knew no more.

A TALK WITH THE DOCTOR.

He Tells a Class of Girls How to Live and Be Beautiful.

"Get up at 5 o'clock and then follow the example of your big dog that I saw in the hall just now," said the gruff old doctor.

"My dog?"

"Yes, your dog. See what he does when he gets up, and you do the same."

"Mercy! What does he do?" asked the mystified girl in the new spring bonnet.

"He shakes himself and then runs into the air," answered the gruff doctor. "He scurries about and runs up and down the street. Then he looks out for a good, long drink of water and does a great deal of barking to get his lungs in good order, and all before breakfast. Then what an appetite he brings for his breakfast! There is nothing like a dog for giving you a hint for the improvement of your health. You get up at 5 and go out for a brisk walk, after a drink of fresh water. Go and look at the grass. The green is good for the eyes and the smell of the damp earth is the best appetizer in the world."

"Well, is that all you would do for your complexion?" asked the new spring bonnet girl.

"Certainly not," answered the gruff doctor. "The face requires as much attention as the stomach. If your skin looks dull and flabby, as this young lady's does now, you may know it needs a tonic."

"That's what I do need," interjected the languid girl.

"Yes. Well, in that case the trouble is that the under skin becomes relaxed and the outer skin falls into lines or wrinkles. The best tonic is one part of Holland gin to two parts of soft water. Never rub your face with a coarse towel. Wipe your face under the eyes toward the nose and from the chin upward. This will prevent crows' feet, which, you know, of course, men don't like."

"Oh, indeed, have we just got to please the men?" asked the new spring bonnet girl, with a toss of her head that nearly threw off one of the velvet bows.

"Certainly. You know what men admire, don't you! The trinity? Hair, teeth and complexion. And you might throw in a graceful walk and sweet voice. Then top it off with a pleasant expression."

"How can I get all these, doctor?" asked the languid girl, with a smile.

"We'll begin with the expression," answered the gruff doctor. "Cultivate a cheerful disposition. Don't be fretful, impatient or fault finding. They all disfigure the face and derange the nervous system."

"Whoever heard anything like that?" muttered the spring bonnet girl. "Fretful, indeed. Who's fretful, I should like to know? I hate doctors, any way."

"You know, doctor, we get tan and freckles if we go out in the air so much, on bicycles or on foot," objected the languid girl.

"Freckles and tan are not the worst things in the world," returned the gruff doctor. "But if you want to get rid of them, you can do it, without waiting for the winter. Take two parts of lemon juice and one part of Jamaica rum, mix them and apply them gently to the face with a soft sponge several times during the day, and again just before you get into that 'cute' bed of yours, as you call it."

"Can't we use face powder, doctor?" asked the spring bonnet girl.

"You can, and if it is good it will not do you any harm," was the rather unexpected answer of the gruff doctor. "Good powder gives a soft, cool look to the skin and makes you feel comfortable. You are a brunette," to the languid girl, "and you should use brunette powder. Never try to make your face white with powder. It has a bad effect on the beholder."

"What about the teeth?"

"If you do not care for your teeth, you do not deserve to have them. They should be cleaned both night and morning, and take care the brush is not too stiff. Teeth are not made of granite. Once a week use castile soap and prepared chalk, and on the other days use lukewarm water alone."

TWO SIDES TO THE STORY.

A Schoolboy Who Made an Original Observation About George Washington.

A certain schoolmaster occasionally compares the achievements of his pupils with the work of noted men in their boyhood days, much to the scholar's disadvantage.

"Now, John, have you solved the problem?" asked the teacher the other day.

"No, sir," replied the boy; "I can't."

"How old are you, John?"

"Sixteen," was the answer.

"Sixteen!" repeated the instructor. "Sixteen, and can't solve a simple problem like that! Why, sir, at your age, George Washington was surveying the estate of Lord Fairfax."

The pupil looked thoughtful, but made no reply.

After the class was dismissed a classmate inquired of him if Washington ever did anything else remarkable when he was 16.

"I don't know," responded the boy. "He was a surveyor when he was as old as I am, and when he was as old as our teacher he was President of the United States."—Philadelphia Call.

A Spendthrift.

"How long have you been a Pullman porter?" said the kindly gentleman.

"Two yeah, sah."

"And still working?"

"Yaas, indeed."

"Dear me. How improvident you must have been."—Detroit Free Press.

THE CURE OF DRUNKENNESS.

Dr. Keeley of Gold Cure Fame Gives His Theory of the Disease.

Some children will have the scarlet fever once, others may have it several times. Inoculation and vaccination are methods of preventing diseases which operate on this plan. The virus used is always the same ptomaine that causes the disease. This poison creates a variation in the cells, enabling them to resist the poison of the disease. Smallpox, anthrax, chicken cholera, swine plague, Texas fever, hydrophobia and other diseases are prevented in this manner:

Alcoholism is an acute or series of acute poisonings by alcohol. I believe the pathology is limited to this condition. Acute poisoning means a modification of cell nutrition, cell reproduction and cell special function. As the cells which can resist the poison the least are the brain cells, the modified special function results in the manifestation known as drunkeness.

Our school books and medicals journals are filled with alcoholic pathological nerve degeneration. Temperance literature is filled with this sort of pathology with spiritual cures.

In general terms the treatment of morphia and alcoholic poisoning is like the treatment of other diseases—by antagonizing symptoms and conditions. The true physician who has no hobby to serve and is not a slave to an edict or a dogma, will follow the methods of nature in his cures of disease.

Looking at the first general principal of alcohol poisoning, an expert observer will see that the method of cure or recovery from a debauch in the atavism of the cells, which can only result, however, by either a sudden or gradual diminution of the poison.

I know of nothing more brutal than an enforcement of the rule to take away morphine or alcohol all at once from respective inebriates. It is also dangerous. There is probably no physical or mental suffering equal to that which is caused by the complete withdrawal at once of the poison from a poison habitude. Yet it is the practice, I understand, in some of the so-called homes for the inebriate.

The scientific and humane method of treating an inebriate is to gradually reduce the drug and bring about the atavism of the cells by equal methods. In alcoholic poisoning this can be done in a comparatively short time. My emulsion combines food principles with an alcoholic preparation that supplies the needed nerve nourishment and the drug required to secure atavism of the nerve cell speedily and easily.

After one night's sleep, and generally not over two doses of the emulsion the patient will refuse liquor if offered him. He is now ready for the cure, and the remedy is at once administered and continued for four weeks, when the patient is cured.

I have treated over two hundred thousand patients by this method with only five per cent. of failures.

In the discovery of my method I did not follow empirical experiment alone. I investigated the question on the lines of natural selections relating to pathology. I learned that cells acquire an immunity from poisons by being poisoned; that this immunity lasts very long in ptomaine poisoning, but is short in other poisons, and that certain metals used as drugs will obliterate the vestigos of variation or whatever changes there may be in nerve cells after alcohol and other poisons.

Continued drinking makes the chronic drunkard. A cessation of drinking and recurrence on provocation and at periodical intervals make a periodical drunkard, so called. In one case the drinker never recovers from the poisoning. His tolerance to alcohol becomes very great, and some of these inebriates drink surprising quantities of alcohol. I find these patients as easily cured as the periodical drinkers.

The periodical inebriate has his spells and always reforms between spells. When he reforms his friends declare he will never take another drink. He learns that it is the first drink that ruins him. He signs pledges, joins the church, goes to the "home," takes medicine, "turns over a new leaf" and "swears off." He takes material and spiritual nostrums of all and any kind that are offered. He prays for strength and guidance, but his next spree comes around on time or a little earlier.

When a periodical drunkard poisons his nerve centers he soon drowns out feeling, conscience, sensation, emotion will and thought. The cells are staggered and paralyzed. The more violent the onslaught the more violent the resistance and the greater the reaction the greater the variation.

In a few days the inebriate's stomach will not bear food. He gives out generally and as his alcohol fails to intoxicate and his stomach fails to retain the drug he begins to think. Remorse gets the start, and after a spell of agony more or less severe the next reformation follows.

The moral conduct and life of this man are now the index of his will resisted by his diseased nerve cells. After a debauch his will is stronger. In time he loses his resistance by some machination or accident and the debauch is repeated.

This class of cases is as easily curable as the other. The cure restores the integrity of the nerve cells. There is no longer the periodical debauch; the rhythm is broken up.

The opium habit is "let down" in very much the same manner. The nerve cells are greatly changed through atavism by a gradual lowering of the doses of the drug. Thus when a man can live without distress for a week, deprived of his morphine, the cure is insured—as much a certainty as though he had not touched it for a year.

UNCLE SAM'S WEALTH.

A Foreigner Passes Favorable Comments Upon Our Prosperity.

In the current number of the North American Review Mr. Michael G. Mulhall, F. S. S., makes a study of those elements of power and wealth in the United States which, as he expresses it, have "enabled a community of wood cutters and farmers to become, in less than 100 years, the greatest nation in the world."

Mr. Mulhall, a native of Ireland, educated at the Irish College of Rome, has been of high repute for many years as a statistician. His experience in the study of the strength and resources of nations gives value to his present array of facts and figures, and to his emphatic declaration that "if we take a survey of mankind in ancient or modern times, as regards the physical, mechanical and intellectual force of nations, we find nothing to compare with the United States in this present year of 1895."

The growth of wealth in this country seems to Mr. Mulhall still more marvelous than the growth of physical power. He finds the wealth of 1820 to be $1,960,000,000, that of 1860 to be $16,160,000,000, and that of 1890 to be $65,037,000,000. And this last computation omits public lands. The number of dollars per inhabitant was $305 in 1820, $514 in 1860 and $1,039 in 1890. Still, there are three countries in Europe that surpass us in this latter particular, namely, Great Britain with $1,260 per head, France with $1,130 and Holland with $1,080. They, on the other hand, represent the accumulations of many generations, while ours is a new country.

The conclusion is that our country is now "by far the greatest productive power in the world;" that the intellectual progress of the nation "is attended to in a more liberal manner than in Europe," and that the accumulation of wealth averages $7,000,000 daily. "These simple facts tell us what a wonderful country has sprung up beyond the Atlantic in a single century, and furnish a scathing commentary on the books written by English travelers only fifty years ago." Englishmen now, according to Mr. Mulhall, have more correct views, while "the rest of mankind marks with wonder and admiration the onward march of the Great Republic."

A Cat That Craves Approval.

Mrs. Muggins is a very good mouser and occasionally she will catch a great big rat out in the barn. Of this feat she is always very proud and invariably brings the rat after it is dead to the house, where every member of the family must see it and praise and pet her for being such a good, brave cat. The first time this occurred one of the members of the family took the rat up on a shovel and threw it over the back fence, but in a very few moments Mrs. Muggins had it back again; again and again was it thrown over the fence, but every time it was brought back.

At last the two compromised matters by allowing the rat to remain just outside the back door by the side of the step. There it stayed all day until evening, when it was found out why Mrs. Muggins objected to having it thrown away.

The father had been home only a few minutes when the cat walked proudly into the sitting room with her head aloft and the big rat dangling from her mouth. She went up to the man and laid the rat at his feet, looked up in his face and waited to be caressed and praised. After she received the desired attention she allowed the rat to be carried away and cared nothing more about it.—Cincinnati Tribune.

THE DAILY PRESS

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD, N. J., WEDNESDAY, JULY 3, 1895. TWO CENTS A COPY—$5 A YEAR.

ALL READY FOR TOMORROW.

A GLORIOUS FOURTH PLAINFIELD WILL ENJOY.

Enough Going On to Satisfy Everyone Who Wants to Have Fun and Pleasure—Programme of the Day.

Every inhabitant of the city is fully alive to the fact that tomorrow morning will usher in the greatest event probably ever witnessed in Plainfield, and all that remains now to make it a complete success is fair weather, and that has been promised by the knowing ones.

This morning the celebrated Ploughshare Poet called at The Daily Press office and assured all that the 119th Anniversary would be accorded an ideal day in every respect. Of course, tonight, everyone will be permitted to sleep in peace, and nothing of any consequence will happen to disturb the slumbering population of this fair city, but with the first glimpses of sunrise the ringing of bells will be heard, telling all of the glorious and festive occasion that will be one of much importance from the gray haired man down to the smallest boy who can't understand the meaning of the day, but has just as much fun for all that.

During the early morning hours delegations from the various societies will be at the North avenue station to receive their visiting guests. The merchants have taken an interest in the affairs that is marvelous, and as a result the city is being decked with the national colors. This, together with the artful skill of the citizens, has been a means of giving the city quite a patriotic appearance.

The visitors as they arrive will be taken care of by the various societies to which they belong, and will be escorted to their headquarters to prepare for the great parade.

Chairman V. W. Nash has worked hard, and his assistants have had a lively run in keeping pace with him. However everything has worked in perfect harmony, and the arrangements are complete in every detail.

Capt. Wm. Hand, who is chief marshal, says the procession will move at 9:30 a. m., and those who know him need no further evidence to convince them that that is what he means. The line of march is as follows:

Those along the line are decorating their places handsomely.

There will be plenty of good music, both by cornet bands and drum corps, and the air will be filled with patriotic music that will swell with pride the heart of every loyal American.

The parade will consume most of the morning, after which those participating will be given an opportunity to enjoy their dinner.

The visitors will all be dined by their hosts.

In the afternoon the Crescent Wheelmen will conduct a series of popular games and sports on the Crescent Oval, and preparations have been completed to make this part of the day eminently successful.

The games will be concluded in time to allow all a chance to get their supper and prepare for the greatest pyrotechnic display ever witnessed in Plainfield. The display will cost $600 and will be worth going miles to see.

An additional feature in the afternoon will be the patriotic meeting in the city park, where with speeches and music a pleasant time will be spent. Major Pangborn will thrill the heart of everyone, and the good Mayor, Hon. Alexander Gilbert, will not be least in the list of speakers. Then the music, which all want to hear and enjoy will be the finest.

The display of fireworks will be given on Martine's common and seats have been provided so that all may thoroughly enjoy it.

That Plainfield will prove an admirable host on this glorious occasion goes without saying, and all that The Daily Press can say that everyone both great and small will be thrice welcome to this beautiful city.

Who Will Win Them, Fourth of July?

The prizes for the games of the Crescent Wheelmen are on exhibition in J. Hervey Doane's window. They are as follows: One hundred yards dash, silver watch, value 12; potato race, silver watch, value $12; running high jump' pearl and diamond pin, value $10; one mile scratch bicycle race, diamond pin, value $15; one hundred and twenty yards hurdle race, gold cuff buttons, value $10; two-mile lap bicycle race, jeweled gold watch fob, value $15; sack race, gold stick pin, value $9; three-legged race, two weekly meal tickets to McVey's restaurant, value $7. The prize for the chaseing of the greased pig will be the squealer himself, and he is a nice one, too.

Not Likely to Organize Yet.

The new Elizabeth Board of Education, which is Republican, will meet tonight to organize, but it is doubtful if it will be able to do so. Schuyler Sours, Republican member from the Tenth Ward, has gone on his vacation, and will not be back for two weeks. Unless a Democrat can be found to help by voting for Commissioner Mattews, the slated Republican nominee for President, no organization can be effected until Mr. Sours returns. The Democratic secretary of the board will probably retain his office a few weeks longer.

To Supervise the Sports.

The following is the official list of those in charge of the athletic games on the Crescent Oval tomorrow afternoon: Referee, Marion S. Ackerman; judges, D. A. MacPhie, F. L. C. Martin, and George Cornwell; starter, L. Dryden; clerk, F. Woltmann; timers, C. Vail, Dr. Pocock, and William VanSickel; scorers, C. B. Morse, G. A. Horne, H. S. Thomas; umpires, H. B. Drake, Edward Sebring, Carl Gallup, G. Rose, Raymond McGee.

Gorgeous in Holiday Attire.

Charles Smith's place at the corner of Front and Somersets has been gorgeously trimmed for the Fourth.

BEFORE THE CADI AGAIN.

George Lewis, the Camp Meeting Orator, Held for the Grand Jury.

The case of J. F. Buckle against George Lewis, otherwise known as "Jumbo" Lewis, the camp meeting orator, came up before Justice Crosley this morning.

Lewis was charged with stealing paint and paint brushes from A. D. Thompson's house on Verdon street, which was being painted by Woolston & Buckle.

Lawyer C. A. Reed appeared for Mr. Buckle and Lawyer George DeMeza for Lewis. Several witnesses were called, including Mr. Buckle, his employe, John Hoagland, John Goodwin, Mrs. Messerschmidt and Chief Marshal VanHorn who made the arrest last night.

The evidence seemed to be conclusive that Lewis was connected with the crime, but his lawyer waived examination for the Grand Jury and Lewis was placed under $300 bail to appear before the Grand Jury.

Crop Reports.

The Weekly Crop Bulletin of the New Jersey Weather Service publishes the following crop reports this week from Union County:

Westfield.—A drought was feared in the early part of the week, but Wednesday and Thursday brought abundant rain, followed by cloudy, showery weather, bad for drying and getting in hay and grain, much of which is down and still out; grass crop heavy; corn and vegetables growing vigorously; potato crop assured; cherries that are left are rotting badly; raspberries coming in.

Plainfield.—Crops are looking better; the ground has been so dry in some places that pease have been spotting; hay is a fair crop; hail on the 24th broke rye and wheat straw, making bad cutting; the hail was not general, but about the size of a chestnut. Rainfall, 1.42 inch.

Elizabeth.—A week of showery weather very unfavorable for hay making, but just the kind needed for all growing crops; potatoes much improved; corn looking very well; oats will be a heavy crop; rye about ready to cut. Buffalo horn fly very numerous and annoying to dairy stock. Rainfall, 1.85 inch.

Suing for a Loan.

A suit to recover $365 has been brought in the Union County Circuit Court by John Harper, of Jersey City, against the estate of the late City Attorney Garret Berry, of Rahway. The suit is against Mrs. Elizabeth L. Berry, widow of the deceased City Attorney, who is executor of his estate. The claim is for money loaned, as alleged to the dead counselor in a civil case the plaintiff was interested in.

Fought Her Husband, Now Wants Money.

Mrs. A. Robac, who recently tried to make trouble for her husband, who lives in Rahway, and forced him to give their only child into her charge, visited Rahway again yesterday morning to see if she could not dispose of some property she owns in Marion county, Fla., to her husband, and get $1,000 for it. She claimed the land is worth $5,000, and she wants Justice Frazee to act as a mediator with her husband, and get him to consent to the exchange.

What a Thought Did.

Robert Simpson was driving along Mountain avenue yesterday afternoon, and thinking that he had an errand got out of the wagon. The horse started on a run, and going down Mountain avenue turned into Somerset street, and then started for Front street. When near Emily street Special Marshal J. Goodwin stepped out in the road and waved his hat at the horse; at the same time Will Smalley caught the reins and held the animal. In a little while Mr. Simpson came up and took charge of the rig.

Not the W. C. T. U.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—

Will you please correct the statement that the "W.C.T. U. have ordered barrels of ice water at various corners, for a supply of free ice water." It is not the W. C. T. U., but the Woman's Temperance Aid Society of Reform Hall who intend to give a "cup of cold water" to the thirsty on the Fourth. By giving space to the above correction in your colums, you will greatly oblige, Mrs. J. H. King,

THE C. E. CONVENTION

Boston Preparing for Thousands of Visitors.

It Will Probably Be the Largest Religious Gathering Ever Assembled in the United States—Hundreds of Speakers and a Thousand Addresses—To Meet Under Tents.

Boston, July 3.—One week from today there opens in Boston one of the most remarkable meetings, as it will certainly be the largest religious gathering that has ever assembled in America. From the information already received in this city there will be more than 60,000 delegates present during the five days of the Christian Endeavor convention, July 10-15, and these will represent seventeen different natious.

Over One Thousand Addresses.

The magnitude of the gathering will be somewhat appreciated from the fact that during the short time the Christian Endeavorers will be in this city more than 250 meetings will be held, and over a thousand address will be delivered by different speakers. Boston, which rarely loses her dignity over anything, is all aglow with excitement concerning the coming of this great host.

Preparing for the Visitors.

All the prominent business houses are preparing to decorate extensively, some firms spending more than a thousand dollars for this purpose alone. The local press and pulpit are filled with Christian Endeavor messages and busy housewives in every part of greater Boston are actively preparing for the entertainment of their guests.

Ample Accommodations.

Tens of thousands of visitors will be housed within the limits of greater Boston. Every hotel and available apartment house has been secured by the committee of arrangenments, and a thorough canvass of the private houses of the city has been made, so that there will be ample accommodations for all the delegates who may come.

To Meet Under Tents.

The largest auditorium in Boston will not hold a fifth of the delegates who will attend the convention, so in addition to the immense Mechanics' fair building two mammoth tents have been made for the convention, and these, through the courtesy of the city, will be pitched on Boston common. Simultaneous meetings will be held every day, and it is probable that overflow meetings in a number of the churches will constantly be necessary.

Police Arrangements.

All the police officials of the city will remain on duty during the convention to handle the crowds, and arrangements have been made whereby detectives from every large city in the country will accompany the special Christian Endeavor trains to the convention, in order to protect the delegates from the crooks who will surely swarm to the city.

To Open with Twenty Meetings.

The convention opens with twenty simultaneous meetings in as many of the largest churches in Boston on Wednesday evening. Two and some times three address will be delivered in each meeting by leading clergymen, reformers and religious workers generally from this and other lands. On Thursday afternoon the convention will again split up into a number of lesser meetings, the member of each denomination going off by themselves to hold a denominational rally.

For a Cycling Circuit.

New York, July 3.—A meeting of representative horsemen was held yesterday to consider communications from owners of trotting tracks in all parts of the country looking to the formation of a professional cycling circuit. Mr. Busby announced that the Coney Island Jockey club would probably build a bicycle track on its present grounds.

CIVIL SERVICE EXTENSION.

Classification of the Clerks in Pension Disbursing Offices.

Washington, July 3.—The work of readjusting and classifying the forces of the pension offices of the country has just been completed with a view to extending to them the protection of the civil service regulations. Heretofore, as long as the pension agent kept within the amount allowed him for the expenses of his office, he could do pretty much as he pleased in regard to the size of his force and the amount of salaries paid. When it was decided to put the offices under the civil service regulations it was found necessary to change this system. The amount and character of work done by each office was carefully noted and classifications made accordingly. While this has resulted in small reductions both in force and salary in some offices, in others there has been a corresponding increase, the total appropriation being about the same. The date when the civil service order will go into effect has not yet been determined, but it will probably be soon now that the classification has been completed.

LYCOMING'S CENTENNIAL.

An Interesting Celebration at Williamsport, Pa.

Williamsport, Pa., July 3.—The celebration of Lycoming county's centennial opened yesterday. The city is in holiday attire and is crowded with strangers assembled to witness the interesting programe of events prepared for the week. The great exhibit of curios and relics is composed of over 20,000 separate pieces, all neatly arranged in exposition hall. In the morning there was a parade of Sunday school children with about 3,000 in line, and in the afternoon a public meeting was held, at which an historic oration was delivered by Capt. Clement, of Sunbury. An illuminated bicycle parade occurred last evening, followed by a Washington reception in costume, by the ladies in the exposition building. A feature of this exhibition was the singing to music from a piano 102 years old. To-day is the big day, the military and civic parade took place at 11 o'clock.

WARDEN SAGE NOT WORRIED.

The State Must Stand Responsible for Buchanan's Execution.

Sing Sing, N. Y., July 3.—There has been considerable talk that Dr. Buchanan had made a full confession before he went to the electric chair. Warden Sage said that as far as he knew Buchanan had made no confession, but on the contrary asserted his innocence up to the last. Buchanan made some requests of the warden as to the delivery of some letters he had written, but to whom these letters were addressed and as to their contents the warden would not say. Warden Sage is not in the least worried about Buchanan's lawyers bringing proceedings for damages in case they secured a reversal of the judgment which sent Buchanan to his death. The warden says that if it came to shouldering the responsibility the state would have to do this, and not he as the state's agent.

TEN REBELS KILLED.

More Government Victories Reported from Cuba.

Santiago de Cuba, July 3.—Gen. Salcedo reports that the Spanish force commanded by Capt. Hernando, had engagements with insurgent bands under the command of Aldana and Sabo at Caguairan. The insurgents lost eight men killed, and two of their leaders, Aldana and Juan Leon were wounded. The same Spanish force dispersed another small band of insurgents, two of whom were killed.

Held Up a Woman.

Clinton, Ia., July 3.—A masked highwayman yesterday afternoon held up Mrs. Augusta Ware, a daughter of Chauncey Lamb, the millionaire lumberman, on a leading residence street, took her purse, in which was a large sum of money, and escaped. It was done in sight of several people.

McAdoo at New Haven.

New Haven, Conn., July 3.—The United States dispatch boat Dolphin, with Assistant Secretary of the Navy McAdoo aboard, arrived in the harbor last evening and anchored off West Haven. The secretary came ashore and inspected the first division Naval Reserve, C. N. G.

Cape Cod Farmer Cleveland.

Buzzards Bay, Mass., July 3.—Mr. Cleveland was at Gray Gables all day and there were no callers. In common with many other Cape Cod farmers the president is having poor weather to make hay, but his men made good progress yesterday.

COURTNEY IS CAPTIOUS

Dissatisfaction Among the Cornell Crew.

Shape Forced To Resign the Captaincy by the Trainer and Freeborn Elected in His Place—American Visitors Cheer the Boys at Their Work.

New York, July 3.—An evening paper has the following special cablegram from Henley: Matters are not going on as they should with Cornell just at present. There is dissatisfaction among the men. Courtney is getting captious and fretful as the day arrives and is finding fault with the men. The latest to fall under the ban is Shape, who has been in disfavor as captain of the crew for several days, though as captain he is a mere figurehead, appointed to transmit Courtney's orders to the crew.

Courtney Threatened To Withdraw.

The trainer has been finding fault continually with him until finally he told him that he would not have him any longer in the boat as captain and unless he resigned, he (Courtney) would withdraw from all further connection with the crew. As Shape had no idea of setting himself up against Courtney, the matter was placed before the advisers of the crew.

Shape Forced Out.

After long consultation it was decided that it would be better to remove every obstacle which Courtney should consider detrimental to the progress of the crew. Shape was therefore advised to resign the captaincy and Freeborn was nominated and elected to fill the vacancy. As but one week remains before regatta day it is not expected that Freeborn will be disturbed. The members of the crew are in splendid condition and are still as enthusiastic as one could wish and it should be the aim of those with them to keep them so.

AMERICANS CHEER CORNELL.

Greeted on the Henley Course with the Familiar College Yell.

London, July 3.—The wind blew quite a gale down the Henley course yesterday afternoon but the crews were all out. When the Cornells came out in their boat they were greeted with the Cornell cry by a number of Americans on the river bank. They rowed over the entire course at the rate of forty strokes to the minute, but did not try to make a racing pace. The Canadians also rowed over the course, but the wind prevented them from doing any special work. The Dutch crew went over the course at a forty-six stroke, traveling very fast.

WARD SMITH'S BODY FOUND.

His Father Had Offered $1,000 Reward for Its Recovery.

Greenport, L. I., July 3.—The body of little Ward Smith, son of Capt. Jas. F. Smith, who was drowned from the steamboat Manhasset over a week ago, was found floating in Long Island last night by the fishing steamboat Annie Wilcox. The body was found between Gull island and Bartlett Reef lightship, some miles from the scence of the drowning. Capt. Smith offered $1,000 for the child's body.

The Russian Forces in the East.

Tacoma, Wash., July 3.—Captain Anderson, of the steamship Oscar II., says that he was misunderstood regarding the Russian naval forces in the east. The Pacific squadron, he says, is not concentrating at Vladivostock, but is scattered along the coast. Some of the vessels are at Vladivostock, but the others are so placed as to prevent any one getting an exact idea of the point where the greatest naval strength is combined. The 80,000 Russian troops, he says, are quartered in and about Vladivostock.

Believed That Carpenter Is Innocent

Belvidere, N. J., July 3.—The hearing in the case of Samuel C. Carpenter, charged with the murder of Mrs. Ray Blackwell, of Phillipsburg, was concluded last evening and the judge reserved his decision until Wednesday of next week. From the testimony the impression is growing that the woman committed suicide and the general opinion is that Carpenter will either be discharged or released on bail.

Taxation of Express Companies.

Indianapolis, July 3.—The Marion circuit court has decided that the Adams Express company can only be taxed on personal property in this state. The state tax commissioners had assessed the company on a mileage, and the company prayed for an injunction. The case will go to the state supreme court and probably to the United States supreme court for final settlement.

No Official Reply from Yale.

Strike for Increase of Wages.

Canton, O., July 3.—Two hundred employes of the Canton Steel company are on strike for a restoration of the wages of 1892. This is equivalent to a demand for an increase of 25 to 40 per cent. Recent advances in wages at other points was the cause of the strike.

Bavarian Town Burned.

Berlin, July 3.—A large portion of the town of Eslarn, in Bavaria, has been destroyed by fire. One hundred and seventy houses were burned and hundreds of persons are homeless.

E. B. Harper Dead.

YOUNG GIRLS.

INTERESTING CONCLUSIONS.

Mothers Agree on One Vital Subject.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Young girls, to the thinking mind, are ever subjects of the deepest interest.

Some lead lives of luxury, while others toil for mere existence. Separate, however, as their paths in life may lie, Nature demands of them the same obedience. All are subject to the same physical laws, and suffer in proportion to their violation.

Young girls are reticent through modesty, and often withhold what ought to be told.

Yet they are not to blame, for information on such subjects has been withheld from them, owing to the false interpretation of a mother's duty.

In such cases they should do as thousands of young ladies are doing every day: write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., giving as nearly as possible their symptoms, and receive her freely given advice and timely aid.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the young girl's most trusty friend. It can be obtained of any druggist, and speedily relieves and cures irregularities, suspension, retention, and all derangements of the womb and ovaries.

It banishes promptly all pains, headache, backache, faintness, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholia, etc. Young girls must know that self-preservation is the first law of nature.

RING the bells and let them peal again,
And may the day be greeted
With the shrill fife and merry strain,
With swelling song and drums' refrain
And cannon roar repeated.

So let us do. The good old ways
In this are past improving,
And in these fin de siecle days
Let powder fizz and bang to praise
A country worth the loving.

Of all the land beneath the sky
This beats the whole caboodle,
Besides she's ours, and that is why
We fling her banners forth on high
And volley Yankee Doodle.

Here's all that may delight the eye
Or please a manly spirit.
Plains big and fair, hills blue and high,
And sea washed shores, and smiling sky
Do Freedom's sons inherit.

Here man is man, and fame and place
Are earned, not heritages.
The tanner wins a glorious race;
The great rail splitter's sad, strong face
Looms large on history's pages.

Old Europe trembles at the sign
That bids her thrones ring hollow,
While sixty million sons of time
Set fast the pace, lead swift the line
And leave the world to follow.

Still let us lead. The cause of man
Is worth man's best endeavor.
Still run the course the patriots ran,
Still keep Old Glory in the van
Forever and forever.

A BURST OF PATRIOTISM.

BY VIOLA ROSEBORO'.

[Copyright, 1895, by American Press Association.]

Mr. Waterman and his sister had just gotten off the train at a little station.

"How do we get to Rose Shore?" asked the gentleman of a person in blue uniform.

"Have to take the barge from here," said the authority.

Emma Waterman turned to cast her eyes toward the blue summer sea that glinted through the trees and bushes half a mile away.

"No, no, Emma," said her brother, laughing. "You haven't learned the language of the point. Everything is nautical here. A 'barge' is one of those 'buses." And he began making his way to a capacious vehicle in which other travelers were stowing themselves.

The two were going for a month's summering to Rose Shore. Rose Shore was an out of the way bit of Atlantic coast where friends of theirs were summering, a primitive place by comparison, where they were going to stay at a primitive hotel and be quiet and rest themselves; where they were quite sure that nothing would happen, or rather they were as sure of it as they could be, when Emma had an abiding conviction that some amazon was liable to leap armed from the earth anywhere or any time and marry her brother by force. As they drove through the beautiful wild fields of hay and roses her conversation would have shown the initiated that this belief of her was even now stirring within her.

"The Marlowes are down here," she said. "They have a cottage. How long since you've seen Laura? They come here every year now, because it is so economical, I suppose. I wonder if Laura keeps up all that girlishness yet? She's nearly as old as I am. I remember seeing her when I was at school. They say she makes up terribly now."

"Well, the last time I saw her she didn't seem to have to make up. She was more attractive than most of the buds about. She's a wonderful woman," said her brother.

"She is a wonderful piece of artificiality," said Emma, with emphasis.

"Yes, she is rather artificial," said James Waterman in a conciliatory tone, but there was a note of conviction in his voice too.

If Laura Marlowe and Emma Waterman were anywhere near the same age, it was not on the basis that women are as old as they look. Emma and her brother were near the same age, but she looked the old maid, and he had not the marks of the old bachelor. She was of that old time Boston type that shows from top to toe that beauty in that quarter is considered inferior, that pleasantness is distrusted, and that sincerity and intellectuality are supposed to inhere in broad toed shoes and abrupt, hard manners. Withal she was a good sort. James Waterman had seen too much of the world to be so distinctly Bostonian. He was a quiet, well dressed man, with shrewd, kindly gray eyes, a brown mustache touched with gray and a respectable income.

Laura Marlowe had been a beauty all her life. Just how long that was she took ill judged pains to conceal. She was just that type of woman who wishes to deceive herself about anything she does not like, and in that Laura could succeed incredibly, but it is a stiffer business to deceive others. She had been too much of a belle from the time of her early teens for there to be much mystery to her world as to the number of her years, and it was folly for her to try to make one. Waterman had said the important thing when he declared her charming.

The events of this story took place some years ago, and if I told just when I would give data by which, with a moderate arithmetical equipment, the reader could compute how old Laura really was, but though I deprecate her concealment I like her too much to betray her. She was a brown eyed, auburn haired, gentle, glorious beauty and the most womanish woman I ever knew. She wanted to be admired and loved by everything that breathed, and she made herself always lovable. People wondered, of course, that she hadn't married, but one of her friends, a woman, said:

"Laura never looked upon marriage as an achievement, but as a surrender. She has found it more of a career to be a belle than to marry. She ought to change her views now, but she's gotten in such a fixed habit of being young and beautiful and making conquests. I don't know how she is ever going to surrender to any one unless she gets a real romantic hero, and how's any man going to be a hero these days?"

Laura had not seen the Watermans for years, and she set about making conquests anew of them with her usual assiduity, and characteristically she seemed to devote as much effort to the dry dust colored Emma as to her brother.

She sat on her own piazza with Emma one morning sewing, because Emma never sat with her hands idle, and talking kindergartens. She astonished herself with what she knew about kindergartens when she tried. James Waterman strolled by, and Laura shifted her attitude to a prettier pose as he stopped to speak, and then called upon him to come and see how well she could hemstitch, and she made a nice showing of pretty hands as well as of the table center she was working. Emma looked at her as if she were committing a crime and snorted audibly as she got up, saying she must go write some letters. Laura bore her departure sweetly. She wished to please always, but as between a man and a woman there was never any doubt which she most cared about.

Waterman drew up a chair and sat down by her, and she went on hemstitching and listening. She always listened if the man would talk.

"I had a letter from Dawson this morning—Jack Dawson, you know him, don't you? He's coming down tomorrow. Says he's got to get out of town before the beastly Fourth. It certainly is a necessity to escape all that row. I suppose the children will have some firecrackers at the hotel, and if they get too noisy I'll run over here. May I?"

"I always have a little Fourth of my own. It might be worse than the children's, but I hope you'll try the exchange." Laura looked at him with her usual soft smile, then dropped her thimble, and Waterman had to pick it up for her, and the conversation took a new turn when he brought it back set on his little finger and expressing incredulity as to its being big enough for any grown woman to sew with.

When he next saw Emma she said, "Isn't Laura Marlowe the most smooth, deceitful thing, talking to me about kindergartens, and taking so much care of her complexion all the time, and angling after you?"

"Well, Emma, I don't see anything very damaging in your specific charges, and I'm sure there is not much ground for saying she's angling after me. She'd have no use for me when she got me. She's sweet to everybody. You say that yourself."

"She's got to the time now she's thinking about settling herself seriously, for all she gets herself up to look so young—young for her age that is—and I guess she thinks you are as well as she can do."

"You are making a fool of yourself, Emma, about a very pleasant, gentle, pretty woman. She likes admiration; she's very amiable; she certainly never gave any one any ground for saying she was a husband hunter, whatever else they had against her. We all know some of the matches she has refused."

"Amiable—that's her card," said Emma. "No one with any real feeling about anything can be so smooth to everybody. She's utterly artificial, and she'll quit refusing fine matches soon, I can tell you that, what with the money they've lost and the years she has gained."

Waterman remarked, of course, that women were wonderfully nasty to each other, and added that he was going out rowing with Laura in an hour, and that he must go see about the boat.

"I don't trust her as far as I can see her," said Emma to herself when she was alone with her thoughts. "Of course she must be getting married soon. She's not going to settle down to being an old maid, as I've done. Any one would think I was 20 years older. But I'm not, and I'll keep James well in mind of her age anyhow. At his time of life he's more apt to be taken by youth than when he was younger himself. I know she's a heartless cat, always posing for somebody!"

James enjoyed his row with the cat. She was a very pleasant cat, certainly. His thoughts as he took a smoke and a stroll on the beach after he had seen her home ran over the charges his sister brought against her. Was it true she had no feeling? He could not get over entirely his prejudice, inherited from Puritan ancestors, that anything agreeable must be a little false. He did not mind the little wiles and little fibs about her age that his sister made mountains of. He liked her womanish ways and her desire to please every one, but was there any depth of feeling there? Wasn't it true that she was artificial? There was an intensity in these meditations that might have told him that she was not all artificial; that he was paying tribute to the reality of her womanhood by the seriousness of his consideration of her moral qualities.

At home Laura was being questioned about her row by her mother. She said she had had a pleasant time, and her mother remarked impressively that James Waterman was a fine man and would make some woman a good husband.

"I suppose so," said Laura and yawned. It was no news that her mother wanted her to get married. Her mother was a gentlewoman who never insisted on anything directly, but she could stick to her point indirectly a long time. Her conversation in general society was much restricted of late years by the necessity of keeping Laura's age out of sight. She did not dare talk on anything for fear of a date showing its snaky head. She could not emulate Laura's dexterity in avoiding the neighborhood of dates, so she kept still.

It was on the 3d of July that Dalton arrived at Rose Shore, and that day at sunset time he and Waterman strolled over to call on Miss Marlowe and watch the sunset from her porch. It was her custom to hold a sort of reception there, and several people were already there when they arrived. Even Emma sat there, stiff and severe, as if the sunset itself were a frivolous display Laura had got up to show herself off. She had come with a friend of hers, Miss Anderson, who had said when she couldn't get the theater she liked an hour of Laura Marlowe. Poor Laura was looking lovely in a light lace bedecked gown, with flowers in her bosom and a soft gracious word for every one on her lips.

"George, there is no one like her; hasn't been these 20 years, more or less," Dalton whispered to Waterman. "I've been a little in love with her this long time, and I believe the disease would come to a head if I were to stay here awhile."

Waterman turned and walked away without a word. He marveled that Dalton should show himself such an offensive donkey. He'd never noticed anything of the kind in him before.

Then Laura beckoned this same objectionable Dalton, and he sat down beside her, and—you could see it even if you could not hear—plainly began to cover her with fulsome compliments, and plainly, too, she liked it. "She is just an actress—a comedienne, just as that woman called her," said Waterman to himself, with unnecessary bitterness. "If she worries any one around it will probably be Dalton. He has the most money." Waterman settled himself to enjoy the beauties of nature in the most secluded corner he could find.

"I congratulate you on getting away from the Fourth, Dalton," said a young fellow named Nason.

"I make a point of getting off as easy as I can," said Dalton. "You have to take some of it, unless you cross the water."

"What a nuisance it is!" said Miss Anderson.

"I suppose we'll have to stand some smell of gunpowder even here," said Nason.

"Yes, you will," said Laura pleasantly. "I always have a little celebration of my own."

"She is too young to give up her childish delight in firecrackers," whispered Miss Anderson to Emma.

"Oh, I say, Miss Marlowe, that's hard on me. What do you do it for?" Dalton spoke.

Laura sat up a little straighter in her chair, looked around her, and, by the way, drew a corner of her crape shawl that Dalton was playing with away from him. "Haven't any of you ever heard of patriotism—of loving your country?" she said.

There was a laugh. They all looked at her a little bewildered, a little astonished.

"Beastly place," said Nason.

"We are all trying to get away from it," said Miss Anderson.

"A good deal to be said against our country," said Dalton.

"I suppose so, but it has cost rivers of good blood. I love my country! I love it!"

Laura was speaking with a feeling very different from her usual tone. They all watched her curiously with an instinct to goad her on.

"Patriotism is out of fashion. Young people now are cosmopolitan," said Emma. "You are letting yourself fall behind your contemporaries, Miss Marlowe."

The dart took effect, but not as any one expected it too.

"My contemporaries"—Laura looked about her an instant, her eyes shining bright in the failing light, her small white hands clasped in her lap—"my contemporaries should have some patriotism if these others have not. I remember the war"—her mother gave a gasp and put out her hand toward her, but Laura kept on with a quiet intensity—"I remember when men marched away at the call of this country you think nothing of, and never came back, when pa-

Bad New Brunswick. Even the Salvation Army has moved out of the sadly afflicted, reform ridden town after laboring zealously to save some of its citizens, but without results.

The Voorhees Investigating Committee met at the State House in Trenton yesterday, and after transacting considerable routine business, practically winding up affairs to date, adjourned to meet again and proceed with the investigation the first week in September.

Gov. Werts yesterday appointed John Vannatta, of Bordentown, Deputy Inspector of Factories and Workshops, in place of John Darcy, a Democrat, of Trenton. Vannatta is a cousin of the Governor. The Governor appointed five other deputies, as follows: Patrick Callan, Essex, reappointed; Joseph Winthal, Hudson, reappointed; Samuel Keys, Passaic, reappointed; W. W. Johnson, Salem reappointed; John Dunn, Boonton, vice W. J. McCloud.

HORSE ON ON EXCURSION.

Started for the Ocean But Only Got as Far as Cedar Brook.

Someone must have told John Brennan's horse about the Crescent Avenue church excursion to Asbury Park, yesterday, and if they did, that was what caused all the trouble. The horse, with dump cart attached, was grazing in the field on Park avenue opposote the large grandstand erected for tomorrow evening's fireworks, when he gradually worked his worked his way down to the brook, and was going to have his swim as well as the Sunday-school scholars, but the water was not deep enough, so he started down the brook to find deeper.

Mr. Brennan saw him going and went in pursuit, but, alas, too late, for the cart became jammed in between the stone walls on each side of the stream, and in attempting to loosen it a shaft was broken. The wouldbe excursionist was then led away, and the cart still remains in the brook.

Well Earned Rest.

Secretary Harry Manning, of the Y. M. C. A., is enjoying a two weeks vacation at Northfield.

Beware of Pickpockets.

There is going to be a large crowd of people in this city tomorrow and housekeepers, householders and owners should see that everything is kept locked up, especially in their absence, as pickpockets always frequent important celebrations, and a little care will be amply repaid. Sneak thieves are like to be around, so nothing valuable should be left within their reach.

A STREAM OF LEAD.

THE MAXIM GUNS SHOOT 600 BULLETS A MINUTE.

The Outfit Weighs Forty-Five Pounds and Can Be Set Up in Fifty-Eight Seconds. Test by Uncle Sam, and Probable Adoption of the Guns for Our Army.

Hiram S. Maxim has invented a machine gun that can be carried around by a soldier, set up somewhere as a photograph camera and fired 600 times a minute. The muzzle can be moved like a garden hose and made to direct a stream of lead upon any point. It is claimed that the stand makes it much more accurate than any gun held to the shoulder.

It has exactly the same principle as the Maxim quick firing gun used for naval and artillery purposes, but it is a smaller edition, making the gun practicable for infantry use. Its calibre is .303. It has a range of 3,200 yards and sends a bullet at a velocity of 1,850 feet a second. A bullet from it will go through 40 inches of oak.

At a recent trial at Sandy Hook, the gun was set up at the end of a long row of heavy artillery, such as those 12-inch rifles which sent a goodly proportion of a ton of steel into the ranks of an enemy. It looked something like a brass telescope, with a pistol butt instead of a peep hole, the whole set upon a tripod. Uncle Sam's soldiers, used to handling enormous cannon, looked somewhat contemptuously at it as if it were only a toy.

MAXIM CAVALRY GUN.

James Huber, expert for the Maxim-Nordenfelt Gun Company, handled the gun. It is fed with cartridges from a sort of cartridge belt made of canvas, holding 100 shells.

First of all Mr. Huber fired fifty shots. This little feat occupied five and four-fifths seconds. The bullets flew through the air 150 feet apart, and there was a continuous stream of empty shells from an aperture under the barrel. Seven empty shells were in the air constantly on their way to the ground.

As the light gun is used bp the infantry, it is important to ascertain how quickly it can be taken from the packing case and put into action.

Expert Huber hung it over his shoulder in marching order. At a word from Capt. Heath he was supposed to sight an enemy concealed in the bush ahead of him and immediately began to take out the gun. He put it together, unpacked his cartridges and fired his first shot fifty-eight seconds after the alarm was given.

Masters Twenty Languages.

Prof. H. Soerlin, of Chicrgo, says that a man who speaks seven languages is not remarkable on that account. This was drawn from him by an article printed relating to a young lawyer who could write briefs in that many languages. Prof. Soerin claims no ability at law pleading in any language, but he can teach singing in twenty. He says he is a master of the following twenty languages:

English, Hebrew, Sanscrit, ancient Greek, modern Greek, Latin, German, Low German, French, Italian, Spanish, Polish, Russian, Dutch, Swedish, Norwegian, Danish, Bohemian, Hugarian and Portuguese. He has acquired these languages as an amusement. His business is teaching of vocal music. He is tired of singing, however, and wants to be an interpreter.

Prof. Soerin talked the other day concerning his singular linguistic talents. He is a remarkably small man, 50 years old, with thin, black hair, wide mouth, spectacles, and apparently no eyes. He was friendly and voluble in conversation, and it was evident that he had some acquaintance with many languages. He was asked to write the words "God made the world" in all the languages he professed to know. He did so without a moment's hesitation, adding Chinese, Coptic. Syrian and Turkish to those already mentioned.

The correctness of his spelling in all those tongues is not certified. He apologized when he wrote the sentence in Chinese, saying "Joss" was the best translation for God the language afforded.

Mixing Salad.

When Polly, fair and deft of hand,
Prepares to make the salad dressing,
With fork and spoon I near her stand
Man like—my helplessness confessing.

Yet when I try to lend my aid
In manner meant to be quite pleasing,
She says to me—this cruel maid:
"The lemons, Tom—they need the squeezing."

The Ideal Panacea.

James L. Francis, Alderman, Chicago, says: "I regard Dr. King's New Discovery as an Ideal Panacea for Coughs, Colds and Lung Complaints, having used it in my family for the last five years, to the exclusion of physicians' prescriptions or other preparations."

Rev. John Burgus, Keokuk, Iowa, writes: "I have been a minister of the Methodist Episcopal church for fifty years or more, and have never found anything so beneficial or that gave me such speedy relief as Dr. King's New Discovery." Try this Ideal Cough Remedy now. Trial bottle free at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

It May Do as Much For You.

Mr. Fred Miller of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a Severe Kidney trouble for many years, with severe pains in his back and also that his bladder was affected. He tried many so-called Kidney cures but without any good result. About a year ago he began use of Electric Bitters and found relief at once. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to cure all Kidney and Liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c for large bottle, at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

W. H. Nelson, who is in the drug business at Kingville, Mo., has so much confidence in Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy that he warrants every bottle and offers to refund the money to any customer who is not satisfied after using it. Mr. Nelson takes no risk in doing this because the remedy is a certain cure for the diseases for which it is intended and he knows it. It is for sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North Avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

A horse kicked H. S. Shafer, of the Freemyer House, Middleburg, N. Y., on the knee, which laid him up in bed and caused the knee joint to become stiff. A friend recommended him to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which he did, and in two days was able to be around. Mr. Shafer has recommended it to many others and says it is excellent for any kind of a bruise or sprain. This same remedy is also famous for its cures of rheumatism. For sale by Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Karl's Clover Root, the great blood purifier, gives freshness and clearness to the complexion and cures constipation :25c, 50c, $1. Sold by all druggists.

Mrs. T. S. Hawkins, Chattanooga, Tenn., says: "Shiloh's Vitalizer saved my life; I consider it the best remedy for a debilitated system I ever used." For dyspepsia, liver or kidney trouble it excels; 75c. Sold by all druggists

Shiloh's cure is sold on a guarantee. It cures incipient consumption; it is the best cough cure, only 1c a dose; 25c, 50c, $1. Sold by all druggists.

Last June Dick Crawford brought his twelve-months-old child, suffering from infantile diarrhœa, to me. It had been weaned at four months old and had always been sickly. I gave it the usual treatment in such cases but without benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born, or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25 cent size had been used a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny constitution disappeared, and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by this remedy. J. T. Marlow. M. D., Tamaroa, Ill. For sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North Avenues, T. S. Armstrong. Manager.

YOUR SCALP! During the heats of summer does it become irritated and invite an occasional friendly scratch? To wash it is well, but not too often, lest your hair become "brash" and stiff. But treat it twice or thrice a week with our Petroleum Hair Tonic—a little rubbed in with your finger ends, and you will find the feeling of comfort and coolness truly delightful. ONE RED ROSE AS RENT.

Zion's Lutheran Church in Manheim, Pa., Fulfills Its Obligation.

The ceremony of paying the rent of "One Red Rose" for the plot of ground on which Zion's Lutheran Church stands in the quaint old town of Manheim, Pa., was celebrated recently. Their was a very large attendance from all the country side, including some lineal descendants of Baron Henry William Stiegel, the eccentric German nobleman who, in 1762, deeded the ground to the congregation upon the stipulation that an annual rental of one red rose should be paid to his heirs forever whenever the same should be legally demanded.

This modest payment has been asked only six times in 133 years. The church was elaborately decorated with the Baron's favorite flower, and the payment of the red rose was made by the pastor, the Rev. L. L. Louha, to Mrs. Rebecca K. Boyer, the oldest living descendant of Stiegel in the country. There was a memorial programme, including a poem entitled "One Red Rose," by William Noble, and an address by the Rev. W. E. Main, of Brooklyn.

Baron Stiegel was the founder of Manheim. His home is still one of the landmarks of the town. He was the friend of George Washington during the Revolutionary war. When financial difficulties overtook Stiegel during the struggle for independence he was thrown into prison for debt, and it was through Washington's influence that the nobleman was released. Stiegel subsequently engaged in the manufacture of bullets for the colonial army. He died poor, however, and is buried in an unmarked grave in the Berks County churchyard. In the days of his prosperity he was the most extensive iron master in the country. He was also the first maker of glass in the country. He also made some curious stoves, many of which are still in use in various parts of eastern Pennsylvania.

Feats of a Colored Hypnotist.

The colored people of Kansas City, Kan., are in a state of open-eyed wonderment over the marvelous things done by Joseph K. Williams, a young man of that city, who styles himself "Joseph, the colored boy hypnotist," at a series of entertainments which he has been giving in the colored churches. Williams is only 20 years old. He was formerly employed at Swift's packing house, but since he discovered four weeks ago that he was possessed of extraordinary powers to hypnotize people he has announced himself as the only colored hypnotist in the United States.

At one of his entertainments in the Evening Star Church, which is in "the patch," between the Armour and Fowler packing establishments, the other night, Williams hypnotized a number of colored people and had them do all sorts of odd things. He rubbed his hands over the eyes of Squire Taylor, a young negro who makes a business of diving from high bridges, and put him to sleep. Taylor was then laid on a sofa and a stone weighing about 150 pounds was placed on his breast. With a heavy sledge hammer in the hands of Ed Ferguson the stone was broken. In the presence of the pastor, the Rev. Abner Windom, and a large crowd of colored people Taylor declared he did not feel the shock.

Williams gives people an electric shock when he shakes hands with them, and he will take a piece of glass—usually a piece of lamp chimney—break it up and eat it. He has been eating glass for some time and says he has felt no bad effects from it.

She Quit Then and There.

Mrs. Mary J. Nugent, of Shelbyville, Ind, a washerwoman, with a house full of children, was a short time ago notified of the fact that she had been granted a pension of $10 per month with $3,000 arrearages.

When the agent informed Mrs. Nugent of her good luck the old lady was standing over the washtub, and without a word she reached for the ax near by and smashed the tub into a thousand pieces, after which she sent for her neighbor to come and get her "dirty duds," stating that she was through washing for other people.

Appreciative But Mixed.

"I enjoyed your lecture on the financial issue very much," said the citizen to the orator, "but I would like to ask you one question."

"Certainly," said the orator; "go ahead."

"Which side of the question are you on?"—Chicago Record.

triotism cost something and the bill was paid. I saw the wounded"—. She stopped suddenly.

"What an impressible child you must have been!" said Dalton, with good intent.

"I was, but I was big enough to scrape lint, and I knew"— Laura had began this last sentence with a sort of defiance, defiance of herself in her real uplift of patriotic feeling, and then all at once she began to cry. She got to her feet, saying: "I know you'll all think I'm crazy, but every one seems to have forgotten everything, and—and you can't, it seems to me, if you lived through all that. I—I think the southerners must be more patriotic than we are, if they remember. They fought like men anyhow. I can't bear to hear"— Laura stopped again. She had been alternately wiping her eyes and rolling her handkerchief in a ball between her palms. She went now to the door to go in the house, only turning to say, with a little broken laugh:

SHE DID NOT FEEL PATRIOTIC.

"I'll be back in a minute in my right mind. Don't be frightened."

"You've made me feel like firing a cannon for the Fourth, Miss Laura," Waterman called after her, and Emma—Emma was actually wiping her eyes. She had had an older brother killed in the war.

"After all, the Fourth dates farther back than Miss Marlowe's memory," said Miss Anderson aside to Dalton, while Waterman was engaging Mrs. Marlowe in talk.

"All the same it is a question of patriotism, and I call that as gallant a charge for the'e native land as I ever heard of. I'm going to order some fireworks down myself, telegraph for them tonight," said Dalton.

Miss Anderson, seeing the men had gone over to the enemy, gave up the direct attack and said she adored fireworks and always did think patriotism was lovely.

Laura came back, pale, but composed and very quiet. Waterman helped out the situation by proposing that they all take a stroll down to the beach and see the moon come up. That move helped every one and himself in particular, for he was burning with an inexplicable desire to pay the tribute of his admiration to Laura at once. He walked with her, and as the others passed out of earshot he began telling her how deeply what she had said had moved him, and how women's hearts were the true conservators of patriotism and everything else worth talking about, all with equal eloquence and incoherence.

Then Laura had another perfectly natural moment. She sat down on a rock and looked at him as the first rays of the big moon fell on them.

"I don't feel patriotic now a bit," she said plaintively. "I feel as if I had burned my ships behind me, and I wish I hadn't. I don't see how I can be old enough to remember all that."

Waterman had to clinch his hands to keep from picking her up in his arms then and there—she was so pretty and so dear and silly. He knew now what was the matter with him—he was in love. He sat down close by her and caught her hands and told her so.

"I never was so grateful to any one for making love to me before in my life." That was Laura's first answer to his declaration, given with an odd little laugh and with sweet eyes looking into his. Her last words that night, as he stood with her alone at her door, were:

"It's very queer to try to call you Jim; but, Jim, I never should have surrendered if I hadn't had that feeling that my ships were ablaze behind me and the other women were laughing at me. This is a kind of answer for them. Yes, yes, don't make a noise. You know I always liked you, and I had to love you when you came out so strong just at this time; but, Jim, I wasn't 12 years old when the war closed."

Jim had all the data for knowing she was 16, and he was bewildered for a minute that she should bother further with the subject. Then he recognized it as the most characteristic touch imaginable and found it charming.

The engagement was announced the next day, and from that day to this the Fourth is treated by Mr. and Mrs. Waterman as a matter for personal rejoicing. But Mrs. Waterman still veils the number of their joint celebrations in mystery, although every one remembers, of course, just when they were married, and although she can't resist educating her oldest boy in military lore with tales of war times they have again become secondhand tales—things she "has heard from others." She has never surrendered completely on her chronology again.

Thrilled All Nations.

THE BOY LIEUTENANT'S NERVE.

He Lost It Once, but Redeemed Himself in Gallant Fashion.

Just how it happened no one could ever explain, but the more charitable argued that the boy lieutenant lost his head for a moment. He was fresh from West Point and only a boy, and had never seen a hostile Indian in his life. He had a dozen troopers with him, and was beating up the country along Sunflower Creek when a band of fifty warriors suddenly appeared. It was a complete surprise, and the small troop was somewhat scattered, but the thing to have done was to rally on the bush covered knoll a quarter of a mile away, and there make a "stand off." The horses would probably have been sacrificed, but the soil was soft, and the men could have intrenched themselves and held the position against a hundred warriors. The siege might have lasted into the next day, but help from the fort was sure to come within twenty-four hours. The young officer didn't do the right thing. He gave the order to fall back to the creek, a mile away, and reached it to find that it offered no position of defense, while four troopers had been shot from their saddles during the flight. Not a man would have escaped with his life but for the sudden and unlooked-for appearance of a couple of horse hunters, who were taken by the Indians for scouts in advance of cavalry.

The officer had made a mistake and sacrificed four men. He had been tried and found lacking in nerve. From that hour he was a marked man. No other officer or no officer's wife gave him the cut direct, but he was made to feel that he walked in the shadow. Had they believed it was cowardice his resignation would have been demanded within the hour. No, they could not call it that, but his loss of nerve at a critical moment was almost as bad. There was a splendid opportunity to make a gallant fight and inflict loss upon the enemy, but he had ordered a retreat and lost a third of his men. It was too small an affair in those stirring days for a court of inquiry, and so the young officer had to bear his burden. He could not help but know that he had lost caste with his brother officers, and he could not help but read the same story in the eyes of the enlisted men. Everybody wondered why he did not resign, and though many secretly sympathized with him he was forgiven by none.

Weeks and months dragged away and then came a fresh campaign against the hostiles. One day a troop of sixty men was detached from the main command for a scout. The first lieutenant was absent on detached service, and the second ranked next to the captain, who had never openly censured him, and yet had never forgiven him for the stain on the escutcheon. After a ride of fifteen miles the troopers wheeled about to find that a band of hostiles had crept in between them and the main command. The fight opened with odds of four to one, and in ten minutes the captain and four men were lying dead, and the little force was being pushed back and surrounded. Every man knew that the boy lieutenant had once upon a time lost his nerve, and as he assumed command the lines became unsteady and a panic was threatened. Then for the first time they heard his voice above the din of battle, shouting encouragement to them:

"Stand fast, men, stand fast! Steady down there on the left and don't throw away your cartridges!"

He could not be seen a dozen feet away through the smoke, but his voice was steady and full of fight, and the fear of disaster was replaced by grim determination. Confident in the strength of numbers, and determined to make it a slaughter, the Indians pressed recklessly forward. The lieutenant was down on the left flank when the bullets began to fly in there, and a sergeant and ten men were left faced to meet the danger. He was up on the right flank when the yelling warriors bore down upon it, and a sergeant and ten men were right faced to drive them back. Ten minutes later the horse holders were being shot down from the rear, but the lieutenant and a corporal and four or five privates were quickly there and making every bullet count.

"He's a daisy! He's a fighter! He's got the nerve of old Crook himself!" said the troopers to each other as they filled the chambers of their Spencers.

After half an hour the fire of the Indians began to slacken. Help might come at any moment to the little band holding out so determinedly. There had been no order to retreat—no signs of a panic. The troopers were lying behind rocks and bushes and in rifle pits dug by their knives, and they were shooting to kill. The Indian has pluck but lacks persistency. If victory cannot be won at a dash he anticipates defeat. It was so in this instance. Surprised at the fierce defense—fearful of a superior force coming down upon them—dispirited at their losses, which were five to one, they made ready to draw off. Then the exultant cheering troopers heard the voice of the lieutenant shouting:

"Up men and into your saddles! We have stood them off—we have driven them away—but that is not enough!"

There were forty-eight troopers who swung themselves into the saddle and followed the boy lieutenant as he dashed out at the body of Indians slowly riding away. With ringing cheers—with sabers flashing—the little band drove down into the mass and through it, cutting and slashing and shouting defiance under the cloud of dust. Back they came, fighting more like demons than men, and then the Indians broke and fled in terror and halted not until they were miles away. More than forty of them lay dead and wounded. Of the troopers ten were dead—twenty wounded. And that night the general complimented the boy lieutenant and every officer had taken him by the hand.—Detroit Free Press.

COLLEGE EDUCATIONS AT A DISCOUNT IN NEW YORK.

A Social Study In An Advertisement Men and Women Whose Talents Range from Sanscrit to Stenography, Seek the Humble Work of Copying.

For the student of social science there is food for reflection in the fact that an advertisement for "a person of good education to do some pen copying for small compensation," inserted recently in the New York Sunday papers, brought forth several hundred letters, largely from educated men and women out of employment.

As showing that the old proverb about knowledge being power is not universally true, the following answers to the advertisement are especially significant:

"I am a graduate of Yale, '74 Div. am also a member of the American Oriental Society. Have done a good deal of work in the way of copying script in Sanskrit, Arabic, Chinese, Greek, &c. with all of which languages I am conversant."

"I am a linguist, and can do the necessary copying not only in English, but also in German, French, Italian, Latin and Russian."

"I am of good education, well qualified to do some pen copying for a small compensation either in ancient or modern dialects and languages. Am a teacher, bookkeeper, compiler, translator typewriter and stenographer in English French and Spanish."

"I matriculated at the London University, and took my degree of B. A. (bachelier-es-letres) in Sorbonne, in Paris."

"I am a graduate of St. John's College, London, England, and have had great experience in the line of educational work."

"I am a bachelor in science of the University of Brussels, Belgium; a good Franco-English scholar and a rapid worker."

"I beg to apply for the copying mentioned in your advertisement. I am an Englishman, and was educated at Cheltenham College, in England."

"I am an Englishman, 39 years of age and have received a thorough education at an important public school in London. I am a lawyer, but have given up practice. I am energetic, careful and correct in business, and can furnish references as to ability and character."

A young woman sets forth her references from the Young Women's Christian Association. Another has been a Government copyist.

"I have been educated for the church," writes an unfortunate young man, in pale ink, "but was compelled to seek other employment through not having the necessary funds. I speak English French and Italian, am honest and reliable, am now in my present position five years, where I have to work hard would like, if possible, to add to the support of my two little motherless children. My writing, for want of practice, is nothing to be compared to what it was some years ago."

A STATESMAN'S GREAT WORK.

John Jay Founded American Commerce One Hundred Years Ago.

One hundred years ago the Senate of the United States met to ratify the commercial treaty that had been negotiated between England and America, Lord Greenvile having represented the former and John Jay the latter country.

The controversy aroused by the provisions of the treaty, which continued long after the Senate ratified it, was so bitter as to almost dismay the patriot leaders who were directing the affairs of the government and to delight our hostile critics abroad, who had waited in vain through the old confederation days for the new nation to die for want of money, and who now hoped to see it strangle itself over a means of making money.

The treaty was not perfect; nobody knew better than the patriot who represented America in the negotiations, but he believed that it was the best that could be had at the time, and both President Washington and Thomas Jefferson, who differed in many things, agreed with Mr. Jay. They realized that the fact that England would place on record an acknowedgment of America's commercial rights, in a treaty of amity, commerce and navigation, was a most salutary achievement; that as a guarantee of commercial liberty it was the natural sequence of the political independence secured in the treaty of September 7, 1783.

Viewed at this distance of one hundred years, it may be said in explanation of the action of the opponents of the Jay treaty that in the flush of their new national life the more impulsive of the people could contemplate with equanimity nothing but perfection of achievement, especially where England was the party of the second part. Commercial treaty making necessarily involved concession as well as acquisitions.

Having whipped England, they did not place full value upon the importance of securing from the mother country formal commercial recognition for the new nation; and the success of Mr. Jay's great work as a whole was dwarfed in their eyes by its imperfections. A reply which the opponents of the treaty could understand must be credited to Jefferson, who said:

"Without this treaty our trade in every British port can be interdicted by an act of the British executive. By this treaty our commerce with England and the East Indies, which now rests on the will of the Ministry or the colonial government, is placed on the footing of a permanent right."

Gradually the controversy subsided, and the people set themselves to that development of their material resources the beginning of which was coincident with Mr. Jay's work.

Gus De Smith—I wonder if the editor of the Bugle would say a good word for our cremation society if I asked him?

Jones—I guess so. Nothing pleases him better than giving somebody a roast. —Texas Sifting.

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD, N. J., FRIDAY, JULY 5, 1895. TWO CENTS A COPY—$5 A YEAR

A DRIZZLING FOURTH.

Rain Spoiled a Big Day for Plainfield.

A LARGE CROWD DISAPPOINTED.

The Morning Started Out Well, But the Rain Made a Fizzle of the Celebration—The Celebration Committee Worked Hard But Could Not Overcome Unforseen Obstacles—Elaborate Decoration of Private Houses and a Magnificent Parade.

The glorious Fourth started out to be a sizzler but ended by being a drizzler. But in all things it was not a flizzler.

When Farmer Dunn predicted bright skies without a drop of water, it simply showed that Farmer Dunn did not know what he was talking about.

At twilight yesterday morning the clouds looked dark and threatening, and as the morning went on it grew still more that way.

The small boy, the middle sized boy, the big boy, and the man who acted like the small boy, were up with the birds and some of them before the feathered songsters. They all had fire crackers and punk or matches. And they all were bent on making noise and they made it. Old Morpheus thereat simply went out of business for a day, and the rest of Plainfield's population got up and enjoyed the fun.

About the business section of the city the celebration commenced Wednesday evening. The city ordinances state that no fireworks shall be shot off before twelve o'clock the night previous to the Fourth. Like the faithful men they are the police tried to enforce the law. Now and then they would catch some youngster unawares who had touched off a cracker and threaten to incarcerate him in the rookery if he repeated the act before twelve o'clock. But it was to much for a half dozen coppers to try cope with a thousand patriotic people who were going to make the most of the first celebration Plainfield has enjoyed in two decades. So the officers simply quit and the cracker and punk reigned supreme, while the officers saw that no rash acts that would endanger life or property were committed.

During Wednesday evening North avenue seemed to be the most noisy place in the city. The incessant siss and bang of the cracker was heard from nine o'clock. Just at twelve o'clock when the steam gong, church bells and hundreds of ear ringing instruments belched forth volleys to celebrate the 119th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, a dozen young men, headed by Patriots Rice and Miller, emerged from the dark recesses of nearby alleys loaded down with waste boxes, crates and other inflammable material. Puting them in a pyramid in the center of the street opposite the Hotel Grenada, Billy Moffett touched the match, and a little flickering flame blazed up which soon went heavenward to the height of twentyfive feet. Tony Lusardi generously opened up his cellar and for a half hour the bonfire was replenished with orange boxes, etc., much to the delight of the gathered multitude.

All the morning trains yesterday brought in large delegations from outlying towns, while a constant stream of farmers' wagons journeyed in over the country roads.

The parade was remarkable in a great many things, one of the most novel of which was the promptness with which it was started after the scheduled time. The various divisions formed and marched over the streets as published in The Daily Press of Wednesday. They were reviewed by the executive committee, mayors and councils, and visitors at the Revere house.

The line had scarcely started when a mist began to fill the air which developed into a sprinkle, which continued to the end of the march, and which finally developed into a peltering rain which made lively scurrying among the assembled crowd to get under cover.

The rain spoiled the afternoon and evening, and every outgoing train after twelve o'clock carried away as many as the morning trains had brought in. This was a knocker-out for the merchants who had made big preparations to handle the crowd. The rain continued most of the afternoon and evening with slight let ups. The games at the Crescent oval and the exercises in the city park were necessarily abandoned. The display of fireworks at Martine's common was postponed to Tuesday evening.

THE DECORATIONS.

Private Homes and Business Blocks Were in Holiday Attire.

Plainfield commenced to put on her patriotic garb, on Wednesday morning, and from that time up to the time the parade started, the decorations appeared all over the city.

The residences of C. W. Burton and Dr. E. W. Hedges on Watchung avenue looked especially fine with red white and blue bunting, and American flags, large and small. Herbert L. Moody of Watchung avenue and Sixth street, had a novel sort of decoration, besides numerous flags and Chinese lanterns. His little girls were all dressed as little Liberty's and made a very pretty picture sitting together on the piazza.

The Revere House from whose veranda the parade was reviewed, had bunting all along the sides and post of the piazza. Ex-Mayor, George W. Rockfellow and O. T. Waring, of Park avenue, decorated their houses with flags and bunting. A very large flag was stretched over Mr. Waring's front lawn.

Julius E. Errickson's residence on West Eight street, was tastefully decorated with broad bands of bunting run from the top of the house to the piazza roof. Jacob Kirkner's and W. D. Wadsworth's home on West Eighth street, were also prettily decorated with an abundance of bunting.

Liberty street blossomed out in all its glory, almost every house was liberally decorated. St. Mary's school was especially fine; a shield was placed over the door and bunting fastened all over the front of the building. The C. Y. M. L. club house had bunting hanging from the piazza about the posts. The Gem Pharmacy and the grocery of F. Westphal & Son, opposite, were much admired, the side of Westphal's store having July 4th, in large letters of bunting, while a banner, "Welcome Red Men and Patriots" was stretched across the street.

Large arches of greens and flags were placed across the street in front of John Goff's saloon and William Claassen's barber shop.

On Park avenue, Tier's, the City Hotel and the Vanderbeek building were especially deserving of mention, although almost all the merchants decorated very prettily. Boice, Runyon & Co. had one of the best in the city. From the top of their long flag pole strings of small flags were run to several points about the building.

Hotel Grenada, under the ready hands of Walter Gibson and H. C. Greenwood, took on a holiday appearance that was a credit to the decorators. Blair's livery stable was also trimmed up with bunting and flags until it could hardly be recognized.

On Front street there were many handsome displays, notably the Y. M. C. A. building, which was decked from cellar to garret in a pleasing manner. Across the street, J. Fred MacDonald's home was beautified with the prevailing colors, and the porch was made very attractive.

The G. A. R. building, Caspar's Hotel, Marshall's laundry, Leggett's Pharmacy, and the Central Hotel were all shown off elaborately with a profusion of bunting and flags. Shaw's drug store, J. P. Laire, Hallock's hat store, I. Lederer and I. Boehm's dry goods stores were trimmed handsomely, as was also Charles Smith's building. At the latter place an arrangement of greens and ferns was pleasing in effect, together with the display of flags. Berkaw's, shoe store, Smith's grocery, Voehl's, and L. W. Randolph's were gorgeously treated to the National colors. White's dry goods store, Sherwin's shoe store, Ulrich & Blatz's Rand's, and Liefke's were not not forgotten, and they presented additional features. Across Front street at Music Hall a banner was stretched which gave welcome to the Red Men, and so on through the main street every store was prettily decorated and also many private houses.

In the borough, Washington avenue and Somerset street were perhaps the most attractive.

At the corner of Park place and Somerset street the tennis court of the Epworth League were novelly decorated with the flags of all nations. The places on Somerset street that were especially noteworthy were J. J. Stahl's, Boyce's Hotel, Gesang and Turn Verein Hall, H. N. Spencer's, Crescent Hotel, Blimm's Hotel and Thorn's block. Of course there were many other decorations, but it would be impossible to enumerate them all.

The executive committee float was very handsome, being prettily trimed. In the rear was the Goddess of Liberty, Miss Sadie Smith, who took the part with much grace and effect.

One of the most elaborate floats in the parade was that of the Odd Fellows. A number of the members were dressed in costumes representing the order in its various departments. The entire affair was one of beauty.

The Red Men turned out in full force and were well represented. Miantonomah Tribe prepared their float to represent William Penn making a treaty with the Indians, who were, by-the-way, very good braves for white men.

Paugh Caugh Naugh Sinque Tribe were ready for war. Several on horse back led the tribe, then came the trailers guarding the float. This was certainly a very good one and showed lots of thought and plenty of hard work in preparing it. A hollow tree occupied the principal place in the centre while in it, a big dog made to represent a brown bear lazily gazed at the passersby. Braves were grouped about in various attitudes with all their implments of war close by.

The Junior Order United American Mechanics fell into line with a float that did them honor. In front sat Virtue, a little girl dressed in white. High above in the centre sat Liberty, a young woman very prettily costumed, and in the rear stood Patriotism leaning on a rifle and dressed in the uniform of the United States Army.

L. W. Randolph's float consisted of a wagon with two large mirrors on each side and giving a display of perfumes and drugs. An immense graduating glass was a feature of the exhibit.

Next came the old fire bell, which was exhibited through the kindness of J. D. Runyon, as he furnished the horses, wagon and lumber. Those acting as an escort were George Mehl, Charles Johnson, J. E. Huntington, Alex. Manning, Geo. Studer. The drivers were Frank Fine, Fred Bechtle, and those leading the horses were Thomas Johnson and Theodore Smith. The bell which is twenty years old, was much admired. The names on the bell were E. R. Pope, president; J. C. Sutphen, tresurer; W. L. Force, secretary; J. W. Murray, Wallace Vail, J. Adams, and Chief W. H. Voorhees.

Chief T. O. Doane was in charge of the display.

W. J. Tunnison gave an elaborate exhibition of flour and feed on a float. Several girls dressed in white added to the attractiveness.

Addis & Son's display was novel, showing the improved sanitary fixings that are now furnished the modern homes.

Patterson Bros. were represented by four wagons neatly trimmed, and F. W. Hand had two wagons with displays, and coal and wood.

George Tobin had an elaborate display of a bath tub, seated in which was a boy of dusky hue.

Woolston & Buckle, and Ivins & Co., joined in making a grand display of wall papers, and coal. The float was neatly trimmed throughout.

O. F. Pearson, with one wagon, had a choice display of bunting and flags.

An attractive display was that of J. P. Emmons, representing a chimney, with two small boys dressed to represent masons.

Fred Endress, the butcher, had three wagons very handsomely deorated.

L. B. Manning had a float, on which were men cutting marble and granite. It was well arranged.

The modern method of making bricks was an attractive display that R. A. Boyce gave on a float.

A. C. Rogers, the contractor, had an exceedingly pretty float. It showed a minature model house, and surrounding all was a pretty lawn with drives, etc.

Ulrich & Blatz's float contained a sausage machine.

D. T. Kenney exhibited one of the latest style bath tubs with running shower bath on his float.

A very pretty statue of a young girl carved in stone occupied J. E. Townsend's float underneath which were the words, "We did it with our little hatchet."

A marble wash stand and bath tub called attention to A. M. Griffin's float.

Edsall's float represented a section of the store, and on the counter lace, ribbons, neckties and a few of the other articles he has for sale. This was one of the best floats in line.

John Abbott turned out with a model house on his float which, with its yard and trees, looked quite realistic.

The World's Fair exhibition of the United States Express made a very pretty show with its two teams of dapple gray horses and gold mounted harness.

Harry Werner had a little cart drawn by two donkeys and driven by a clown.

The W. C. T. U. was represented in line by a float, decorated with bunting and the inscription "The Rum Traffic must be put down. Will you help us?" in large letters on the side.

A large clock covered most of Asa Collier's float.

George Stevens had "Old King Cole" sitting in state with his dinner, his pipe, and his fiddlers three in waiting.

W. L. and J. M. Smalley, the meat dealers, had a large steer as emblematic of their trade.

A wagon load of men, sewer pipe, and tools, represented Honan & Son, the sewer contractors.

A rustic scene was the float of the Manhattan Hotel, with bottles of liquors and wines, and kegs of beer artistically arranged.

The Grand Union Tea Company had an immense tea pot on their float.

Smalley Brothers float was the last

A MAN OF MANY FRIENDS.

H. D. BREWSTER SERENADED BY A CARLOAD OF HIS EMPLOYEES.

A Birthday That Will Carry Happy Reflections in the Future—Brass Band, Fire Works and Congratulating Friends.

Wednesday was the birthday anniversary of H. D. Brewster, a member of the firm of Brokaw, Bros. & Co., the great Broadway clothiers. Mr. Brewster resides in Plainfield every summer and occupies the palatial home of Mrs. Amelia Sandford, at 164 Washington avenue corner of Park place, during the absence of Mrs. Sandford and family at the seashore. Wednesday afternoon Mr. Brewster was requested to step into the private office of the firm at the store on the pretense of adjusting a slight difference that had arisen between the employees and the firm. He there found a committee representing the employees of the large establishment, who presented him with a magnificent basket of choice flowers in honor of his birthday, and as a mark of the high esteem in which he is held by all in the establishment.

After the surprise which Mr. Brewster experienced had passed, he thanked the committee in a few well chosen remarks for their gift and congratulated them on the good feeling prevailing in every department of that large establishment.

Wednesday evening about 8:30 o'clock while Mr. Brewster and family were admiring the beautiful flowers presented to him in the afternoon, the lawn in the rear of his house was suddenly illuminated by rockets, roman candles and other fireworks and the music of a brass band, aroused them and the whole neighborhood. As Mr. Brewster and family appeared at the doors and windows they were greeted with three rousing cheers and a further burst of fireworks and lively music by the band, while they beheld nearly a hundred of his employees, who had come to Plainfield on the 7:30 o'clock train to again prove to him his popularity as a member of the firm and to help celebrate his birthday in a way never to be forgotten. They were heartily welcomed by Mr. Brewster and his household, and were given the freedom of the grounds and home. Plenty of good music and an incessant discharge of fireworks was the order of the evening till nearly eleven o'clock, when a collaw served.

The event was also thoroughly enjoyed by a throng of people who lined the street alongside the lawn. The affair was well planned and carried out under the management of Robert F. Anderson, superintendent of the cutting department, assisted by C. F. Taylor, another employe and a member of the Union County Band, of Westfield, who furnished the excellent music for the occasion. The men marched to the depot in time to take the 11:28 train for New York, and before leaving they were assured by host and hostess that their surprise was complete, and their presence one of joy and pleasure.

Courteous Mr. Baldwin.

The employees of Brokaw Brothers and Co., who surprised Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Brewster to a visit to Plainfield on Wednesday evening, to celebrate Mr. Brewster's birthday anniversary were loud in praise of Mr. H. P. Baldwin, the wide awake general passenger agent of the Central railroad, for the courteous, unsolicited favors shown them, by placing at their command a private car, attached to the 7:30 Philadelphia on the evening of their visit and for allowing the train to stop at Westfield on the outward trip to take on the Westfield band.

Danced the Fourth Time.

The fourth annual sociable given by Court 8024, A. of F., was held in F. A. B. hall, West Fourth street, Wednesday evening. A large attendance was present and dancing was kept up to the strains of O'Reilly's latest varieties until early morning. The entrance to the hall was prettily decorated with Chinese lanterns and bunting, making a very neat appearance. The committee which consisted of J. J. Goff, Louis Fiering, E. McCann, S. Flynn and J. Flosbery, deserve credit for the manner in which the affair was held.

Will Admitted to Probate.

The will of Elizabeth A. West, of Plainfield was admitted to probate before the Surrogate of Union county. The executors are John H. VanWinkle and William A. Shotwell.

Present Your Bills.

Those having bills against the Fourth of July committee are requested to send them at once to T. J. Carey, chairman of finance committee.

MALICIOUS SNEAK THIEF.

ENTERED AND CREATED TROUBLE IN A NINTH STREET HOME.

Broke a Pane of Glass to Gain Entrance—Opened Drawers, Satchels, Etc. Scattering Contents in a Promiscous Manner—No Trace of the Thief.

The home of the Misses Betts at 203 West 9th street was entered yesterday afternoon by a thief who thoroughly upset everything about the house.

The occupants went away early in the morning, leaving the servant girl alone and she finished her work about 10 o'clock, and also left the house.

Sometime during the afternoon the thief approached the front of the house and with a stone made a small hole in the centre glass of the bay window and then pushed the catch back and he made a circuit of the rooms and halls, ransacking bureau drawers and closets. A considerable amount of silverware lying about was not touched, but a few small pieces such as orange spoons were taken.

A pair of patent-leather shoes, a dress suit and white duck suit were brought out but were left about the house. He found a pocketbook but was unable to see the $5 bill in one corner. There was about $4 in money taken besides a few small articles.

That the thief was a very ignorant person was shown in many respects. For instance, he found a handsome allegator sachel and not knowing enough to lift the catches took a knife and made a large incision in one side.

The Misses Bettts, together with company, returned about five o'clock in the afternoon, and after repeated efforts were unable to bring the servant to the door, and thinking something was wrong, went to the rear of the house. At the same time they heard a noise inside, which was also heard by Conductor A. P. Hetfield, who lives nearby.

By the time they secured an entrance to the house the robber had made his escape. They then found the house in a disordered state. A very valuable gold watch and chain was taken. It was prized highly on account of the association connected with it.

Word was sent to the Revere House, and from there a policeman was sent for, but he was unable to get any trace of the sneak.

THE PARK CLUB DANCED.

The Pyrotechnic Display Postponed Until Saturday Night.

The fireworks that the Park Club planned to have last evening were postponed until Saturday night but the dance was not. The club house looked very pretty in its dress of red, white and blue, a large Japanese umbrella was suspended from the centre of the ceiling to which were attached red, white and blue streamers that were stretched over the sides of the room. Bunting and flags artistically arranged comprised the decorations. A most enjoyable evening was spent and all departed in the early hours of the morning well pleased with the hospitality of the Park Club.

The patronesses were Mrs. Charles A. Reed, Mrs. Benjamin A. Hedgeman, Jr., Mrs. Samuel Townsend, Mrs. Henry A. McGee, and Mrs. Henry R. Phillips.

Among those present during the evening were Mrs. George Curtis, Mrs. Edward Williams, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Roome, Miss Genevieve Daniel, Miss Florence Williams, Miss Katheryn McClure, Miss Helen Phillips, Miss Grace E. Overton, Miss Eleanor Williams Miss Underwood, Miss Katheryn Overton, Miss Grace A. DEATH IN THE PARADE

Bullets and Sabres Figure in a Disastrous Riot.

Float Representing "The Little Red School House" Incensed Many of the Spectators—One Killed; Two Dying as a Result of the Trouble—Two Arrests Made.

Boston, July 5.—The Fourth of July parade of the patriotic societies of Boston and vicinity at East Boston yesterday ended in a pitched battle between some of the paraders and the spectators, in which sticks, stones and revolvers were used with fatal effect. John W. Willis, a laborer of East Boston, one of the spectators, was shot and instantly killed, and Michael Doyle, of East Boston, had his head split open with a club and now lies dying at City hospital. A young man named Stewart had his nose cut off with a saber in the hands of one of the paraders; Patrick Kelly sustained a severe scalp wound, whether from a club or a bullet is not known, and Officer A. S. Bates was hit in the mouth with a brick thrown by an unknown person, and lost several teeth besides suffering from severe lacerations.

Cause of the Trouble.

It is claimed that the trouble all resulted from the persistence of those who managed the parade in introducing as a feature a float representing "the little red school house," which from its association as the emblem of the American Protective association has become obnoxious to many persons. So great was the interest excited by this controversy and the expressed determination of the paraders to display the school house, that fully 30,000 visitors gathered at East Boston. The police officials, in anticipation of any hostile demonstration, had a squad of 350 men, under the direction of Deputy Superintendent Pierce and Captain Irish, in addition to the East Boston force, on duty, but they marched at the head of the procession.

Hissed by the Crowds.

At several points the crowd hissed at the 1,500 paraders and the school house, but no further demonstration was made until the rear of the parade had reached Putnam street, when the crowd tried to overturn the last carriage, in which rode several ladies, one wearing an orange costume. Word was sent to the front for police assistance, and a squad of twenty officers was sent back. A skirmish followed between the crowd and the officers and Michaely Doyle, of No. 21 Morris street, received a fractured skull. He was taken to the city hospital.

Nose Cut Off by a Sabre.

Stewart's nose was cut off by a sabre in the hands of Albert E. Andrews, of Everett, a private in the Rosebury Horse guards, who was in full uniform, and who went to the assistance of the occupants of the carriage. By this incident the feeling of the crowd was intensified, and when the parade broke up and those who had participated were proceeding in companies to the ferry in order to reach this city, a group of between sixty and seventy was surrounded on Border street by a crowd who commenced hooting and throwing stones.

Lost Their Heads.

It is said that a number of paraders became frightened and lost their heads. A dozen revolvers were drawn and in response to the fusilade of stones eight or nine shots were fired. The firing of the revolvers brought a large body of police to the spot and the mob was soon dispersed. As the scene was cleared the officers found John Wills dead in the street, with a bullet wound in his right side, and Patrick A. Kelly seriously wounded about the head. Several other persons, slightly injured, had been taken away by their friends.

Two Arrests Made.

The police arrested Harold Brown and John Ross as the principals who did the shooting. It is claimed by six witnesses who were taken to the station house that Brown did the shooting which killed Wills and wounded Kelly.

JOHNSON'S GREAT FEAT.

Does a Mile in 1:58 2-5, Beating All Previous Cycling Records.

Waltham, Mass., July 5.—The great feature of yesterday's cycle meet at this place was the match for $1,000 between Johnson, Sanger and Tyler. Johnson won the first heat, with Sanger second. In the second heat Johnson broke the professional record and every other record by making the fastest mile ever ridden in the world. Time, 1 m. 58 2-5 sec.

Shot and Killed the Sheriff.

Mobile, July 5.—Morris Slater, alias Railroad Bill, a negro desperado, shot and killed Sheriff E. S. McMillan, of Escambin county, Alabama, last night near Bluff Springs, Fla. Deputy Sheriff Riley, with a large posse and a pack of bloodhounds has gone to the scene of the murder and every effort will be made to capture the negro or kill him.

Banker and Protin Matched.

New York, July 5.—A cablegram from Paris to the American Wheelman states that a match has been arranged between Banker, the American professional, and Protin, the champion of Europe. The race will be run July 7 on the Seine track in Paris, best two out of three for a distance of 2,000 meters.

Canoe Wasp Wins the First Prize.

Bath Beach, L. I., July 5.—The first race in the series for the international challenge cup of the New York Canoe club was sailed here yesterday, and was won by the canoe Wasp, sailed by Paul Butler of the Vesper Boat club, of Lowell, Mass.

Collapse of a Bridge.

Fort Wayne, Ind., July 5.—A bridge occupied by 400 people, who were watching a boat race at Bristol, collapsed yesterday afternoon. Three persons are reported to have been killed and fifteen seriously injured.

Vesuvius Active Again.

Naples, July 5.—A fissure has appeared in the northwest side of the great cone of Mt. Vesuvius, and a dense stream of lava is flowing down the mountain side.

The Servian Cabinet Resigns.

Belgrade, July 5.—The Servian Cabinet has resigned, and the king has summoned the politicans.

EXCESS OF EXPENDITURES.

What the Treasury Figures Will Show for the Next Week or So.

Washington, July 5.—The treasury figures for the next week or so will show a large excess of expenditures over receipts and treasury experts figure that for the month the balance on the wrong side of the ledger will aggregate from $12,000,000 to $13,000,000. The excess at the beginning of this month, which will show in the daily statement to-day, is caused by the fact that most of the large payments are made during the first few days. For instance, interest checks for $7,500,000, issued during the last days of June, very few of which, comparatively, have yet been presented for payment, have to be met, and these will be presented within the next few days. Most of the quarter's pension money, which will reach $13,000,000, is usually paid out during the first week or ten days of the month. These two items alone will aggregate more than $20,000,000, and it will not be surprising if by the 15th or 20th of the month the treasury statement should show expenditures to exceed receipts by $17,000,000 or $18,000,000. This deficit excess will probably be cut down by the last part of July to $12,000,000 or $13,000,000.

KILLED AT A FLAG RAISING.

A Member of the Philadelphia Council Accidentally Shot.

Philadelphia, July 5.—Charles J. Kinsler, a member of the city council, was shot at Moyamensing avenue and Christian street yesterday morning and died a few hours later. The shooting is believed to have been accidental. There was a celebration of the opening of Independence Day at the rooms of a social club and one of the events was the raising of a flag over the club house. As the flag was raised on the pole there was a fusillade of revolvers and myriades of fireworks were sent off. Mr. Kinsler was in the throng in front of the club house, and while the shooting was in progress he fell to the sidewalk with a bullet wound in the head. He was hastily removed to the Pennsylvania hospital, where he died shortly afterwards. It is not known who fired the fatal shot, but a man named James Leonard was arrested on suspicion and has been committed to await the action of the coroner.

MAY SAVE THE LEG.

Extraordinary Bone-grafting Operation in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, July 5.—An extraordinary bone-grafting operation has just been performed at the Hahnemann hospital in this city, expert surgeons substituting a portion of a sheep's leg for a diseased bone in the leg of 15-year-old Boyd Folwell. The physicians say that their patient is doing well, although it is too early to determine whether the operation will prove a success. If the operation comes up to the expectation of the surgeons, Folwell will walk and run as well as he ever did in his life.

WILLIAMSPORT'S CELEBRATION

A Day of Brilliant Events at the Lycoming County Centennial.

Williamsport, Pa., July 5.—The Lycoming County Centennial came to a close last night after a most successful day of brilliant events. The industrial parade was two miles long, and as a spectacular display was worthy the event. It was witnessed by not less than 40,000 persons, fully half of whom were strangers in the city. The attendance at the exposition during the afternoon and evening was very large. A grand pyrotechnic display closed the events of the day.

TEXAS ANTI-FIGHT LAW.

Mr. Mills Says the Corbett Battle Will Be a Penal Offense.

Waco, Tex., July 5.—State Representative Mills, speaking of the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight and the bearing of the statutes of the state thereon, said: "The law of 1889, imposing an occupation tax of $500 on prize fights, was repealed by the act of 1891, making prize fighting a penal offense and providing a fine of not less than sixty days nor more than twelve months in jail." Mr. Mills is the author of the act of 1889 prohibiting prize fights.

Death of Major Sickels.

Albany, N. Y., July 5.—Major Hiram E. Sickels died here yesterday. He had served as court of appeals reporter for twenty-three years, and has issued more volumes containing reports of cases than any of his predecessors. He had suffered from rheumatism. Major Sickles was born June 24, 1827, in Albion, Orleans county, and served with distinction in the war of the rebellion.

To Race Against the World's Record

A. racing board has granted a special sanction for two class B tandem teams to pace Zimmerman in his trial. This will be Zimmerman's first professional appearance in Canada.

Gambling Law Must Be Enforced.

CORNELL IN HARD LUCK

Five of the Regular Crew Affected by the Weather.

Coach Courtney Thinks They Could Not Win Under Present Conditions. Manager Francis Hopeful and Says They Will Be All Right Before the Day of the Race.

Henley-on-Thames, July 5.—The change in the weather has affected five of the regular Cornell crew. The men complain of languor and have fallen off in their food. They feel an abnormal tendency to sleep. The result has been seen in their practice, which is fifteen seconds slower over half the course than previously. In an interview with C. E. Courtney, the coach of the crew, he said:

What Courtney Thinks.

I feel pretty bad about it, but I do not let the boys see it. I am doing everything I can to encourage them and to revive their spirits. I did not know anything was amiss until Tuesday. I then saw that some of the boys were not eating as they ought. On the same day I noticed a falling off in the time they had been making. The affected men told me how languid they felt. We were not prepared for these sudden changes in English weather. The men were trained a bit fine and were hardly in the best condition to stand it.

May Use the Spare Men.

Our four spare men are not affected in any way. It is quite possible that I will put two of them in the boat, removing two of the boys who have gone off. The misfortune is not due to overwork. The boys have not done as much work here as they did at home, and not nearly as much as is done by the English crews. I have tried a change of diet and have eased the work. If they do not show any improvement I shall stop their work entirely and not let them row again until the race comes off.

Could Not Win in Present Shape.

There is a good chance that they will come round, but I do not build on it. My own experience goes to show that once a crew goes off it takes quite three weeks to get them round again. They were full of heart last week and could have beaten any crew on the river, but I am sure that in their present condition they could not win.

Manager Francis More Hopeful.

C. S. Francis, the manager of the crew, is more hopeful. He said that although the men were somewhat amiss their indisposition was slight and they would be all right before the day of the race. The Argonaut crew of Toronto continue to improve. Many experts begin to believe that they are good enough to win. The Thompson brothers are sculling well. As Guy Nickalls has been sick recently their chances for success in the race for the diamond sculls are better. The Thompsons have regarded the Cornell crew as the fastest eight at Henley.

STABBED WIFE AND SISTER.

Then Rattigan Put a Knife in His Stomach—All Will Die.

Shennandoah, Pa., July 5.—Martin Rattigan, a miner, aged 50 years, was released from prison yesterday, and, seeking out his wife, asked her to return to him. She refused and he threw her to the floor and plunged a large pocket-knife into her body. Attracted by the screams Miss Lena Miller, her sister, rushed into the room, and Rattigan, turning upon her, inflicted two dangerous stab wounds in the back. He then fled to the woods, but was pursued by the police, and upon their approach stabbed himself three times in the stomach. He was lodged in the Pottsville jail. All will probably die.

Entertained by Miss Batchellor.

Saratoga, N. Y., July 5.—The Daughters of the American Revolution were entertained last evening by Miss Catherine Batchellor, daughter of ex-assistant secretary of the treasury, general George S. Batchellor. Several addresses were made, papers read and discussed. The guest of honor was Mrs. J. B. McKee, daughter of ex-President Harrison. Mrs. McKee is ex-vice-president general of the national society.

Murdered His Wife and Child.

Chillicothe, Mo., July 5.—Augustus Fields, formerly editor of the Polo Post in Caldwell county, murdered his wife and child yesterday and committed suicide at Wheeling, near this city, where he was visiting his mother-in-law, Mrs. Thompson. He cut the throats of his wife and child and then cut his own throat. No reason can be assigned for the act.

Another Lease of Life for Hayward.

St. Paul, Minn., July 5.—The supreme court of Minnesota adjourned for the summer without touching the appeal of Hayward, the convicted murderer. A member of the court stated that the case would have to take its regular turn on the calendar and might be reached in October. This gives Hayward another lease of life.

WOMAN'S SUFFERING.

RELIEVED BY MAIL. HOW IT IS DONE.

How a Woman Works for Her Sex.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Seated at her desk in the bureau of correspondence, this wonderful woman opens her letters from all parts of the world. A few extracts from their contents tell the story.—

FROM IOWA. "I am in a very bad condition. My courses have stopped from catching cold, and the pain is fearful. I am all bloated up, and the pain in lower part of my body is terrible. My back and head ache all the time. What shall I do for it?" Miss L——, Des Moines.

FROM NEW JERSEY. Mrs. Lizzie DeCline, 224 Grand Street, Jersey City, relates her miseries resulting from womb trouble, from which she was relieved and cured by the timely use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She ends her letter by saying, "I owe all to you."

FROM OHIO. Mrs. Newton Cobb, of Manchester, O., writes: "I used eight bottles of your Vegetable Compound, and I am happy to say it has cured me of painful menstruations and backache. My suffering every month was dreadful. The doctors gave me morphine to ease the pain; nothing to cure me. Oh, I want to tell everyone what cured me! I wish every suffering woman would write and get your advice."

FROM ILLINOIS. Miss Jennie ——, Chicago, states that she is twenty-two years of age; occupation, saleswoman in large dry goods store. Constant standing has brought on womb trouble, the symptoms of which she describes fully. She says: "Help me if you can. There are several girls I know who have written to Mrs. Pinkham, and been cured by her advice and medicine."

FROM PENNSYLVANIA. Miss Mary Smylie, who resides at 2078 E. Susquehanna Avenue, Kensington, Phila., writes: "I am a working-girl, and must stand eleven hours every day. I have suffered terribly from painful menstruations and kidney trouble. At times my head was so dizzy I could hardly see. A friend recommended your Vegetable Compound. I am a different girl now; no more aches and pains. Oh, thank you, thank you!"

The above extracts from many hundred letters received daily by Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., go to show how easily ailing women can obtain advice and relief. Write to Mrs. Pinkham.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the most successful female medicine known to the world, can be obtained of any druggist in the land.

AFFAIRS AT ST. JOHNS

Queen's Assent Required on Retrenchment Bill.

Gov. O'Brien Refused To Act in the Matter—The Measure Reduces the Salary of Every Official in the Colony—Contingencies Act Denounced.

St. Johns, N. F., July 5.—Governor O'Brien has refused to assent to the retrenchment bill, and reserved it for the queen's assent. It must now go before the British cabinet. The governor's action created great surprise. If the imperial cabinet sustains his action the whole retrenchment plan of the Whitewayites will suddenly collapse. The bill fixes the future salary of every official and civil servant in the colony at reduced rates.

Governor's Salary Reduced $5,000.

It especially defines the salary of the governor, which is reduced by $5,000. The salary of the chief justice is reduced by $1,000, and the salaries of the assistant judges of the supreme court are reduced by $800 each. The opposition party opposed these reductions, specially, because the governor's present salary, $12,000, was fixed after a lengthy correspondence with the imperial authorities, he being unable to live on anything less here and maintain the dignity of the position.

Why Judges Salaries Were Reduced.

Respecting the reductions of the judges' salaries, it is generally admitted that they were reduced as a punishment for disqualifying the Whitewayites last year, and strong arguments are adduced to show that if the reduction is permitted the impartiality of the courts will be jeopardized. The opposition contended that the government put these salaries in separate bills so as to escape the danger of a veto. If the bill is vetoed all the salaries will remain at the old rates.

Thanks the United States.

The governor in his farewell speech to the legislature reviewed the occurrences of the past six months. He thanked the people of the United States, England and Canada for their generous relief. He stated that great benefits were resulting from Sir Herbert Murray's mission in increased fishery outfits. He announced a fine seal fishery and good prospects for the cod fishery. Governor O'Brien sails within three weeks. The prerogation ceremony was the most imposing of recent years.

Contingencies Bill Denounced.

The contingencies bill for the sessional expenses just passed is greated with denunciations by the whole populace. Mr. Johnson, chairman of the contingencies committee, resigned in disgust at what he considered the unjustifiable appropriations. The total expenses of the session amounted to $34,000, being $3,000 more than the combined expenses of the regular and special sessions last year. The members of both houses voted full sessional pay to the officials. A number of these also received bonuses.

Supporters Provided For.

Liberal sops were given to the newspapers supporting the government. Many prominent supporters were likewise provided for. When their disregard of recent promises of retrenchment was discussed several Whitewayites declared that they were going to get their share now, because they did not know when they would get a chance again.

GOING STRAIGHT TO GLORY.

Triple Hanging of Negroes at Mayersville, Miss.

Vicksburg, Miss., July 5.—Twenty-five hundred people from all parts of Issaquena county witnessed a triple hanging at Mayersville. The criminals were Bill Purvie, Griffin Hubbard and Grant Wilson, all negroes. Each made a speech on the scaffold, confessing the crime, but saying that he had been forgiven and was going straight to glory. The negroes were convicted of the murder of Dr. King, owner of a trading boat lying at Carolina landing.

Many distinguished Americans were present.

Military Balloon Explodes.

Berlin, July 5.—A military balloon exploded yesterday in the shed of one of the barracks. Three soldiers were injured, and one of them has since died

FOUGHT FOR HIS LIFE.

Policeman Imprisoned by a Negro Carved with a Knife.

Brooklyn, July 5.—Policeman Patrick Shea, of the Coney Island squad, had a desperate fight in a small room last night with a negro named George Dennison, whom he had to club into insensibility before he could take him to the lockup. Dennison is the owner of a string of race horses, and has a cottage on West Third street, in a section of Coney Island, which is known as the "Gut." Gussie Harper, a colored woman, has been living in the cottage. Last night Dennison drove the woman into the street in the pouring rain almost nude. She met Policeman Shea and told him the story of the negro's treatment. Shea went to the cottage with her and demanded the young woman's clothing. He was met at the door by Dennison, who said, "certainly," and invited the policeman to come in. When the latter stepped into an inner room, the negro snapped the spring lock on the door and grabbed a big knife and went at the officer. Before the latter had a chance to swing his club his hands were severely cut and his clothes were badly torn. The policeman immediately saw it was a fight for his life, and banged Dennison right and left over the head and face for almost fifteen minutes, when the negro, weak from the loss of blood and well stunned, dropped to the floor unconscious. An ambulance was summoned, and both men were taken to the West Brighton police station. There their injuries were dressed by Dr. Holmes, and Dennison was locked up.

FORTY PEOPLE INJURED.

The Grand Stand at the Buffalo Driving Park Gave Way.

Buffalo, July 5.—While 10,000 people sat in the new grand stand at the Buffalo Driving park yesterday afternoon, a section of the stand fell. The cause was a weak stairway, which held forty or fifty people at the time. Underneath the stairway was a wine room which had been crowded with people only a moment before. They were climbing back to their seats in the stand to witness the start of a race when the accident occurred. In caving in so suddenly the stairway took with it a section of the grand stand and piled about sixty people, men, women and children in a mass. The immense crowd stood up in their seats and rushed toward the stairway and then back from it again. In the stampede women fainted and were trampled upon, while others jumped from the stand to the ground and in other ways contributed to the excitement. After the stand had been cleared the people were held back with difficulty, while those who had fallen were extricated. Carriages were soon at hand and took to their homes about forty men and women who were more or less injured in the fall or the rush or who suffered from the shock. The ambulances were soon on the scene and a number of the injured were transferred to the different city hospitals. Several suffered serious injuries.

ENGLAND'S CABINET'S POLICY.

If Carried Out It Will Improve the the Artisan Classes.

London, July 5.—The Chronicle will to-day publish what is purported to be a confidential document, summarizing the government's policy under three heads. Under the first head is the imperial policy, including a strong navy. The second head is devoted to the colonial policy, including the development of Africa and improved facilities of intercourse between the mother country and the colonies. The third head treats of the domestic policy, embracing poor law reform, restriction of the immigration of pauper aliens, fiscal reform, the amending of the employers' liability act, improved dwellings for the poor, facilities to enable workingmen to purchase dwellings, agricultural legislation and other matters.

ESCAPED FROM LUDLOW.

Three Desperate Postoffice Robbers Hold-up Two Keepers.

New York, July 5.—Joseph Killoran, Harry Russell and Charles Allen, the three desperate men who robbed the postoffice at Springfield, Ill., and Hoboken, N. J., escaped from Ludlow street jail early in the morning. The men were provided with revolvers and had evidently carefully planned the escape. They made their attempt at a time when but one keeper was in sight and catching him unarmed levelled their pistols at him, and made him throw up his hands. Killoran and Russell held their revolvers at the keeper's head, while Allen jerked the keys from his grasp. Edward Schneer, the keeper, had just entered the prison as the prisoners were coming from their cells to take their daily exercise.

Granted Another Increase.

Chicago, July 5.—The furnace men of the South Chicago plant of the Illinois Steel company have been granted an increase of 15 per cent. over the 10 per cent. increase in wages which was given them voluntarily by the company July 1. The increase affects the wages of over 500 men. The men claimed that the voluntary increases invalidated their contract with the company, and being insufficient, they asked for more.

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH

How the Day of Independence Was Celebrated.

Plenty of Fireworks and the Usual Amount of Fires and Accidents. Labor Demonstrations the Order of the Day in Chicago—Rain Dampened the Ardor in Connecticut.

New York, July 5.—Notwithstanding the rain the ardor of the young American was not dampened by the atmospheric conditions, and from daybreak until almost midnight the explosion of firecrackers was to be heard in all portions of the city. As the gun from old Castle William boomed forth the hour of sunrise the Anderson Zouaves raised the Stars and Stripes over the Battery. Then, as Old Glory swung to the breeze, the bands played the national anthem, and cheer after cheer went up. Four o'clock in the morning is the usual hour for raising the flag over the the old Block house and Fort Fisher in Central Park, near 110th street, on each Fourth of July, but this year it was half an hour later when Old Glory fluttered in the breeze over these historic spots. Nearly four hundred men and a few women and children turned out of their beds and made their way to Central Park just as the first rays of light appeared in the cloudy sky.

Presented to the City.

For years the statue of Samuel Sullivan Cox has stood at Astor place and Fourth avenue, emblematic of the love and esteem in which he was held by the letter carriers of the United States. Yesterday, four years after its unveiling, it was presented to the city of New York.

No Official Celebration in Brooklyn.

Brooklyn, July 5.—The only public celebration in Brooklyn was at Bay Ridge and Fort Hamilton, where three wards had their second joint annual celebration. The ceremonies began this morning at 7 o'clock. At that hour a big flag was unfurled from the end of a high pole in Holden's field, on Cedar lane, between Second and Third avenues. A national salute of twenty-one guns was then fired to the stars and stripes. At 10 o'clock a parade of school children took place, which was concluded at 10:30. The children then went to Holden's field, where public exercises took place. This is the first year in many that Brooklyn has had no official celebration of any kind, but her citizens celebrated anyhow.

New Liberty Pole at Buffalo.

Buffalo, July 5.—Independence Day was celebrated here as it has not been in many years. The day opened with a grand parade and the dedication of the new liberty pole on the terrace. Fully fifty thousand people were gathered along the line of march and in the vicinity of the pole, and the procession was one of the largest ever seen in this city. Ball games and bicycle races formed the chief amusements.

The Day in Connecticut.

New Haven, Conn., July 5.—A heavy storm which prevailed here all day prevented any Independence Day celebration. Picnics, baseball games and outings were spoiled and fireworks were retained till evening. The parade of the Harugari societies of the state took place in the early morning and was a successful affair. Mayor Hendrick enforced more stringently than usual the city ordinance prohibiting bonfires, and there were many arrests on that account. The celebrations throughout the state were quiet and few accidents were reported.

Observance at Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, July 4.—Philadelphia observed the national birthday with an ardor that it has never surpassed. The various patriotic orders met at Independence hall and in the chapel of liberty, listened to the reading of the declaration of independence and several addresses in commemoration of the day. With all the shooting that went on accidents were certain to happen, and the list last night, besides several scores of minor casualties, includes one man shot dead, two dying and one woman fatally hurt.

Bigelow Monument Unvailed.

Pittsburg, July 5.—Independence Day was celebrated in a patriotic manner in this city. Fully one hundred thousand people visited Schenley park, where the exercises of the day were held. Governor Hastings arrived in the city in the morning and was driven to the park where he delivered a patriotic address. One of the happy features of the programme was the unvailing of the Bigelow memorial monument at the Schenley park. Mr. Bigelow is director of the department of public works and is probably the first man in this country who has had a monument erected in his honor while still living.

Labor Demonstrations in Chicago.

Chicago, July 5.—Labor demonstrations was the order of the day in this city, and one of the greatest patriotic demonstrations of organized labor under the auspices of the Illinois State Federation of Labor and the Trade and Labor assembly of Chicago was held The star speakers of the day were Vice-President Stevenson and Gov. McKinley. Over 20,000 people visited Sharpshooters park during the day. Music, dancing and athletic sports continued from early morning till late in the evening. It was a day off for the laboring man and his family and a large number of them chose to spend their time at the picnic.

Entirely Spontaneous.

San Francisco, July 5.—The patriotism of Americans never has been displayed with more intensity than in the Fourth of July celebrations here on the Pacific coast. Especially in San Francisco, and in Los Angeles, the metropolitan city of the south, the national spirit assumed a degree of enthusiasm which only some new inspiration or a new birth of liberty might be expected to evoke. Yet it was entirely spontaneous and distintly American.

Wellington, O., in Flames.

Cleveland, O., July 5.—Wellington, a town of 7,000 people is reported to have been destroyed by fire last night. Help was asked from this city, and engine and hose wagon started for the scene.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A DRIZZLING FOURTH.

in the procession, but not the least. In the front, one of their clerks cut and chopped meat in the most accomplished manner. Prettily dressed children were grouped in the centre, while a pen containing several sheep occupied the rear of the float.

The Crescent Wheelmen had a very pretty float with a large crescent, surrounded by two safeties and an old ordinary high wheel. William Van Sickel put his efforts on this float, instead of arranging one for himself.

HERE AND THERE.

Interesting Minor Incidents of the Day Picked Up at Different Points.

—Many of the citizens will long remember the Indians with the long name, Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque, whose float was admired by all, and the visiting band of Indians of Owaliga and Oliander tribes, of New Brunswick. They were without a doubt the life of the parade. The little pony, led by an Indian chief, was the pet of the children. The young bull saddled and ridden by an Indian was a feature. For one of the best equipped floats in the line credit must be given this tribe. The idea was entirely original with their four beautiful black horses, each horse led by an experienced colored coachman in full Continental livery, and the handsome Newfoundland dog, which many thought was a bear, weighing 200 pounds, and the gorgeous costumed Indians upon the float, was the admiration of all. It was so arranged that the colors of the order were unfurled to the pure American breeze. The designer of this handsome and original float was that popular Indian, John H. Carney. It was built by those ever-willing Indians, Messrs. Harris, Neal, and Clark; artistically decorated by the rising young decorator, J. Wm. Klein. Immediately after the parade the guests were escorted to their wigwam, where an elaborate spread was in waiting for them. The reception committee was Messrs. Conover, Van Arsdale, Serrell, Allen, L. K. Clark, and Elmer H. Neal.

—The dinner of the executive committee and their guests took place in the afternoon at one o'clock in the dining room of the Revere House. Those present were Vincent W. Nash, Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Major Z. K. Pangborn of Jersey City, Sheriff Kyte of Fanwood, James E. Martine, Councilmen Frazee, Westphal, Moore and Bird, Charles M. Ulrich, Louis G. Timpson, M. J. Cashen, F. A. Long, Eugene M. Laing, William T. Kirk and ex-Mayor George W. Rockafellow. After a most enjoyable dinner, the party adjorned to the wide veranda where Drake's Band discoursed sweet music until half past past three o'clock.

—The East End Hook and Ladder Company, of Somerville, came to Plainfield yesterday expecting to parade, but in driving over the heavy roads between Bound Brook and Dunellen the rear axle of the truck was sprung and so weakened that it was not possible to join in the parade. The company instead drew up in front of the City Park and allowed the parade to pass by them and then joined their brethren of this city. The Liberty Hose Company and the Washington Engine Company, both of New Brunswick, brought about twenty-five men to Plainfield, but did not parade. No apparatus was brought.

—The absense of Packer's beautiful furniture float in the parade was owing to an unfortunate accident. William Klein, the driver, was going up Richmond street to get in line of the La-Grande avenue division, and when he neared the railroad bridge he thought that he would investigate as to whether or not the float would pass under the structure. He understood the man who investigated to say "come ahead." The result was that the top of the float came in contact with the bridge, wrecking the whole affair and badly injuring the display of costly inlaid furniture.

—A cranky rocket plunged up against the side of Mr. Brewster's barn on Wednesday evening, instead of going skyward. Mr. Brewster's coachman quickly had a stream on it from the cellar hose and prevented the building from taking fire.

—The Press is able to state that the grand stand erected on Park avenue to witness the fireworks is the enterprise of a private individual and not the work of the general committee on celebration. Admission to the stand will be 50 and 75 cents.

—Mr. Edsall is entitled to special praise inasmuch as he was the only house in his line represented in the parade, and he spared no pains or expense to contribute so liberally to the success of the celebration.

—The invited guests, besides the city and borough officials, that rode in the parade were James E. Martine, of this city, Major Z. K. Pangborn, of Jersey City, and Sheriff George Kyte, of Fanwood.

—B. B. Western's lawn on Washington avenue, was appropriately decorated yesterday with a large bust of President Cleveland, draped with the American flag.

—Mrs. Oscar Terry, of 321 West Front street, had her dress burned by firecrackers last night, and but for the timely entrance of Mrs. H. T. Bower, her next-door neighbor, it might have proved quite serious.

—The North Plainfield fire gong was very patriotic at twelve o'clock on the morning of the Fourth, with its long one minute blast.

—The free water barrals of the Woman's Temperance Aid Society was an appreciated feature of the day.

—Drake's band serenaded the Hotel Grenada yesterday afternoon before leaving for Elizabeth.

—The W. C. T. U. wants to thank the ice companies for the ice they furnished yesterday.

—Wallie Miller wears a different pair of trousers today.

—The day was remarkably free of accidents.

INS AND OUTS.

Stages will run to and from the Y. M. C. A. building via Front street and Park avenue to the Crescent Oval for accommodation of the hundreds of cranks who are going to see the old Crescents play ball tomorrow afternoon.

Only One Fire Yesterday.

The only accident that occurred from fireworks last evening was the burning of the bunting from the front of the Courier-News building. A small boy on the opposite side of the street was doing his best to be patriotic and shot off a sky-rocket which lodged in the bunting just over the awning. For a moment it blazed away by itself, then Sergeant Kiely, who was standing near by, saw the flames run along the bunting.

He sent in an alarm from Box 12 at 9:05. The fire whistle blew one blast and then stopped, but in one and a-half minutes the Alert Hose and the Gazelle Engine companies had a stream of water ready and quickly extinguished the flames. The windows in the third floor opening into Vroom's paint shop were open, but the firemen were careful, and very little damage was done except to the bunting.

—The Fourth was celebrated at the residence of H. J. Smith, in the Notch, by about forty friends from New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Metuchen and Plainfield. A fine pyrotechnic display was had in spite of the inclement weather.

EARLY MORNING SCRAPPERS.

Marshal Doud Tried to Part Them and Was Knocked Down.

A disgraceful scene was witnessed at Zeller & White's beer bottling establishment on Somerset street between twelve and one o'clock yesterday noon. A young man not over nineteen years of age had some differences with Mr. Zeller in regards to a lot of bottles on which he claimed he had made a deposit, and it seemed that neither one was able to agree.

The young man, whom no one seemed to know, took the bottles into the back yard and broke them, and brought several pieces of the glass back showing them to Mr. Zeller.

Two or three young men stood around, one of whom had too much to say. Just then Marshal Doud, who was not on duty, and who stood talking to some friends on the corner rushed up and tried to separate the two men. Mr. Zeller received two very bad cuts on his right forearm, either with a knife or a piece of the glass.

Marshall Doud in attempting to quiet the disturbance received a severe blow in the back of the neck, which threw him, and at the same time someone kicked him.

He got up as quickly as possible and tried to capture the unknown, but failed. Another one in the party was also knocked down. The party escaped and as yet have not been caught.

Several warrants have been issued for those in the crowd that are known and the unknown will no doubt be apprehended.

A horse kicked H. S. Shafer, of the Freemyer House, Middleburg, N. Y., on the knee, which laid him up in bed and caused the knee joint to become stiff. A friend recommended him to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which he did, and in two days was able to be around. Mr. Shafer has recommended it to many others and says it is excellent for any kind of a bruise or sprain. This same remedy is also famous for its cures of rheumatism. Last June Dick Crawford brought his twelve-months-old child, suffering from infantile diarrhœa, to me. It had been weaned at four months old and had always been sickly. I gave it the usual treatment in such cases but without benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born, or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25 cent size had been used a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny constitution disappeared, and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by this remedy. J. T. Marlow, M. D., Tamaroa, Ill. WHITELAW REID'S WHISKERS.

He Brought Them Home From His Trip Around the World.

Whitelaw Reid, editor of the Tribune and last campaign's Republican candidate for the vice-presidency, arrived recently in New York from a year's trip abroad, wearing a brand new set of whiskers, grown in the land of Egypt. Advance notices had it that they had been developed as a hedge against Sahara sand.

While Mr. and Mrs. Reid were encamped in the desert the whole party were very nearly overwhelmed by a sand storm. It began in the middle of the night. The first gust swept the tent from its fastenings and spread the suffocating canvas over the sleepers. Then it was swept away into the night, leaving them all at the mercy of the blinding, choking clouds of sand. The minute particles cut into their flesh, got in their eyes and mouths and buried them in its drifts. It flowed down their backs, filled their shoes and every fold in their clothes. The force of the blasts blew the particles even through the chinks in their trunks, and when the bags and boxes were opened later they were found to be full of sand. The almost imperceptible particles were driven between the leaves of the books in these bags and boxes. The storm lasted seven hours.

At the outbreak of the storm the camel drivers, who had seen such things before, piled the camel saddles about Mr. and Mrs. Reid and covered their heads with blankets. Then they built up a bulwark of trunks and lay prostrate while the suffocating blasts continued. The seven hours of the storm were hours of agony. Every one in the party was almost suffocated by the sand and when it was over they arose as if from the dead. The faces of all were cut and sore from the flying sand and their eyes were red and aching.

The Wheel.

The discovery and progressive improvement of the bicycle is of more importance to mankind than all the victories and defeats of Napoleon, with the first and second Punic wars and any number of other clamorous historic conflicts thrown in.

It is not only in the first steps of its progress, though it has made its way around the world, and is everywhere extending its field of use with marvelous rapidity. All European countries use it, and it has spun over the Asian border, bewildering the leisurely and sedate Orientals with its lightness and brightness and speed, as of gazelles and dromedaries, and it is quite possible that the Grand Turk and the Sheik ul Islam may in no long time adopt them, not only in private use, but in their ceremonial processions, giving them official and religious sanction and encouraging the faithful to follow their example.

"The bicycle gives people the best exercise in the world," said the doctor.

"But I can't afford to ride a bicycle."

"Oh, you don't need to ride them."

Time and Step.

"Sometimes," said an old soldier, "one sees the captain of a company marching proudly along in time with the music but out of step; the company right, the captain wrong. Distressing. But then I have seen a musician marching out of step to the music of his own band, and there is now and then a soldier who never really learns to keep step. The familiar order is: 'Left, left, left, left; the left foot down at the heavy tap of the drum.'"

MUNN & CO., NEW YORK, 361 BROADWAY

BY
John Seymour Wood

(Copyright, 1895, by Irving Bacheller.)

DURING THE THIRD ACT.

He knew no more until he found himself sitting on the curb, and feeling a driving pain across his forehead. The cab, half overturned, had been badly smashed, but the horse, which was uninjured, had freed itself and was galloping off down Broadway, the driver chasing him on foot. The cable car, as usual, had not stopped, but hurried around a curve with a loud shriek as of defiance.

To add to the unpleasantness, it began to rain a little, then a little more, until it poured in torrents.

Burnett stood up on his feet. He felt dizzy and weak, and his hat had flown to the four winds. He turned and staggered down Houston street, in the direction of police headquarters, the impelling force in his mind to see those dispatches from England being still uppermost.

A policeman, seeing an opportunity to gain shelter from the storm, grabbed him by the arm and led him along the sidewalk in the direction of Mulberry street.

"You've got ter come along wid me, young feller," said the copper. "You're drunk as a fiddler."

In a half-dazed condition, Burnett felt himself dragged up the steps to the station house at the Mott street headquarters. The police captain before whom he was arraigned glowered at him and committed him to a cell at once. He was too confused to give his name.

"Stop! For God's sake don't lock me up!" he cried, his voice suddenly coming to him as they led him out. "I'm not drunk; I am hurt. My cab was run into by a cable car."

"The old story," laughed the captain. "I've heard it a hundred times. Officer, shove him along and lock him up."

And Burnett, in a frenzied condition, felt two officers shove and push him along a half-lit alleyway, then down a flight of stairs, and the next thing he was in a vile-smelling cell, in which was a cot and a dirty slop pail.

He sank down on the cot and groaned aloud. Time was flying; they would arrest her; they would disgrace her; and he had hoped to prevent it. He got up and paced his cell to and fro like a caged lion. His head ached as if it would split. What an outrage, to decide that he was intoxicated without any examination of his condition! The only comfort he took to himself was that later on he would write it up and expose the cruel system of "running in" injured men.

He looked at his watch and counted the minutes as they went by, by the dim light of the gas in the corridor. It was now nearly half-past ten. Presently an officer came along with another "drunk." Burnett now felt like himself again, although his head ached furiously. After the "drunk" was thrown, cursing and yelling, into a cell opposite, he accosted the officer in as calm a voice as he could command.

"Officer, I wish to see Superintendent Byrnes; he's a friend of mine; I'm not drunk. I was coming down Broadway to meet him when my cab was struck by one of those infernal juggernauts—a cable car—and I was thrown out on my head. I will give you $10 if you will let me speak to Superintendent Byrnes."

"He ain't here to-night—out of the city."

"Is Inspector Davids here?"

"Yis; he's in charge."

"Take me to him; I know him."

"Is this de trute?"

"Yes. I swear it."

"Gimme de mon."

Burnett handed out ten dollars. The policeman was a frank, good-looking East Side American, who, had he not been a part of the corrupt system then existing, would, if left to himself, have been probably an honest, unbribable man.

"You don't seem really drunk, sir," he said, respectfully, as he opened the grating door with his pass key. "On me life, ye don't, sir."

"Indeed, I am not, officer."

"Come this way."

Burnett followed the policeman along the corridor to a door, through which, up a long flight of stairs he climbed, directly to Superintendent Byrnes' office. One of his leading assistants, Davids, was seated at the superintendent's desk.

The detective, with his intense, set face and iron-gray hair, was busily poring over a number of dispatches as they entered.

"What—you, Burnett?" he asked, astonished, looking up. He had just come in himself, and still wore his regulation cap.

"Yes, I was run down by a cable car and picked up for a 'drunk and disorderly,' and locked up, too. Luckily, I persuaded this officer to bring me before you."

"Officer, discharge Mr. Um—um—instantly. Did you give your name down stairs?"

"No."

"That's lucky—for you—the reporters have just made their rounds."

The inspector ordered the policeman out of the room in an angry voice.

"These roundsmen are all too eager to arrest a well-dressed man," he said. "I am sorry, but these officers have no sense on a rainy night. I'm glad you're here, all the same. You are looking pale. Go in the wash room and clean up a little, and when you come back, I'll have a glass of brandy ready for you; and I want you to assist me. There's been a murder in a fashionable hotel—and the chief's away—and—you are just the man."

"Yes—Lord Holton—no matter about the cleaning up. Where's the brandy, inspector?"

"Here, Mr. Burnett," and the inspector handed out a bottle of cognac.

Burnett helped himself to a large glassful, and then told all he knew of the case.

"And you suspect——"

"The husband of Miss Armitage, who has been posing as her brother."

"You are wrong—quite wrong. He left the city at 5 p. m., with—er—with a pretty soubrette. The rascal's on his way to Boston."

"Is it possible?" exclaimed Burnett, astonished.

"Oh, yes. He was the first I suspected; and this fact has just been 'phoned down from the Grand Central detective and corroborated from New Haven, where Mr. Armitage got out and procured a box of Nile cigarettes and half a dozen cigars at the station restaurant, at 7:22. Lord

HE SAT DOWN ON THE COT AND GROANED ALOUD.

Holton was chloroformed at 9:11 p. m. By the way, I'm very glad you persuaded Swift to wait."

"Why?"

"There was no reason to stop the play. Besides, I—I hate to believe it was she who——"

"No, no! I tell you she seemed full of affection at the Oldorf for the Englishman. She kissed him."

The inspector sighed. "That's bad," he said. "Women are such natural born deceivers! I wish she had not appeared affectionate. I wish she had not said he was her father."

Burnett gasped. "Is Lord Holton—was he not her father?"

"These dispatches from the chief of police at Birmingham show she may be."

"She told me she was."

The inspector made an impatient gesture.

"Assuming she was, these dispatches inform us that they quarreled when she left England."

"You are looking for a motive?"

"His will leaves his surviving daughter half a million pounds sterling—two million five hundred thousand dollars."

"Half a million pounds!" Burnett sighed. "Father or no father, she would be out of his reach—this English millionairess! She would never consider him again—this richest heiress in England!

"I conceive—if she—ahem—did the deed—that it was a sudden impulse—and it was clever—almost too clever. She overreached herself," said Mr. Davids.

"She is innocent!" exclaimed Burnett, firmly.

"Very likely," said the inspector, dryly. "Will you suggest some other person with a motive?"

"Not she, certainly."

"She was at his side."

"Adopt any theory but that of her guilt."

The inspector smiled.

"Suicide we may dismiss at once. The man was of a happy, jolly disposition. When did he die? 9:11 p. m. She was there just before that. Now, of course, there's the valet, a Scotchman. But his motive could be only to keep such a good master alive and well as long as he could do so. I would not suspect the valet until all else failed. The valet is a long, lank, shaggy Scotch collie, with honest face enough. I've seen him. Now, I don't wonder at your taking her side. You are young and susceptible. She is superb! When the English women are handsome, they go the limit. You like to believe her innocent. My dear boy, the whole thing, the way it was done, is feminine, very feminine. There was no robbery committed, remember."

There was a short silence.

"True, it was not a knockdown blow—a manly sort of murder—but there may have been another woman—some old entanglement, perhaps."

The inspector took up a bundle of telegrams.

"The dispatches point to one or two entanglements. Lord Holton was a sporting peer. He won the Derby in 187—. He was well known on the turf, fond of pretty women, as all turfmen are. Now—ahem—my dear fellow, if she was not his daughter, she may have been his——"

"YOU ARE WRONG—HE LEFT THE CITY."

"Stop! Don't say that word!" Burnett's face was distorted with feeling. "You wrong her, I swear it. She is absolutely innocent!"

There was a short pause and the inspector said, gravely: "I hope you are right," and sat down to examine some new dispatches just sent in.

Burnett took a seat near him. The inspector read aloud: "'Lady Camilla Holton, only surviving daughter, eloped in April, 1890, with an actor named Henry Roget. Lord Holton never forgave his daughter, and after a hard struggle to live, she died in 1892 in Australia, of colony fever.' This disposes of the daughter, if it is correct."

Burnett sat silently ruminating.

"How do you know she died in Australia?" he asked.

"I don't know. It is so reported. She died a year ago in Sydney. . . . . this Miss Armitage may be a daughter, too."

"Illegitimate! How dare you?"

"Yes. And I will show you clearly her motive for the murder. Yes; in my judgment, the conclusive proof!"

Burnett sank down on a chair, benumbed with horror, for he knew Inspector Davids was considered one of the ablest detectives in the police service.

"I will prove her to be the guilty one," said the detective, grimly. "I'm sorry for you, Mr. Burnett."

BEING A WOMAN.

He laid the magazine down. "That is a good bit of work," he said, "one of the cleverest things you have done. How came you to write it?"

She laughed softly. "I knew you would ask. I said to myself, he will scarcely recognize it as mine."

"True! for you to be the author of an intense little love song, where one can almost feel the heart beating, the warm blood leaping, seems to me slightly incongruous."

"And yet I am no Puritan."

"In one sense—no; but you nevertheless embody my idea of the self-controlled woman of the world—a woman who will never let passion sway nor feeling govern her actions."

"Being a cold woman," she said, "a criticism like yours will necessarily not phase me."

"When did a criticism of mine ever phase you!" he retorted. "You are too confident, too self-assured for that."

"What a disagreeable sort of person I must be," she mused. "How can you bear to be with me? Do you come to see me from pure kindness—because you do not wish to wound me? Surely you can find no pleasure in talking to one so unfeeling."

"Nevertheless I do: I rarely leave this house without registering a vow never to return, but as surely as the day comes round I find myself once more ringing at your gate."

"No doubt ringing several times before being admitted," she laughed; "but you who believe in sentiment, will forgive poor Maxwell; he is in love with one of the maids, and is therefore incapacitated for the trifling duties of every day."

"Doubtless you find the case interesting from a psychological point of view?"

"I do. Mamma wishes to dismiss them both, but I have begged that they be allowed to remain. I tell you this to show you what an overflowing fund of sympathy I possess—to let you see how little you have appreciated the nobler attributes of my character."

"Whatever else I have done," he said, "I have never underrated your facility for turning things into ridicule. It is a fatal gift—that of seeing always the comic side of life. It is all well enough while you are young; but some day——"

"'Some day, I know not when or how,'" she hummed, "by that time, my friend, I will have grown so indifferent to everything that nothing will matter much one way or the other. In the meanwhile, 'vive la bagatelle!'"

"And is it to be always thus?" he cried. "Will you never grow weary of the husks of life? Will you never crave something better than admiration and flattery—the mere surface pleasures of a society woman's existence? Have you not sometimes thought there would be more happiness in love?"

She lifted her eyes. "So you think then I have not been loved?"

She got up and from the drawer of a cabinet took out a book of photographs. "I am going to do an unconventional thing," she said, when she was seated again, "but you do not know any of these men, so there can be no breach of confidence. Come here"—she motioned him to the ottoman at her side. "This man," she touched the first picture lightly, "is a distinguished Northern physician. I met him one summer in Canada. We were both of us off for a rest (sometimes people are at their best then); be that as it may, we saw a good deal of each other, and before we parted in the autumn he offered me—more than friendship."

"He has a fine face," he said.

"This other is a lawyer who graduated with distinction from a celebrated Eastern college; he has a clear and logical mind, one that cannot be deceived by mere appearances. He also"—she turned the page. "This boyish looking fellow is the only son of an English nobleman. I might have been 'my lady' and dated my letters from 'Something-or-Other Park' or from my townhouse in London had I desired. The dark haired foreigner is a Russian—the De Vaures introduced him to me in Paris; he has written several articles on the American woman's femininity. The man in uniform is a German—but why go on?" flicking the pages slightly. "I have gained my point, have I not? You believe now that I occasionally inspire affection?"

Her tone was wistful, though she smiled.

"How you misunderstand me," he cried. "You know very well I never said you were incapable of awaking affection (you can make any man love you if you wish), but the game once won, the conquest made, and your interest in the affair wanes—that is what I complain of, your incapacity for appreciating a man's devotion."

"Of all those men," he went on, "was there none whom you could care for, no one whose pleadings awoke a responsive echo in your heart? Your heart!"—scornfully—"why should I speak of what you do not possess?"

"True," she echoed, leaning toward him; "long ago, ere I had grown so worldly wise, or learned to guard and fence, to weigh and ponder—I gave my heart away! Gave it away to one who valued the gift so lightly that he scarcely realized it was his. And are you so lost to chivalry that you would mock me for my poverty?"

"Margaret!" he exclaimed.

"I, who look at sentiment from a psychological point of view—who care only for the surface pleasures of a society woman's existence—who see the ridiculous side of life and not its pathos—have all these years fed my fancy on a dream."

He passed his hand over his brow.

"Are you in earnest? Is not this some jest to torture me? I cannot believe the man lives who is indifferent to your affection. Perhaps you wrong him, perhaps he is awkward at expressing his deeper emotions; it may be that you are so dear to him that he fears to lose your friendship in asking for your love. It may be that he puts so poor an estimate upon himself that in his wildest dreams he cannot imagine your caring for him. Who knows?—perhaps at this moment he loves you with all his strength, yet dares not speak, for fear of your waving him aside as something of little worth."

"You plead his case well," she said. "One might imagine that, in your day, you had known what it was to let vanity stand in the way of happiness. Tell me—if you cared for a woman—cared for her enough to ask her to be your wife, would you (loving her like this) hold your peace, because, forsooth, you did not feel sure what her answer would be?"

"Assuredly," he said.

"Cruel, ungenerous!" she cried, springing to her feet. "You would not tell her when, even though she guessed the truth, being a woman, she could not speak? Oh, I know what you would say—I have heard the old tale before: 'Any woman can make a man propose to her.' This is not true. Let her overstep the bounds ever so slightly, encourage him a trifle too much, show him too plainly what her heart is and he turns away in disgust. Ah, if the day should come when you find yourself in the place of the character we have conjured up—I pray you, of your goodness, tell her the truth."

He took a half step toward her.

"Margaret," he said, and his voice faltered, "do with me what you will—I love you!"

There was a moment's silence—a silence fraught with feeling. Then she lifted her eyes. They were full of tears.

"If I could," she said in a low voice, "I would turn your words off with a laugh—pretend, as I have done with many, that I thought you were only in jest; but the time for that is past. I can play a part no longer, Archie" (the old name fell tenderly from her lips), "hear from me what you might have guessed long ago. I have loved you all my life."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

SENATORIAL FAMILIES.

Honors that Have Descended From Father to Son, and Further.

"In this country, where distinction is won by individual worth rather than by wealth or birth, it is rather a striking fact that in all legislative history only five instances occur where the honor of a seat in the United States Senate has descended in the same family from generation to generation," said Attorney-General Stockton, of New Jersey, some time ago, speaking of the death of the late Senator Colquitt, of Georgia.

Following up the suggestion in these words, many facts were brought to light not generally known, but interesting, nevertheless, to an explorer of the bypaths of history. The families thus honored by their fellow citizens are the Bayards, of Delaware; the Camerons, of Pennsylvania; the Colquitts, of Georgia, and the Frelinghuysens and Stocktons, of New Jersey. With the Stocktons, the descent has been longest and most direct. Richard Stockton was a member of the Continental Congress, and while so serving signed the immortal Declaration. His son Richard served in the United States Senate from 1793 until 1796; his grandson, the celebrated Commodore Robert Stockton, of 1812, served in like capacity from 1851 until 1853, and his great-grandson, John P. Stockton, now Attorney-General of New Jersey, was elected Senator in 1865 and again in 1869.

The Bayards also can boast of four Senatorial representatives, although the descent has not been entirely from father to son, James A., his sons James A. and Richard H., and his grandson, Thomas F., the present Ambassador to England, have all had seats in the Senate.

Three Freelinghuysens have been Senators: Frederick, his son Theodore, and his grandson, Frederick Theodore. With the Colquitts and Camerons the office has descended from father to son.

Should the historian undertake to sketch the careers of these fifteen men, he would be compelled to discuss almost the entire history of the Government, for, including the time they served as members of the House of Representatives, there are only eighteen years in the history of the country when the name of some one of them does not appear on the National legislative rolls, and in almost all of these years their representatives were serving country or State in other high offices of trust. The aggregate of their Congressional careers, including Richard Stockton's Continental services, is 159 years. Sixty of these belong to the Bayards, 40 to the Camerons, 20 each to the Colquitts and Stocktons and 19 to the Frelinghuysens.

IN MEMORY OF HIS WIFE.

Why Prof. Blackie Always Wore His Plaid About Edinburgh.

Prof. Blackie frequently stayed at my house when lecturing in Glasgow. He was always at his best when one had him alone. One night when we were sitting up together he said in his brusque way:

"Whatever other faults I have, I am free from vanity." An incredulous smile on my face roused him.

"You don't believe that; give me an instance."

Being thus challenged, I said:

"Why do you walk about flourishing a plaid continually?"

"I'll give you a history of that, sir. When I was a poor man, and when my wife and I had our difficulties, she one day drew my attention to the threadbare character of my surtout and asked me to order a new one. I told her I could not afford it just then: when she went, like a noble woman, and put her own plaid shawl on my shoulders, and I have worn a plaid ever since in memory of her loving deed."—Good Words.

A WIDE TIRE ORDINANCE.

BOROUGH COUNCIL TO ENFORCE THE NEW STATE LAW.

The July Meeting Transacts But Little Other Important Business—Sidewalk Repairs Occupy Some Attention.

There was no business of any great importance to occupy the attention of the Borough Councilmen at their regular meeting last evening, and in consequence the session was not very long.

Councilmen Smith, Valiant and Howell were not present.

Clerk Arnold read the minutes of all the June meetings, and they were approved. He then presented his monthly report which was as follows:

	Balance	Deficit
Borough	$686.86
Fire Department		$304.24
Light	107.94
Road	983.94
Poor		100.00
	$1.778.56	$404.24
	404.24
Total	$1.374.32

Forty-six dollars and ten cents was reported collected during the past month from all sources.

The report was received and filed.

T. B. Brooks, W. J. Buttfield and others asked the Council that the residents of West End avenue at the intersection of Greenbrook road be asked to lay stone walks.

The matter was referred to the street committee.

W. J. Buttfield stated in a letter that he would lay a stone walk in front of his property. The letter was received and filed.

J. P. Emmons and Charles Barlow, residents of Prospect place, asked the Council to macadamize the above street and agreed to pay their portion of the expense. It was referred to the street committee.

The committees from the borough and township who made the settlement of the township property presented an official report of their work and it was received and filed.

A small budget of claims were presented and later ordered paid.

Mr. Peck stated for the fire, water and lamp committee that extra precaution had been used on the Fourth of July and that no fires were reported. He further stated that the fire department needed hose and that some progress had been made in that direction. It was learned that it could be purchased for sixty-five cents a foot. Later Mr. Peck offered a resolution, which was carried, that the council purchase 1,500 feet, the same not to cost over sixty-five cents per foot.

Mayor Hegeman, Jr., appointed Henry DeMott as special marshal, who was confirmed by resolution of Mr. Lounsbury.

Mr. Lounsbury offered a resolution which gave the street committee power to lay a stone walk on Michael Powers' property on Somerset street. The reason given was that Mr. Powers had been given the required thirty days' notice and had not complied therewith.

Another resolution by Mr. Lounsbury, which was carried, provides uniforms for summer wear for the borough marshals.

The usual ten days vacation, with pay, was granted the borough marshals. On resolution of Mr. Lounsbury, an ordinance was introduced by Mr. Lounsbury, which provides for the size tires to be used on coal, lumber, express, brick and stone wagons in the borough.

It says that the tire shall be 3½ inches wide for all wagons that carry 1,500 pounds and a fine of $20 for each violation.

On motion, which was carried, it was read by title and passed to second reading, and then on motion it was adopted on second reading and laid over for thirty days subject to amendments. The Council then adjourned, after which special Marshal Perry was sworn in by the Mayor.

The Ideal Panacea.

James L. Francis, Alderman, Chicago, says: "I regard Dr. King's New Discovery as an Ideal Panacea for Coughs, Colds and Lung Complaints, having used it in my family for the last five years, to the exclusion of physicians' prescriptions or other preparations."

Rev. John Burgus, Keokuk, Iowa, writes: "I have been a minister of the Methodist Episcopal church for fifty years or more, and have never found anything so beneficial or that gave me such speedy relief as Dr. King's New Discovery." Try this Ideal Cough Remedy now. Trial bottle free at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

A CENTURY RUN OF MUD.

Asbury Park the Destination of Three Hundred and Six Cylists.

Plainfield was invaded this morning by a mud-bespattered, knickabockered crowd who entered the town silently on their wheels and as quietly took their departure. It was the annual century run of the Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey, starting from Newark at five o'clock and on its way to Asbury Park.

The first men made their appearance at about half-past nine but the main body did not arrive until an hour later.

About three hundred and fifty riders of whom ten were women started from Newark and three hundred and six were checked as passing through Plainfield. One hundred and five of them were from the Mercer County Wheelmeen, to which the only tandem in the run also belonged.

Frank Randolph and Harry Maxon represented this city in the run and they appeared as fresh as anyone. F. L. C. Martin rode down to Westfield and led the run back to Plainfield, he was unable to go the entire distance on account of the press of other duties. The checkers were Volney Green, George P. Smith, and Raymond A. McGee, all of the P. H. S. A. A., and were stationed at the corner of Washington and Fifth streets.

Part of the riders stopped for lunch at McVey's and at the Revere House while the rest went on to New Brunswick where they will lunch. The main body of the cyclists left here at 11:10.

A few accidents were reported and all the men seemed in fairly good condition although several of the less experienced riders were helped by their stronger friends by connecting the two wheels with a tow-rope.

One of the century riders in cleaning his chain in Elizabeth, caught three of his fingers in it and had to have them amputated. Another slipped on Fifth street near Hebard's drug store and cut off one finger. Grover Smith, another member of the run, broke his crank and damaged several other parts of his wheel.

WANT A FIREMEN'S PARADE.

Some Merchants Make the Proposition That One Be Arranged.

There was some talk among local merchants last night agitating a firemen's parade for Labor Day in this city. Their preparations for the Fourth were big, but their profits turned out to be losses in most cases. The enthusiasm has been aroused and they are anxious to see the city take on holiday garb once again this summer. It is argued that the Crescent Wheelmen have a sanction from the L. A. W. for a meet on that day, and this attraction alone would draw hundreds of bicyclists and other people to the city.

The expenses for a firemen's parade would not be near as much as for the Fourth of July celebration, the only necessary costs being that of entertaining visiting companies. The probabilities are, though, that Plainfield has got all the celebration she wants for this year.

Eight Bottles of Soda Water.

A novel contest was held at the Norwood Athletic clubhouse yesterday afternoon, when Walter Hetfield, Clarence Thorne, Will Thorne and Wyatt Barnes tried to see who could drink the most soda water in three minutes. They went at it like gladiators, and Clarence Thorne managed to down eight bottles before the time expired, and, as none of the others could equal that, he was given the victory. This contest was the sequel to a pie eating contest held Thursday afternoon, which was won by Wyatt Barnes.

Evangelistic Work.

Plainfield Christian Endeavorers have begun already to plan for evangelistic meetings next February, according to the plan of the State Department. There was held a conference of the prayer meeting committees. It will be placed before the Christian Endeavor pastors of the city for their co-operation at an early date. A joint conference of the prayer meeting and lookout committees will soon be held.

Needless Pain

is sometimes caused to children by having them undergo surgical operations for cross-eyes: not infrequently this trouble will be remedied by properly fitting glasses, and this should always be resorted to before trying the severer alternative. Take your child to Collier's, 103 Park avenue, then, and learn from a skilled optician whether or not the defect of vision can be painlessly relieved.

Elbow Dislocated.

While crossing West street last Wednesday, Samuel Kimball of Madison avenue, slipped and fell. His elbow was dislocated, but he is doing nicely now.

AUNTIE SPENCER DEAD.

A Good Woman Leaves This Earth at Four Score Years.

The large circle of friends of H. N. Spencer will learn with regret of the death of his mother, which occurred this morning about 7:30, at his home on Somerset street.

Mrs. Caroline B. Spencer was the widow of the late Lyman Spencer, and was always very active up to a short time ago. Death was caused through general debility and old age. She was very well known throughout Plainfield and North Plainfield. Two daughters, Mrs. Elias Allen, of Washingtonville, and Mrs. Alonzo Regur, of Delavan, Ill., and three sons, Lewis C. Spencer, of California, W. F. Spencer, of Washingtonville, and H. N. Spencer, of North Plainfield, survive her. Mrs. Schutt, wife of Councilman Schutt, is a granddaughter.

Mrs. Spencer was eighty-seven years old.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon next at two o'clock at the home of H. N. Spencer on Somerset street.

TRAINED NURSE'S SUDDEN DEATH.

Attending a Sick Patient She Was Stricken With Appoplexy.

Mrs. Jeroloman, a trained nurse of 103 Cottage place, died very suddenly at the home of Mrs. Vail, on Jackson avenue last night about seven o'clock.

She had been tending Mrs. Vail during her illness and had gone to get a glass of water. She had returned with it to the sick chamber, when she fell on the floor and expired.

Mrs. Vail called Mr. Nischwitz, who was near, and started for Dr. Cooley. Marshall Goodwin was met and he learned of the sudden death and went to the house. Dr. Cooley came later and said death was caused by appoplexy.

Mrs. Jeroloman was sixty-six years of age and leaves a husband, daughter, and son.

Coroner Adaire of Somerset county was sent for and gave a burial permit.

Pleasure Despite the Rain.

Fourth of July evening was something of a disappointment to most of Plainfield, but it was more than made up for last evening, to the young people of Madison avenue, when Mrs. Stephen R. Struthers gave a party to her nieces, Miss Ruth Thompson and Miss Alma Penfield, both of New York. After a most enjoyable evening spent in playing games and conversing, refreshments were served. Among those who enjoyed Mrs. Struthers hospitality were: Miss Margarette Burnett, Miss Clyde Burnett, Miss Mabel Phillips, Roy Phillips, John Phillips, Paul Kimball and Harold Phillips.

Luncheon on the Fourth.

The luncheon and lawn party that was planned by Mrs. Augustus D. Shepard for the afternoon of the Fourth was enjoyed on the piazzas of their palatial residence. There were fifty or more of the young people of Plainfield present who passed a delightful afternoon in dancing and sociability. Luncheon was served by Max Wiertz.

Fined Six Cents.

The case of Boyle against Walpole, in tort, came up before Justice Nash and a jury of twelve men, yesterday afternoon. It was the continuation of a suit four years old, brought about by the damage done in Mr. Boyle's garden by Mr. Walpole's chickens. Both sides were represented by counsel. The jury brought in a verdict of six cents damages.

W. K. McClure represented the plaintiff while the defendant was represented by H. C. Runyon.

Marsh, Israels & Harder, the Broadway architects of New York, of which firm A. L. C. Marsh, of this city, is a member, were successful in securing the third prize of $500 in the competition for designs for the new home of the New York Athletic Club which is to cost $450,000. The competition was opened to all architects.

THE COUNTY LEGISLATORS.

The Board of Freeholders Transact July Business.

The Board of Freeholders met on Wednesday afternoon, the change of date being on account of Fourth of July. All the members were present.

Two communications having reference to excavating on the county roads were received from F. A. Dunham, engineer-in-chief of the Westfield sewer system, now in course of construction. The Westfield Township Committee and the County Road Committee have held conferences over the question of privileges of opening the roadway for the sewer, and it was expected the township would be represented at the meeting. The failure of Westfield to send its representative, and the intimation in one of the communications that a portion of the road was to be excavated before the privilege had been granted caused considerable debate.

It was finely resolved that the Clerk of the Board serve a notice on the Westfield Township Committee forbidding any disturbance of the roadbed of the county roads without permission.

In order that Westfield might not suffer from the delay of a permit till the next meeting it was voted that the Director of the Board and the County Road Committee should have power to make a contract with the Township Committee on the same terms under which Summit laid its sewers on the improved roads.

The Board also received two communications from Fanwood, alleging that a portion of the county road in that township was in bad condition, and asserting that the wagons from the stonecracker were cutting ruts in the pavement by the heavy loads carted and narrow tires of the wagons.

Mr. Morrell asked if physicians called to examine the insane were entitled to any compensation, and Director Hubbard answered that the county pays only for the subsistence of the patients when at the Asylum, and not for examination or conveyance to the Asylum. The latter expense is borne by the cities and townships.

ON THE BOULEVARD.

Scrappers Who Come From That Celebrated Section.

A lively scene took place in the city court room in the Serrell building this morning. John Sheehan and Jack Deady charged Michael Welch, John Welch and John Macalvoy with quarreling and fighting, and the case came up before Judge Coddington. Welch keeps a stable back of "Buck" Day's saloon on West Third street. Sheehan and Deady came and asked for money to treat, but were refused; a fight resulted. The Judge thought Sheehan and Deady should be tried also and so they were. The all pleaded not guilty.

After a rather exciting morning, Sheehan and Deady were discharged as there was not sufficient evidence against them, while the two Welches and Macalvoy were given their choice between a $5 fine and twenty days in the county jail. They all paid their fines. George W. DeMeza acted as counsel for the defendants.

Did the Burglar Hide.

Some boys playing last night about Nelson's grocery store, corner of Somerset street and Manning avenue, discovered a window open in the basement at the rear of the store. They also heard footsteps in the store and they notified Chief VanHorn. He secured Marshals John Goodwin and Frank Whitely, and together with them, went to the place and made a search through the basement, but could find nobody. The trap door leading to the store was fastened and they did not open it. There was no light in the store and it would have been a very easy matter for one to hide behind the counters or boxes.

Officers Installed.

The officers elect of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., a list of which was published in these columns, were installed last night by District Deputy Grand Chancellor James Pattison. Two additional officers were appointed at the meeting as follows, Inner Guard, Edward Mackey; Outer Guard, Peter Straum.

The members enjoyed a social time under the good of the order.

Capt. Flannery, of the Crescent Division, was highly complimented for the excellent work in securing the handsome banner that was carried in the Fourth of July parade.

Sent to Jail, Goes to Hospital.

Annie McDonald, of Roselle, the young girl who was charged with stealing Constable Worsinger's handcuffs, was sentenced to the county jail for thirty days in court at Elizabeth yesterday. Afterwards she was taken to the city hospital.

TALK OF A GOLF COURSE.

HILLSIDE TENNIS CLUB CONTEMPLATING PROVIDING THIS SPORT.

It is a Fascinating Game and Plainfield Club People Are Likely to Enjoy the Attendant Pleasure Of It.

The latest news among the clubs of of Plainfield is the probable building of a golf course by the Hillside Tennis Club. There has been a widespread and growing interest in this most fascinating of games in America for several years, but only in the last two or three years have clubs become convinced that it has come to stay. At a recent meeting of the Governors of the Hillside Club the question of putting in a course was seriously considered, and Messrs. Howard Beebe and J. S. Anthony were appoited a committee to investigate the matter.

It is expected that grounds for the course can be secured so that the first "tee" will be but a very short distance from the clubhouse and the course will in all probability consist of about six or seven holes, or about one mile in length from the first tee to the last hole, the line of play bending around so as to bring the start and finish near together. Wherever links have been built the game has found immense popularity awaiting it among the women as well as the men. It has been suggested that members of the other Plainfield clubs be admitted to the golf priveleges of the Hillside for a small sum per annum and that ladies have the same priveleges in regard to the links as members of other clubs. Should the present plans prove feasible the links will in all probability be put in very soon so that the fine fall weather, which is an ideal time for golfing, may be taken advantage of. The season for playing golf is much longer than that of any other out door game, lasting as it does from early spring until the snow makes playing unpleasant.

Either Mr. Beebe or Mr. Anthony will be very glad to talk with those in or outside the club who are interested in the game or who are desirous of obtaining information about it.

That a golf course would add greatly to the attractions of Plainfield is certain and the links would form a rendezvous of unusual attractions.

Frightened at the Trolley.

Trolley accidents are not frequent in Plainfield and those that do happen are usually not the fault of the cars or their motormen. Such was the case yesterday afternoon, when Charles Adam's horse, standing in front of Vincent Frazee's grocery store became frightened at a passing car. He started to run, but ready hands soon brought him to a standstill with no damage resulting except a slightly broken harness.

A Commendable Exhibit.

Through an oversight the display of Hillier & Co. was omitted in yesterday's issue of The Daily Press. It was the only one representing a laundry, and was particularly handsome with a fine display of red, white and blue. On each side was a shirt, collar and pair of cuffs, laundered, showing the very excellent work done by this well-known house. Their Plainfield manager, Miss Mary Brown, deserves credit for the exhibit.

To Spread the News.

George Taggart leaves today for Asbury Park where he goes to represent the United Press at the National race meet of the L. A. W. He will stop at the Ocean hotel, the headquarters of the L. A. W., at Asbury Park.

A Boys Camp.

Charles S. Dudley, who interested so many at the Y. M. C. A. conference last spring, is organizing a Y. M. C. A. boys' camp on the shores of Lake Champlain from July 9th to July 26th. Several Plainfield boys are preparing to join the party.

The Rev. Arthur Crane, of Carleton avenue, will preach in Brooklyn tomorrow. His four little children, who have been suffering with diphtheria have recovered, after the anti-toxine treatment, and the quarantine will be removed from the house on Monday.

It May Do as Much For You.

Mr. Fred Miller of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a Severe Kidney trouble for many years, with severe pains in his back and also that his bladder was affected. He tried many so-called Kidney cures but without any good result. About a year ago he began use of Electric Bitters and found relief at once. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to cure all Kidney and Liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c for large bottle, at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

WALLER ILL IN PRISON

Said To Be in Need of Medical Attention.

Minister Eustis Notified by the State Department at Washington To Give the Matter Investigation—Anxiety About Mrs. Waller—No News Received from Her.

Washington, July 6.—Ex-Consul Waller, who is in prison near Marseilles, France, is ill and without medical supply, and the state department of this government has been asked to interfere in his behalf to the extent of either providing him with the necessary supplies or asking the government of France to do so.

First Letter from Waller.

The news of his illness was brought to this country through a letter to his stepson, Paul H. Bray, who was deported from Madagascar at the time Mr. Waller was sent out under arrest by the French government, and it is the first word that has been received from Waller by his son since he was seperated from him at Tamatave.

Probably Forbidden To Say Too Much

The letter is a mere announcement of his illness without any reference to other questions. He says nothing about his treatment in prison nor about his case or his interest in Madagascar. This is taken to mean that he knew that his letter would be scrutinized by the prison officials, or that he was forbidden to say more than his letter contained. The letter was written on paper bearing the prison letter-head.

Minister Eustis Instructed.

Mr. Bray took the letter to Acting Secretary of State Uhl, who telegraphed Minister Eustis instructing him to give immediate attention to Mr. Waller's representations and to make careful inquiry as to the facts in the case.

Believe Waller Quite Ill.

Mr. Bray is of the opinion that Waller is quite ill, for he says the ex-consul is not a man to complain of any temporary or slight ailment. He says that his stepfather had been in the hospital at Antanavarivo for two months previous to his arrest and that he is subject to congestive chills.

May Prove Serious.

He fears that the prison life and the change of climate may have caused a relapse which will prove serious, especially if he does not secure proper medical attention promptly.

Anxious About Mrs. Waller.

Mr. Bray is also much concerned about his mother, Mrs. Waller, from whom he has received no word since he left Madagascar, notwithstanding that he has sent numerous letters to her. Many of these letters have been sent under cover to other persons and their identity carefully concealed, but he has received no word in reply.

KILLED IN A LOG CHUTE.

Death of an Adventurous Experimenter with a Barrel in Idaho.

Coeur D'Alene, Idaho, July 6.—Paul Webb lost his life near here in an attempt to ride his submarine boat or barrel down a 800-foot log-chute into Lake Coeur D'Alene. About 500 people witnessed his attempt to descend into the lake, which took place at Rosin's log-camp, about eight miles from here. Webb was placed within the barrel, which was six and a half feet long, two feet in diameter and cone shaped.

Jumped Into the Air.

Two-thirds of the way down there was a slight rise in the incline. Here the barrel jumped thirty feet into the air. It fell, striking the ground on end and rolling forty feet further down the hill. When the barrel was opened, Webb was found jammed into the end, but conscious. Examination showed that his back was broken. He died a few hours later. His real name was James Stewart.

SAYS IT'S BLACKMAIL.

Philadelphia, July 6.—Dr. Palen was seen by a reporter in the office of his bankers, whether he had gone to purchase letters of credit to be used in his trip abroad, as he has engaged passage for himself and wife on the steamship Southwark, which will leave this city to-day.

Denies the Charges.

The young physician was asked for a statement as to the charges preferred by Miss Thompson. He was apparently surprised, and said: "I am greatly surprised to learn that this matter has been made public. But it is as well now as later. CLEARY GETS OFF EASY

Close of the Witch-Burning Trial at Clonmel.

The Accused Man Convicted of Manslaughter for Shockingly Torturing and Burning His Wife To Death in the Presence of a Group of Her Relatives.

Dublin, July 6.—Michael Cleary of Ballyvadlea, near Clonmel, was convicted of manslaughter in causing the death of his wife, Bridget Cleary, at Ballyvadlea, on March 14 last, by burning and otherwise ill treating her on the ground that she was bewitched.

A Remarkable Case.

The case is one of the most remarkable in the annals of crime in Ireland. Michael Cleary, Patrick Boland, the murdered woman's father; William Patrick Michael and James Kennedy, cousins; Mary Kennedy, aunt, and Patrick Dunne, William Ahern and Dennis Ganey, the latter known as the "family doctor," were jointly arrested and charged with the burning and other ill treatment.

To Drive Out the Demon.

The evidence shows that Mrs. Cleary was suffering from nervousness and bronchitis and that her husband, believing her to be bewitched, forced a noxious decoction of herbs down her throat for the purpose of exorcising the evil spirit. After this the unfortunate woman was held over a fire and dreadfully burned until she declared that she was not Cleary's wife.

Burned Her to Death.

This torture was repeated and in the end her husband knocked her down, stripped off her clothing, poured paraffine over her body, lighted it, and the woman burned to death in the presence of her relatives. Cleary claimed that he was not burning his wife, but a witch. The prisoners narrowly escaped lynching at the hands of the crowd in and about the court room at Clonmel when they were first examined and they had to be taken to the jail under a strong escort.

Superstition and Cruelty.

The witnesses at the trial testified in detail to the circumstances showing the depth of superstition and the cruelty of Cleary and the other persons concerned, which were brought out and published at the preliminary examination.

Cleary Given Twenty Years.

Cleary was sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment, an extremely light sentence for his crime. Kennedy was condemned to five and John Dunne to three years' imprisonment, William and James Kennedy to eighteen months each, and Patrick Bolen and Michael Kennedy to six months each.

LOOKS BAD FOR HER.

Damaging Evidence Against Mrs. Farrall at Her Trial for Murder.

La Plata, Md., July 6.—The evidence adduced at the hearing in the trial of Mrs. Belle Farrall for poisoning her husband has been damaging for her. George E. Chappeler, a drug clerk, testified that on Nov. 21, 1894, Mrs. Farrall purchased a small bottle of strychnine, saying she wanted it to kill rats. Albert Farrall, brother of the deceased, said that he one day accused the woman of having poisoned her husband, and she broke down and said: "Oh, if I could only undo what I have done." Mrs. Olympia Burch, a housekeer in the Farrall household, also gave damaging evidence.

BIG REWARD OFFERED

Efforts To Recapture the Postoffice Burglars.

$1,000 Will Be Paid by the Postoffice Authorities for Each Prisoner Recaptured — New York's Sheriff Believes That There Was Collusion from the Outside.

Washington, July 6.—Postmaster General Wilson has addressed the following indignant letter to the United States district attorney of New York in regard to the escape of the Springfield, Ill., burglars:

Somebody Criminally Guilty.

Hon. Wallace Macfarland, United States District Attorney, New York City.

Dear Sir—This depa tment is in receipt of your telegram advising the offer of a reward for the recapture of the postoffice burglars, Killoran, Allen and Russel. I have read with surprise, not unmingled with a much stronger feeling, the report in the New York morning papers of their escape from Ludlow street jail, and cannot avoid the conclusion that somebody is criminally responsible for that escape.

Their Desperate Character.

Knowing the desperate character of these criminals and their long and successful careers as thieves and burglars, as also the plentiful means which they were reported to have at their command for corruption purposes, I have been anxious about their custody ever since I learned that they had been permitted to change their personal appearance, since their incarceration, with the evident purpose of thwarting identification when arraigned for trial. Their record as postoffice burglars is a long and dangerous one and this department was greatly pleased and relieved when it learned that after months of patient and expensive pursuits they had been finally hunted down and arrested.

Big Reward Offered.

In accordance with your request I have offerred a reward of $1,000 for the recapture of each of them, but while I believe such action on my part proper and necessary, I submit to you that those whose carelessness, or criminality has made it necessary, should be held to a stern accountability therefor. I have the honor to be, very truly yours,
WILLIAM L. WILSON, Posmaster-General.

Every Effort To Recapture Them.

Speaking of the matter, Postmaster-General Wilson said he was not aware just what the legal aspects of the case were, nor the kind of a jail Ludlow street was, so he was unable to say whether claims could be made for money damages; but he would exhaust every effort to secure the recapture of the men whose arrest had caused the postoffice authorities so much trouble.

SAYS THERE WAS COLLUSION.

Sheriff Tamsen Believes Assistance Was Given from the Outside.

New York, July 6.—Sheriff Tamsen and ex-Police Commissioner McLean were at Ludluw street jail for over six hours last night conducting a secret investigation. Reporters were barred from the room where the inquiry was held, and nothing could be learned of the proceedings.

Collusion on the Outside.

Sheriff Tamsen, on being asked if he thought there had been any collusion with the prisoners, answered that he thought there had been—on the outside. He said it would have been easy for weapons to have been passed in, as there are thirty or forty visitors to the jail every day.

Regarding a Personal Reward.

He was then asked whether he had decided to offer a personal reward. He replied that he thought some of the reward offered by the post office authorities would have to be made good by him.

International Canoe Race.

Bath Beach, L. I., July 6.—The second series for the international challenge cup of the New York Canoe club was sailed here yesterday afternoon and resulted in a victory for the Canadian canoe Mab. Wasp, the defending canoe, was disabled while leading in the second round and withdrew. A third and final race will be sailed this afternoon.

A Remarkable Rain Storm.

Baltimore, July 6.—There was a remarkable rainfall, accompanied by vivid lightning and claps of thunder that made even stoical people nervous, yesterday afternoon. No such rainfall has been known here in years. As the storm was subsiding quantities of large hailstones fell.

The Peary Expedition.

St. Johns, N. F., July 6.—The steamer Polino with the shaft for the Peary expedition steamer Kite is expected this afternoon. The machinists expect to occupy three days in fitting the shaft, working night and day. The expedition will probably sail Tuesday evening.

For the Loss of His Wife's Affections

Philadelphia, July 6.—Suit has been brought in this city by Newton Ruth against Charles Moehleck to recover $25,000 damages for alleged alienation of the affections of the former's wife.

Appointed by the President.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.
We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Chamberlain's is the best of all. Vincent S. Barkl, of Danbury, Iowa, has used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy whenever in need of a medicine for coughs and colds, for the past five years and says: "It always helps me out. If anyone asks me what kind of cough medicine I use, I reply, Chamberlain's, that is the best of all. 25 and 50c. bottles for sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North Avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Last June Dick Crawford brought his twelve-months-old child, suffering from infantile diarrhœa, to me. It had been weaned at four months old and had always been sickly. I gave it the usual treatment in such cases but without benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born; or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25 cent size had been used a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny constitution disappeared, and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by this remedy. J. T. Marlow, M. D., Tamaroa, Ill. For sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North Avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

W. H. Nelson, who is in the drug business at Kingville, Mo., has so much confidence in Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy that he warrants every bottle and offers to refund the money to any customer who is not satisfied after using it. Mr. Nelson takes no risk in doing this because the remedy is a certain cure for the diseases for which it is intended and he knows it. It is for sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North Avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

A horse kicked H. S. Shafer, of the Freemyer House, Middleburg, N. Y., on the knee, which laid him up in bed and caused the knee joint to become stiff. A friend recommended him to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which he did, and in two days was able to be around. Mr. Shafer has recommended it to many others and says it is excellent for any kind of a bruise or sprain. This same remedy is also famous for its cures of rheumatism. For sale by Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

Commencing yesterday the days of grace on commercial paper were abolished in New Jersey by act of the last Legislature.

Charles F. Pfister, who may be the Democratic candidate for Mayor of Milwaukee, is the millionaire hotel-keeper, tanner, bank director, street railway magnate and philanthropist. He is one of the shrewdist politicians in Wisconsin.

The new Elizabeth Board of Education, which has a Republican majority, met Wednesday, but failed to organize. The Republicans were a vote short, Commissioner Sours failing to appear. The Democrats would not help them to elect a President, and an adjournment had to be taken for a week.

It is reported that the Hon. Benjamin Harrison has expressed himself in most emphatic terms against the wheelwoman. If this is so, it must be that the Hon. Mr. Harrison is no longer a candidate for a third presidental nomination. The gentleman is too slick a politician to make such a statement and still be in the field.

The so-called "Nicholson" temperance law which went into effect, in Indiana, on the 1st inst., by proclamation of the Governor, is very stringent in its provisions. It requires that saloons shall only be located on the ground floors of buildings; prohibits the use of musical instruments in saloons; forbids connection between saloons and restaurants; prohibits screens and other obstructions to the view in saloons, and provides that a majority of the residents of a ward may prevent the issuance of a license to any saloon. In some parts of the State a disposition to resist the provissions of the law is reported, but the Brewers' Association has advised saloon keepers to observe the law, until the Supreme Court has passed upon it.

Police Commissioner Roosevelt, of New York, is full of common sense when he sums up the matter of enforcing the excise laws on Sunday as follows:

It seems to me that every honest public official and every honest citizen ought to do everything possible to discourage the habit of passing legislation which it is not intended to enforce. Legislators will with light hearts put on the statute books laws which are designed to placate one set of citizens and at the same time endeavor to see that they are not enforced so as to placate another set. Such a course is absolutely subversive of the political foundations of morality. To put a law which is not observed and which is not meant to be observed upon the statute books is a crime. To enforce such a law against some people and not against others is a rather worse crime. We suffer in this country from over-legislation, and we suffer also from a lax administration of legislation.

TALENTED ARTISTS.

Miss Lewis and the Company to Present the Famed Trilby.

Miss Catherine Lewis who is to appear at the Netherwood Hotel with her company on Thursday, the 11th inst., will be forever remembered by theatre-goers for her successful appearance a few years as Bettina in the Mascotte. Her association with the Daly Company has constantly kept this star before the New York public. Her condensed dramatization of "Trilby" by permission of A. M. Palmer, is said to be very bright and effective. She herself plays Trilby to the life and is ably supported by the Countess of Castelvecchio as Svengali—a powerful creation—the methods and slightly foreign accents of this artiste making her especially suited to the part. The rest of the company is highly spoken of.

The laughable scene in costume and with music from Mid-summer Night's Dream, entitled "Pyranus and Thisbe" completes and entertainment quite out of the ordinary.

Rahway's Liquor Case Certioraried.

When the car passes the city line the conductor will collect five cents from each of his passengers, making the fare ten cents, and in Newark transfers will be given to any part of Newark.

Who Is the Strongest?

It is suggested as a good idea that the tug-of-war which was to have come off on the Fourth at the Crescent Oval be opened to the men in the machine shops, and thus arouse an interest and rivalry to determine who could produce the strongest men.

Lost a Toe.

Yesterday afternoon about four o'clock Morris Owens, an employe of the Pond Tool and Machine Works, had the second toe on his right foot crushed in a piece of a machinery. He went to Muhlenberg Hospital, where he had the foot dressed. He lost the entire toe.

SKETCH OF JOHN WEIR.

His Life and Character Was One to be Modeled After.

John Weir who, in the prime of manhood, passed away at his home, 72 Willow avenue, was born in Thankerton-Lanarkshire, on the Clyde, Scotland, Oct. 3d, 1856. His parents, who survive him, are Scotch Presbyterians. The family removed from Scotland to Canada in 1865. John Weir, at the age of twenty-one years, came to New York, where by diligence in business, he became in 1885 the head of the firm of Weir & Hallett, grain commission merchants. At one time he was one of the board of managers of the Produce Exchange.

He married in 1882 Nina M. Skeel, daughter of Rev. H. Skeel, presiding elder of the Oswego district, New York. In 1887, Mr. Weir moved to Plainfield, occupying the house of Lebbeus Martin on Washington avenue. In 1890 he built the handsome house on Rockview avenue, at the head of Washington avenue, where he resided until signs of failing health made a change necessary. The house is now occupied by Charles Hogan.

Hemorrhage of the lungs, attending hasty consumption, made rapid inroads on a strong physique, and for four months Mr. Weir has been bravely facing the end at his home on Willow avenue. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, of this place, and the vital quality of his religion was evidenced by his calm acceptance of his Father's will, and a firm reliance on the truths of divine grace, that made his leave-taking of earth a veritable "going home."

A quiet gentleness of manner, combined with real strength of character, won John Weir, during his lifetime, many true friends, and will win for his memory many gracious remembrances, and much heartfelt sympathy for the family so deeply bereaved, especially the wife who mourns the departure of a faithful husband, and two little girls who have lost a devoted father.

Gas Stove Explosion.

George H. Fairchild and wife, of Grandview avenue, entertained company on the Fourth and they left the house in charge of a servant girl while they went to see the parade.

Towards noon she started to get dinner so as to have it ready by the time they returned.

A gas stove is used for cooking and she attempted to light it, but not understanding it dit not succeed.

She left it with two or three faucets turned on and thought she would wait till Mr. Fairchild came back.

The party returned, and Mrs. Fairchild wishing to use the stove, took a match to light it. As a result the stove was blown up and Mrs. Fairchild was thrown fully three feet and became unconscious, besides an entire window nearby was blown out.

Mrs. Fairchild regained consciousness and was not seriously injured.

New Market People Agitated.

A special meeting of the Borough Commissioners will be held at New Market this evening to take action in the matter of the breaking the public lamps and destruction of property on the night of the third of July.

It is well known the party numbered about nine and hailed from the adjoining borough of Dunellen. Seven of the names are known, and sufficient evidence is in hand to warrant a prosecution for malicious mischief unless the parties come forward with an apology and offer to pay the damage. But it is a question whether such a settlement should be made. It is thought that an example would be a preventative of such depredations in future.

—Alex. Pargiter, corner Park avenue and Second street, has a store full of new and stylish goods. Among them many things cheap for cash are childrens figured lawn dresses, 4 to 8 years, 85 cents, 10 to 14 years, $1. Give him a call.

"Trust Those Who Have Tried."

Catarrh caused hoarseness and difficulty in speaking. I also to a great extent lost hearing. By the use of Ely's Cream Balm dropping of mucus has ceased, voice and hearing have greatly improved. J. W. Davidson, Att'y at Law, Monmouth, Ill.

I used Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh and have received great benefit. I believe it a safe and certain cure. Very pleasant to take. Wm. Frazer, Rochester, N. Y.

Price of Cream Balm is fifty cents.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Joseph Gavett, of Third Place, has a new wheel called the Dart.

Wilbur F. Cornwell, of Waynwood place, is the proud owner of a new light wheel, the Oriole.

Samuel Townsend and son William left yesterday on a cycling trip into Long Island. Greenport will be their destination.

William McCutchen and Kirby Dwight, of Rockview avenue, leave Plainfield today for Asbury Park, where McCutchen will enter the races at the National meet.

The Crescent Wheelmen will have a run to Asbury Park, leaving the clubhouse on Thursday morning, July 11th, at six o'clock, arriving in Asbury Park in time for dinner, and they will attend the races in the afternoon. Those desiring can return on the excursion. The roads are all first-class, and all are invited to go along. No entrance fee will be charged. Breakfast will be had at Mattawan.

Amherst Wins in Rain.

Plainfield very seldom gets left and Everett Morgan, of Albert street, demonstrated the fact again when he won the four hundred and forty yards dash in the New Jersey Athletic Club's games on the Fourth at Bergen Point.

His time was fifty-four seconds which was very good considering that the track was covered almost entirely with water.

Morgan also contested in the one hundred yards dash, but failed to get a place. He is a student of Amherst College and ran under the purple and white of that college.

—The store of Doane & Edsall is a very busy spot these days in fitting out summer tourists with their footwear, trunks, bags, etc. Their store will be open this evening.

—One of the hind wheels on a wagon loaded with rubbish caught in the car tracks at the corner of Front and Somerset streets this morning and was dished. Another wagon was secured and the broken one removed.

—White, of Plainfield, made a big purchase of ladies, gentlemen's and children's hose yesterday. He closed out the entire stock at fifty cents on the dollar, and he will sell them, as he bought them, at half their regular value.

YOUR SCALP! During the heats of summer does it become irritated and invite an occasional friendly scratch? To wash it is well, but not too often, lest your hair become "brash" and stiff. But treat it twice or thrice a week with our Petroleum Hair Tonic—a little rubbed in with your finger ends, and you will find the feeling of comfort and coolness truly delightful. Positively nothing equals it as a balm for the woes of your scalp. Sprinkler bottles 50c. Only at

THE "SLEUTH HOUND'S THEORY.

"I'm sorry, Burnett, for you love this girl; but my theory, I feel sure, is the true one," said Mr. Davids, conceitedly.

"Go on!" cried Burnett, grinding his teeth. "Tell me what absurd theory you have conjured up!"

Davids looked at the newspaper man with irritation, which quickly subsided.

"Well, the legitimate daughter is said to have died in 1892. Now, then, suppose the illegitimate child, a daughter, and the words of the will are, 'To my unmarried daughter living at the time of my death, five hundred thousand pounds.' Suppose, too, the illegitimate daughter occupies a public position, or is married, and dreads the publicity of her father's acknowledging her his child?"

"If she gets the money she must take the shame," argued Burnett. "And, after all, it's not her fault."

"Not if she is able to personate the legitimate daughter? If she can do this, then the motive is plain."

"But her own mother, Lady Holton?"

"She died ten years ago. The present Lady Holton knows nothing. You see, a clever, heartless, unscrupulous, hardened woman would see the advantage of removing her father just at this juncture. She would then claim to be his true legitimate daughter and heir. There is at every woman's heart a fundamental motive, my dear Burnett, to establish their birthright, to establish their warrant to respectability. I have seen the struggles of a fallen woman in this very city to re-establish herself, until she involved herself in murder. I tell you, the sting of illegitimacy, or any sort of shame, rankles in a woman's breast, and is more unendurable to her than to a man. Night and day it is her torment, her agony. She is an imaginative, fanciful creature. She imagines that everyone is aware of her taint, when no one thinks of it."

Burnett rose to his feet.

"Say no more. Your theory is that Eleanor Armitage is the illegitimate daughter; that she is nervy enough to establish her name and obtain a fortune by one stroke. You are a clever man, inspector, but you are wrong. Your theory is too clever by half. She is incapable of such atrocity!"

"I shall act on it for the present."

"You will arrest Miss Armitage?"

"At the end of the play, yes."

A messenger brought in another dispatch. The inspector read it. "Boston. A. registered at Adams House, J. L. Smith and wife; have suite 117."

The inspector turned down the corners of his mouth.

"You see," said he, "that her 'husband' is a low brute; at least, she is too good for him. If he is innocent of this murder, he has the misfortune to be caught in a lesser crime."

Burnett sighed and looked at his watch. It was then 10:42. There seemed to be no way to prevent the arrest.

"The curtain is just down for the last entr' acte," he said. "The last act will take about half an hour. Then she will stand accused!"

He stood pondering a moment.

"Suppose," he said, with startled face, "suppose what you say is true, and she knows that she is about to be arrested. In the death scene which ends poor Marguerite Gautier's troubles, Eleanor, in her remorse which the nobility and high pure feeling in poor Marguerite will—must inspire her—may she not seek—must she not seek to make the last death scene real?"

The inspector smiled coolly. "We must precent that," he said. "And I look to you to do it. However, great criminals are very rarely suicides."

"Don't call her a criminal, for God's sake!" cried Burnett, bitterly, walking to and fro in his agony of mind.

"Alas! she is too clever not to know that her arrest will surely follow the final fall of the curtain. Her art is very great; her nature is tense and passionate—it might seem to her a fit end. Oh, what shall I do? What shall I do?" He buried his face in his hands.

The inspector touched his shoulder kindly. "Burnett, I feel deeply for you. You love this woman, that's plain. But my best advice is, go home and go to bed—take an opiate, if you can't sleep. You are a young man; you have a career before you; your name must not in any way be brought into this affair. It must not appear in the papers. Go home, my dear boy."

"No, I believe her guiltless. Some dreadful mystery conceals the real criminal. Time will prove this. You will have to act as you believe it to be your duty. You will arrest her, but I will sooner or later release her! Do you suppose she would leave her handkerchief, the only proof of her guilt you have, on the murdered man's face? No, no, no! It is preposterous!"

"Why, that—that's the cleverest piece of business in the whole affair," said the inspector.

"How so?"

"She knew she had been seen and recognized at the hotel; hence she wished to divert suspicion; hence her apparent affection, her kisses, her kindly use of her handkerchief. While we've been talking, one of my best experts has been minutely examining the dress she wore in the first act and at the Oldorf, to find traces of chloroform. Of course, she would toss her bottle and sponge out of her cab window as she returned to the theater; but men are even now searching for them in the street."

A messenger hurriedly entered with a telephonic message: "A chloroform bottle found in street near Oldorf. A sponge found in next street. Philadelphia druggist."

"There, I thought we should get evidence sooner or later; that will fasten the crime."

The inspector fairly rubbed his hands in a sort of vague professional delight.

"If you believe her innocent, Mr. Burnett, will you suggest a theory?" he said, pleasantly. "You are probably aware that Miss Armitage acted two weeks in [illegible] Havoro coming here. It was while there that she learned of her father's coming—and prepared herself—and bought the chloroform."

Burnett hardly knew what to say. Mr. Davids looked very sure of his prey.

"Still, there is no proof!" insisted the newspaper man.

"There will be a net about her in twenty-four hours which she can't escape from. I am afraid she will elude us only in one way. Yes, I confess I am afraid of suicide, for she is no ordinary sort. She's a high-strung woman, and your own fears rather tend to confirm mine. She must have seen Swift (the fool, to sit in that proscenium box!) She is warned. She will see there is no escape. She may really die in that last act; it is more than likely. Yes, it would be like a clever woman who found herself caught in a trap."

"THERE! I THOUGHT WE SHOULD GET EVIDENCE."

Burnett gasped with horror.

"But to prevent any such contingency I depend on you."

"Me?"

"Yes. My cab is ready. We will go at once to the theater. May I ask you one question? Do you believe she cares for you?"

"I believe—she has led me to think—yes."

"Very good. You will, perhaps, be able to prevent her taking up arms against her own life—you, and you alone!"

THE LAST ENTR' ACTE.

The curtain had not yet risen for the last act when they arrived at the theater. A number of well-dressed young men were standing in the lobby as they entered. Burnett overheard one of the young men say:

"I never saw her so intensely real as tonight. By Jove, suppose in the next act she should feel it so deeply she really should die! Would it not be exciting?"

"Ya-as," said another dude, puffing a cigarette. "She's acting with more power to-night than I ever saw her. When Armand threw money at her, each piece seemed to scorch and burn her. I tell you, it was great! And her beauty is simply marvelous!"

"We will go behind the scenes and see her—and watch her," said the inspector, quietly. "I will go, too, and remain out of sight."

Burnett, who, in spite of the inspector's strong influence, believed in the actress' innocence, went back of the scenes and saw Miss Armitage standing in her long robe de nuit, waiting for the curtain call, to ensconce herself in her pretty white bed on the stage. She was talking in low tones with her maid, Sarah, a quiet looking Englishwoman.

How inexpressibly lovely she looked! Her dark hair hung in riotous disorder down her back. Her face, made pale and wan for the famous death scene, seemed full of wondrous spiritual holiness and beauty. Shakespeare's words sprang into his mind as he gazed at her:

"Alack, that Heaven should practice stratagems Upon so soft a subject as thyself!"

Yet in the calm beauty of her starry eyes there was, he felt, a stern will, as firm as Juliet's

"If all else fail, myself have power to die!"

He stood for a moment watching her. She did not see him. She seemed to be filled with more than usual tragic sorrow of her part of Marguerite. The world was dead to her. Her heart was broken. Her love was gone. She had sacrificed herself—and made expiation. She waited for the end. There was so much ethereal tenderness and love in her face; her white embroidered robe betrayed so much of the gentle character of her love, and the wealth of happiness she might bestow on one beloved. Could such an exalted spirit spring from criminal origin? Could woman's whole power of deceit cover so black a soul beneath that divine face? Ah, no, no! His heart and soul told him it was a devilish thing to accuse her—a white saint ready for heaven! She a parricide? The foulest crime—the killing of the one who fathered her into the world?—laid at her charge! No, no! Hers was no

"Serpent heart hid with a flowery face!"

He looked and longed to give

"That kiss which he had set
Between two charming words!"

To the winds flew the coarse, hard detective theories! He loved her. Whoever she might be—wherever born—whatever she had done! He loved her with all his strong man's heart and soul. Aye, and the next instant he sprang forward and crushed her half-yielding form in his arms! She gave a cry of astonishment, and struggled; but his was the wild embrace of one almost driven insane with the torture of doubt. He kissed her lips between the words "I love you—forever!"

Then he released her, and craved forgiveness.

Strange to say, she did not seem so very angry!

"I cannot die—now!" she pouted, and the wild joy of her lest it in his heart.

"Forgive me. It was not I. It was—it was——"

One look—one glance! The lovelight in her eyes filled his being with gladness. The bell rang. She ran on the stage and fairly dived, blushing through her paint, beneath the bed clothes. The curtain rose. The last act had begun.

Burnett never seemed so handsome in his life, as he walked, a triumphant look in his face, over to where Mr. Davids stood, behind a wing, waiting the end. He knew she was innocent! It would be an easy task for him to prove her so!

XXI.—THE HUNDRED DAYS AND FINIS.

On the 12th of April, 1814, the Past rode into Paris. It had on the white cockade of Bourbon, and came out of England. The Past, after an absence of twenty-three years, was old and fat. Young men born in the year of the Terror, sitting in the cafes on that day, had never seen the Past before. At the gate of the Tuileries, it reeled on its fine horse, and was about to fall. The attendants helped it to alight, and saluted it as Louis XVIII. Paris, the city of effervescent jubilee, was ominously silent. Some ci-devant royalists tried to shout, and only gasped. That was the Restoration!

On the 30th of May the allies concluded their trial treaty of peace at Paris. Napoleon had gone to Elba. There he began at once the organization of his "country," just as though it were an empire. His capital was Porto Ferrajo; his residence, the Hermitage of La Marciana. The new sovereign saw at a glance what were the resources of his kingdom; and the little insular realm felt the touch of the master hand. Improvements appeared in the municipal governments. A fine road was built from the capital to Porto Longone. The traveler in Elba finds to-day the Napoleonic museum of San Martino, and notes with keenest interest the relics relating to the brief ascendency of the Emperor. His reign in the island extended from the 4th of May, 1814, to the 26th of February in the following year; then the Man of Destiny went suddenly away.

NAPOLEON BY MEISSONIER.

The temporary settlement made by the allies in Paris was carried to Vienna, in October, 1814, to be there completed and confirmed by a congress of the Powers. Prince Metternich presided. The discussions were in the ancient manner, orthodox and dull—mere platitudes and precedents. The winter months were consumed in debates about technicalities. The real issue was how the Past might be set up again in Europe and the Future prevented. This profound business, so mediaeval and inane, was still on at the end of February, 1815, when the startling news was borne to the Congress that Napoleon Bonaparte, quitting Elba, had landed at Cannes.

The intelligence flashed north, south, east and west. The cowardly and pallid Past enthroned in Paris smiled a ghastly smile. The Court newspaper chronicled the landing at Cannes thus: "The information comes to us that that miserable adventurer and brigand Bonaparte has left the island of Elba and again polluted the soil of France with his bloody feet." The next notice of news from the south was given in the same organ thus: "Our intelligence is that the man Bonaparte has set out from Cannes to Lyons, and that certain turbulent adventurers have joined him on the way." On the following day the same paper said: "It is now certain that General Bonaparte at the head of a great and enthusiastic force is approaching the city, on the Lyons road." On the next morning the paragraph read thus: "His Majesty the Emperor Napoleon entered the city last night, and slept at the Tuileries!"

This journalistic transcript of events, absurd as it seems, was in striking conformity to the facts. On the 1st of March the "man Bonaparte" did land at Cannes. On the way out from Elba the ship Zephyr, on which he sailed, had been accosted by the barque Inconstant, whose officer called out through his speaking trumpet, saying, "How is General Bonaparte?" Napoleon, being on deck and hearing the call, himself took the trumpet of the Zephyr and answered, "The Emperor is quite well, thank you!" At the landing, when an enthusiastic peasant came up in salutation, Napoleon said to Bertrand: "Here is one recruit already!"

The spectacle that ensued has no parallel in history. The old soldiers of the Republic and the Empire rose as if from the earth to greet their commander. His progress en route to Paris became a triumph. At Grenoble the officers and soldiers of the King joined him. At Lyons the forces of the Duke of Orleans went over to the Emperor. Ney, who had accepted the Restoration and become a peer of France, had promised the King to put Napoleon in an iron cage and bring him to Paris. With a division of the army he met his old commander at Auxerre, forgot all his hateful oaths of allegiance to the Bourbons, and rushed into the Emperor's arms.

For eighteen days the gathering tumult swelled and broke into a tempest of enthusiasm. On the 19th of March, Napoleon entered Paris, and the Restoration was blown like a thistle-down out of the city. Louis fled to Belgium, and his Royalist followers returned to England. The Congress of Vienna rose suddenly from the consideration of court etiquette and regalia to find that their card-board house in Paris was gone, and that the Imperial Reality was there again with the gray coat, and three-cornered hat, and marble face, just as of old.

From the 1st of March to Waterloo was a period of a hundred and ten days. History calls it the Hundred Days. The iron purpose of Napoleon, his tireless energy, and omniscient perception, were never seen in such prodigious eruption and glare as in this period of his fate. The allies had become desperate. The whole world perceived that the Imperial republicanism of France, impersonated in Bonaparte and springing in the wind of his sword, must now triumph to the borders of Europe or perish miserably under the heels of banded kings. The two ideas which the parties of the past and the future represented were irreconcilable; they could no longer coexist. Either must Napoleon and his dynasty be stamped into the earth, or the old system of political society in Europe disappear forever.

The French people sprang to the call. In a few weeks 207,000 men, volunteers and conscripts, were thrown into the field. It was the last call to arms, and France was drained from her mountains to the sea—drained not only of men and horses, but of that moral force and enthusiasm which constitute the soul of war. Napoleon declared that with a few additional weeks in April and May of 1815 he would have drawn around his Empire a rim of brass and fire that no human power could penetrate.

But he was obliged to take the field with incomplete preparation. The allied armies of England and Prussia, under Wellington and Blucher, came on, the one from Flanders, and the other from the Rhine. It was the policy of Napoleon to prevent the union of his enemies. The 15th of June found him on the Belgian frontier with 124,000 men. On the next day he defeated Blucher at Ligny. The attack of Ney on the English at Quatre Bras was unsuccessful. The impetuous marshal, who was now the Emperor's right arm, fell back on the village of Waterloo. The place was about nine miles from Brussels. It was skirted by the forest of Soignes. There the allied commanders had agreed to form a junction. Napoleon ordered Marshal Grouchy with his division of 34,000 to follow up Blucher on his retreat from Ligny to Waterloo. The plain purpose was that if Blucher should join Wellington, then Grouchy should unite his division with that of Ney. The failure of Grouchy to do this—to hang upon Blucher's rear—was a fatal circumstance of the final catastrophe.

On the night of June 17th the British and French armies encamped only a short distance apart. A modern field-piece could easily throw a shell from La Belle Alliance over La Haie Sainte to Mont St. Jean and far beyond into the forest. During the afternoon of the 17th and the greater part of the night, there was a heavy rainfall—another fact in the catastrophe. On the following morning the Emperor, viewing the situation from his headquarters at the farm of La Belle Alliance, was unwilling to precipitate the battle until his artillery might deploy over a dry field.

Hugo has made the place and the scene immortal in the greatest battle-piece since Homer. The field of Waterloo is an undulating plain. Strategically, it has the shape of an immense harrow. The clevis is on the height called Mont St. Jean. Behind that is the village of Waterloo. The right leg of the harrow terminates at the hamlet of La Belle Alliance. The left leg is the road from Brussels to Nivelles. The cross-bar intersects the right leg at La Haie Sainte. The right leg is the highway from Brussels to Charleroi. The intersection of the bar with the left leg is near the old stone chateau of Hougomont. The battle was fought on the line of the cross-bar and in the triangle between it and the clevis.

The conflict began just before noon. The armies engaged were of equal strength, numbering about 80,000 men on each side. Napoleon was superior in artillery; but Wellington's soldiers had seen longer service in the field. They were his veterans from the Peninsular War, perhaps the stubbornest fighters in Europe. Napoleon's first plan was to double back the allied left on the center. This involved the capture of La Haie Sainte, and as a strategic corollary the taking of Hougomont. The latter place was first attacked. The field and wood were carried; but the chateau was held in the midst of horrid carnage by the British.

Early in the afternoon a Prussian division, under Bulow, about 10,000 strong, came on the field, and Napoleon had to withdraw a division from his center to repel the oncoming Germans. For two or three hours, in the area between La Haie Sainte and Hougomont, the battle raged, the lines swaying with uncertain fortune back and forth. La Haie Sainte was taken and held by Ney. On the whole, the British lines receded. Wellington's attempt to retake La Haie Sainte ended in a repulse. Ney on the counter-charge called on Napoleon for reinforcements, and the latter at that moment, changing his plan of battle, determined to make the principal charge on the British center. The support which he sent to Ney was not as heavy as it should have been, but the Marshal concluded that the crisis was at hand, and Napoleon sought to support him with Milhaud's cuirassiers and a division of the Middle Guard. Under this counter-charge the British lines reeled and staggered, but still clung desperately to their position. They gave a little, and then hung fast and could be moved no farther. In another part of the field Durutte carried the allied position of Papelotte, and Lobau routed Bulow from Planchenois. At half past four everything seemed to portend disaster to the allies and victory to the French.

Just at this juncture, however, an uproar was witnessed far to the right. The woods seemed to open, and the banners of Blucher shot up in the horizon. Grouchy was not on his rear or flank! Napoleon saw at a glance that it was then or never. His sun of Austerlitz hung low in the west. The British center must be broken, or the Empire which he had builded with his genius must pass away like a phantom. He called out four battalions of the Middle and six of the Old Guard. In the last fifteen years that Guard had been thrown a hundred times on the enemies of France, and never yet repulsed. It deemed itself invincible.

At seven o'clock, just as the June sun was sinking to the horizon, the bugles sounded, and the finest body of horsemen in Europe started to its doom on the squares of Wellington. The grim horsemen rode to their fate like heroes. The charge rolled on like an avalanche. It plunged into the sunken road of O'Hain. It seemed to roll over. It rose from the low grounds and broke on the British squares. They reeled under the shock; then reformed and stood fast. Around and around those immovable lines the soldiers of the Empire beat and beat in vain. It was the war of races at its climax. It was the final death-grip of the Gaul and the Teuton. The Old Guard recoiled. The wild cry of La Garde recule was heard above the roar of battle. The crisis of the Modern Era broke in blood and smoke, and the past was suddenly victorious. The Guard was broken into flying squadrons. Ruin came with the counter-charge of the British. Ney, glorious in his despair, sought to stay the tide. For an hour longer he was a spectacle to gods and men. Five horses had been killed under him. He was on foot. He was hatless. He clutched the hilt of a broken sword. He was covered with dust and blood. But his grim face was set against the victorious enemy in the hopeless and heroic struggle to rally his shattered columns.

Meanwhile the Prussians rushed in from the right. Wellington's guards rose and charged. Havoc came down with the darkness. A single regiment of the Old Guard was formed by Napoleon into a last square around which to rally the fugitives. The Emperor stood in the midst and declared his purpose to die with them. Marshal Soult forced him out of the melee, and the famous square, commanded by Cambronne—flinging his profane objurgation into the teeth of the English—perished with the wild cry of Vive l'Empereur!

On that spot French patriotism has planted a bronze lion to commemorate forever the extinction, not of the Old Guard only, but of the Empire and of Napoleon the Great. There the traveler from strange lands pauses, at the distance of eighty years from the horrible cataclysm, and reflects with wonder how within the memory of living men human nature could have been raised by the passion of battle to such sublime heroism as that displayed in these wheatfields and orchards where the Old Guard of France sank into oblivion, but rose to immortal fame.

The rest may be briefly summarized. Napoleon once more in Paris is obliged to abdicate without conditions. He becomes a fugitive. On the 3rd of July we see him at Rochefort, on the western coast. He would fain reach the United States; but the English fleets patrol the Atlantic. His mind is confused amid the wrecks of his destiny. He changes his purpose, and throws himself on the generosity of England. He claims to be a prisoner of war, and expects the treatment accorded by international law to great captains taken in battle. Vain expectation! He is conveyed to Torbay on the 25th of July. There are furious debates in the British Commons. For what shall we do with Him?

That indeed, O Great Britain, is a question! The worst, the most ungenerous thing is done. He shall be banished to St. Helena. The thing is accomplished. On the 16th of October, 1815, the greatest military leader, and in many respects the most remarkable man who has appeared in the world since the era of Christ, was debarked on his desolate island, that "Petite Isle" with which he had concluded his school exercise at Autun, thirty-six years ago!

Napoleon was not only exiled; he was imprisoned. St. Helena was his prison. He was guarded. His masters watched him with cruel surveillance for nearly six years. Under their sleepless eyes he dictated his "Memoirs" to Bertrand, conversed with his friends, or sought an hour in solitude on the rocks near Longwood, looking out to the sea. His health at length gave way. Though his constitution was superb, there was an organic malady which came, as if from his father's grave, to destroy him. An ulcer of the stomach—symptoms of which had appeared at intervals for a decade—began its ravages, and in a few months he sank away. It was on the 5th of May, 1821, in the midst of a terrible tempest desolating the island, that Napoleon died.

They gave him a grave under some willow trees, by a fountain in Slane's valley. There for nineteen years and a half his body lay, until a new generation, rising from the shadows of a revised Bourbonism, turned to the hero who, at the beginning of the century, had made France the first of nations; to him who had led her armies to victory and built for her an empire covering the better part of Europe. On the 15th of December, 1840, the body of the Emperor Napoleon, under the care of the not ungallant sons of Louis Philippe, was brought back in state from the desolate island of his exile and death. The coffin with the Great Dust in it was taken in pomp and pageant unsurpassed through the streets of Paris, and deposited in the sarcophagus of darkred porphyry, to rest for times and a time under the magnificent dome of the Invalides. There he reposes; and the Third Republic guards him.

CIRCUS ON THE DIAMOND

GREAT LOT OF FUN AT THE CRESCENT OVAL SATRRDAY.

The Famous Original Crescents Go Down Before the Y. M. C. A. Team to the Tune of 21 to 12 Runs.

Barnum's circus has long been known as the best of its kind in the country, but it cannot equal the circus that took place at the Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon, when the famous old Crescents tried their skill as ball tossers against that of the Y. M. C. A. team. The practice before the game was almost as much fun as the game itself. There stood Tom Keller, once manager of the famous Crescents, in his shirt sleeves catching the balls that came to firstbase with the air of an old timer. Out at short George Cornwell appeared stopping the balls and throwing to first with his old time vigor. Fred Walz, at second, showed he was alive yet, while Hervey Doane played his old position at third as if he had been doing it every day. After a time Joe Gavett showed up in a bicycle suit and tried to play first while Tee Kay went out to rightfield. John Murray, Jr., chased the long flies over in leftfield while Roger Murray, in an old Crescent suit, enjoyed himself at centre, while Corey and Townley, looked after the battery work.

The Y. M. C. A. team was badly broken up. Burt, the regular pitcher, failing to appear, while Captain Schoonmaker, the third baseman, and Schenck, from first, did not arrive until the middle of the game. Dupee twirled the ball in Burt's place for four innings, but lack of practice made him somewhat wild so each of the infielders was given a chance to show what kind of a pitcher he was.

The fun began in the first inning. The Y. M. C. A. boys were first at bat. Dupee had three strikes called on him and then McKelvey went to first on four balls. Hits from Runyon, F. Freeman, and a two-base hit from Wycoff, allowed Mac and Freeman to score, Runyon being caught at second. A muff of Davis's fly to centre sent Wycoff home, and strike out by A. Freeman ended the inning.

Errors by Dupee and McKelvey put Townley at third. Corey got his base on balls and then stole second, and both scored on a sacrifice hits by Gavett and Walz. Doane went out to Wycoff with the score three to two in favor of the Y. M. C. A's.

A base on balls and a stolen base put Bosterle on second base in the second inning and a pretty hit by McKelvey brought him home on the run. Cornwell stopped a hot one of Freeman's and got it to first in time to make the third out, with but the single run scored.

The Crescents were in for blood in their half of the inning, and on single hits by Cornwell and Townley, and sundry fumbles by the infield, delighted the rooters, by scoring three runs, thus making the score five to four in their favor.

The other team got a batting streak in the third inning, and hit Corey all over the field, a single, a double and a triple base hit resulting. Three runs were tallied for them, of which two were earned.

A big round goose egg was all the Crescents could make in their half of the inning, the score now standing seven to five in the "Y's" boys favor. Gavett and Keller now changed places, "Tee Kay" was given a chance to distinguish himself at first, which he did by catching every ball that came within his reach and running after flies in the most lively manner imaginable.

The fourth inning netted five runs for the Y. M. C. A., on two single hits and a multitude of errors, while the Crescents failed to score.

The fifth inning showed that the Crescents could play ball yet, for although their opponents filled the bases, they were unable to score. But the Crescents had the same luck in their half of the inning, Davis making a pretty catch of an apparently safe hit of Keller's.

Hits by Bolsterle, Dupee, and McKelvey, added by a dropped fly and a sacrifice hit by Schenck, brought in two more runs for the Y. M. C. A. nine in the sixth inning. Keller opened the lucky sixth for the Crescents by walking to first on four balls. Townley did likewise, Keller having a run to second on a wild pitch. Cornwell then ran for Keller and stole third, and both he and Townley scored on an error by Freeman. Corey went out on a high fly to Dupee, and Joe Gavett sent the grand stand into loud cheers by making a pretty hit over short and, after various adventures, completed the circuit by stealing all that was not given to him. Walz and Doane each went to first, but Cornwell and Johnny Murray ended the inning by hitting flies, Cornwell's out being made by a pretty left-handed catch of Dupee's.

In the seventh inning, an error by Corey and a two-base hit by McKelvey, sent in three more runs to the credit of the young men. While a two-base hit by Corey, and fumbled flies and grounders allowed three of the Crescents to cross the plates, making the score seventeen to eleven in favor of the Y's.

A very jolly time in the eighth inning made the Y. M. C. A. score four runs more. Schoonmaker bunting for two bases and coming home on Weykoff's single, while Schenck, Wyckoff, and Neal managed to run around also. With a man on third and one on second, the Crescents could not get one home in their inning.

Nothing was gained by the Y's in the last inning, while the Crescents made their only earned run, when Gavett got to first on a hit, took second on a sacrifice by Walz, and finished the circuit on a single by Doane to left field. Doane stole his second and third in fine style, but was unable to score before the last out.

The score by innings was:

Y. M. C. A.	3	1	3	5	0	2	3	4	0—21
Crescents	2	3	0	0	0	3	3	0	1—12

DUNELLEN'S SLAUGHTER.

The Arlingtons Are Playing Winning Ball Nowadays.

The Arlington Athletic Club of this city played the Dunellen Athletic Club on the latter's grounds Saturday, and defeated them by a score of 21 to 6. The Arlingtons played all around the Dunellenites, winning very easily. Bogart, who pitched a few games for the Y. M. C. A. team of this city, tried his hand at pitching, but he lasted only four innings, for the Arlingtons pounded his curves all over the field. The Arlingtons played a very fine fielding game, only three errors being charged against them. While the Dunellenites also played a good game, that did not count, for the Arlingtons had their last defeat still in their minds and were bound to get sweet revenge, and they got it, as the score will show.

The pitching of Sutphen for the Arlingtons was perfect, only five hits being made off his delivery, two of which were infield hits. The features of the game was the batting of the whole Arlington team.

Following will be found the full details of Dunellen's slaughter:

BIG ROW IN THE NOTCH.

ITALIAN SEWER WORKERS ATTACK MICHAEL GLEASON.

A Beer Drinking Party Turned Into a Free Fight With Gleason the Under Dog.

The sewer gang of laborers living at the Notch near Washingtonville have had more or less trouble since they were located there. Quantities of beer are drank and the men become infuriated and the result is that fights are frequent. People who are obliged to pass the place say that they are not safe and they never know what is going to happen.

Yesterday afternoon Michael Gleason, a sewer laborer living in town, paid the mountaineers a visit and as usual there was an abundance of beer. All hands had their share and more, too, when the crowd became very talkative and boisterous. A difference of opinion between Gleason and an Italian named Frank Derontz, in regard to something, resulted in the two having a fight.

The other Italians assisted Derontz and Gleason was unmercifully beaten and stabbed. A bottle was broken over his head inflicting several severe wounds. He was also stabbed in the hip with a penknife.

A man who works for Coddington, the iceman, heard the noise and went over just in time to save Gleason's life.

The injured man was taken to Dr. Carman and had his wounds dressed. This morning on a warrant issued by Justice Crosley, and endorsed by Justice Mosher, Constable Taynor arrested Derontz at his work on the corner of Central avenue and Fourth street and taken to the borough lock-up. Derontz says at a man named Servantz did the cutting and that he is innocent. A hearing will be held this afternoon.

There was not sufficient evidence to hold Frank Derontz for the stabbing of Michael Gleason, at the hearing before Justice Crosley this afternoon, and he was therefore released. Gleason would not press the charge.

LARGER CAPACITY FOR LIGHTING.

The Madison Avenue Power House Undergoing Extensive Alterations.

Extensive alterations and improvements are under way about the power-house of the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company on Madison avenue.

The building is to be enlarged considerably by the addition of a brick wing to the side and rear, the work on which was commenced this morning. The partitions about the present office will be removed and the space devoted to enlarging the engine and dynamo room.

New steel boilers will be put in and also a dynamo of great capacity will be added to the equipment.

Jessie Oakley, of Elizabeth, is the architect who planned the alterations.

The Sequel to a Fight.

The sequel to the John Dorgan case was started in Justice Mosher's court tent, this morning, and then adjourned until three o'clock.

Pine Yetman, the colored officer who arrested Dorgan, and Catherine Thomas, a colored woman, both charged Julia Dorgan with assault and battery, and she was brought before Justice Mosher by Constable W. R. Mattox. She was then given until three o'clock to secure witnesses.

An Improved Zither.

J. Van Eps, the Park Avenue jeweler, has just finished the plans of a new zither that promises to eclipse all previous ones. He has constructed several zithers, and made a number of improvements. Mr. Van Eps is an expert on the instrument, having played it for a long time, and he is satisfied that the new instrument will make sweeter music than any he has tried before.

A Toe Cut Off.

Drs. Probasco and Endicott performed an operation on the right foot of Robert Randolph, of Elmwood place yesterday afternoon, removing the little toe and part of the foot. Mr. Randolph has been a great sufferer with the foot for sometime, and it was found necessary to cut away the diseased part. The operation was successful, and Mr. Randolph is getting along very nicely.

Boating and Fireworks.

New Market was the objective point of a number of young people of this city and the borough on Saturday afternoon, when Miss Mabelle De R. Suffren gave a picnic to a few of their friends. Boating on the New Market pond was enjoyed during the afternoon, and fireworks during the evening. The signs of an approaching storm brought a very pleasant outing to a hurried close.

A Talk on Patriotism.

Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes preached a very interesting sermon in the First Baptist church yesterday morning on patriotism. Among other things he said was that this was a good land to live and die in, under the old flag; that there was enough for all within its wide inclosure, and that its privileges were greater than in any other country, and as long as the American people have patriotism there need be no fear of foreign interference. The doctor was very forcible in his remarks and the large congregation were thoroughly interested.

Valuable Trees.

Elm trees are worth $1,000 each in Rahway, at least that is the value placed on them by Francis Labau, superintendent of the freight department, West Shore Railroad, who wants $3,000 damages from the city of Rahway for the cutting down of three old elm trees that stood in front of his mother's residence on Main street. Mr. Labau has sent in a bill for the sum to the City Council, and now the Law Committee and City Attorney are wrestling with the problem as to whether the city shall pay any such exorbitant price, or in fact pay anything at all.

A Cow Suit.

The appeal suit of Farmer John Edgeworth, of Linden township, against Policeman Henry O'Rourke, of Rahway, has just been tried in the Union County Court. Justice Frazee gave a judgment for $50 against Edgeworth as damages in the sale of some cows to Officer O'Rourke. Edgeworth refused to pay this money and carried the case to the higher court. After all the testimony was submitted Judge McCormick said the Court would reserve its decision.

A Love Token.

Last evening after Pastor Richardson of the Park Avenue Baptist church had returned to his home, a committee representing the church, called and presented to him a heavy purse as a love token. It was a complete surprise, and the reverend gentleman could hardly find words to express his appreciation of his people's regard.

Rev. Try this Ideal Cough Remedy now. Trial bottle free at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

THE PARK CLUB FIREWORKS

A TRIFLE BELATED BUT ENJOYED JUST THE SAME.

An Immense Crowd Gathered to Witness the Display—A Dance to the Guests Afterwards.

There is more real enjoyment in an unpremeditated affair than in half a half a dozen previously arranged schemes, and so it was with the dance at the Park Club Saturday evening. The fireworks were a success although they had been arranged before hand, but would have been a greater success had not a thunder shower appeared at the most importune moment and mixed up everything generally. The committee in charge of the pyrotechnic exhibit consisted of B. A. Hegeman, Jr., William J. Roome, Edwin T. Douglass, Julius E. Erickson, Charles A. Reed and William G. Runyon. The Consolidated Fireworks Company, of New York, furnished the fireworks and sent a corps of their men to set them off, which accounted for the prompt manner in which the firing was done. The committee also deserve great credit, as the celebration was one of the best Plainfield ever saw. Rockets, batteries, mines and fountains of fire followed each other in rapid succession, while colored lights cast a pale or ruddy glow, as the case might be, over the assembled throng. The set pieces deserved the hearty applause that they received.

The well-kept grounds of the Park Club were crowded with the invited guests, while outside Washington avenue was packed with a dense throng who came to watch the postponed celebration. When the exhibit was about concluded a few drops of rain and thunder and lightning sent the crowd scurrying for shelter, and soon the dancing hall of the clubhouse was alive with the gay dancers, while Rogers and Conde played dance inspiring music. The dance was only arranged at the very last moment, when a committee, consisting of Carl Brown, W. E. MacClymont and Wm. Thiers, started the ball rolling, which ended by the junior members of the club giving an informal dance. It was informal, too, some of the young men appearing in negligee costume and others in evening dress.

Down stairs in the bowling alleys ice cream was served, while punch-bowls of lemonade sat around for the thirsty visitor.

The decorations in the dancing hall were the same as on the Fourth, while outside strings of Chinese lanterns cast a soft light on the scene. The dance was even better attended than that of the Fourth, and the visitors only departed when Sunday morning drew near.

Among those who were present during the evening were:

Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Serrell, Mr. and Mrs. William E. MacClymont, Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Brewster, Mr. and Mrs. George Hallock, Mr. and Mrs. Josegh Howell, Mr. and Mrs. Buckingham, Mr. and Mrs. William J. WITH RAQUET AND BALL.

Hillside Tennis Club Tournament Finished on Saturday.

Although the weather was not all that could be desired, a goodly number of people turned out at the courts of the Hillside Tennis Club on Saturday, to see the Fourth of July tournament played off. A few sets of the first round had been played on Thursday but the rain prevented any material progress in the tournament until Saturday, when by playing morning and afternoon all but the finals were finished in spite of frequent showers which made both watching and playing disagreeable. The last set was not played until nearly seven o'clock, but a number of people stayed until the end.

The play on both days was as follows:

First round—George Ryder beat C. Morgan 6-2, 6-8, 6-3. Henry Ryder beat V. R. Schuyler 6-0, 6-4. Henry D. West beat F. S. Keeler 6-8, 6-2, 6-2. George Schoonmaker beat W. V. A. Keeler 6 2, 6-1. S. Hunter beat C. Pfeiffer 6-2, 6-1. W. L. McClure beat H. L. Bogert by default. J. H. P. Wharton beat T. A. Smith by default. F. K. Fish, Jr. beat R. A. Beebe 6-2, 6-4.

Second round—H. Ryder beat C. Morgan 6-1, 6-1. H. D. West beat George Schoonmaker 6-3, 7-5. S. Hunter beat W. L. McClure 6-4, 6 1. F.K. Fish, Jr. beat J. H. P. Wharton 6-2, 6-3.

Semi-finals—H. Ryder beat H. D. West 6-3, 6-3. F. K. Fish, Jr. beat S. Hunter 6-4, 6-4.

The finals between Henry Ryder and F. K. Fish, Jr., will be played off some time this week and should make an interesting match. The prize is a pair of gold sleeve links.

HURT BY A HAIRPIN.

Mrs. Gavett Suffered a Peculiar Accident This Morning.

A serious accident occured this morning in front of Marsh, Ayers & Co's. store. Mrs. Joseph Gavett with her children drove up in a two seated surrey. There were a number of wagons in the locality, forming a blockade and among them was one driven by Wm. J. Nelson. The wheels of his wagon collided with the wagon in which Mrs. Gavett and the children were seated. The horse became frightened and jumped on the sidewalk. The shafts and whiffletree were broken and the wagon upset, throwing Mrs. Gavett and the children out. Mrs. Gavett struck her head on the curbing and a hairpin in the back of her head made a painful incision.

The children were not injured. Howard Wilson caught the horse and prevented further damage. Joseph Gavett at once secured a wagon and took his wife home.

AN INCIDENT OF THE BOULEVARD.

John Dorgan Was Tough, So He Swore and Fought An Officer.

Things were rather lively on the Boulevard yesterday afternoon. John Dorgan was coming down Liberty street near the Mt. Olive Baptist church when he met the colored special officer, Pine Yetman. Dorgan began to curse and swear when Yetman requested him to be quiet and go home. He refused and continued his disorder and then the officer started to arrest him. Dorgan resisted and a lively little scrap ensued in which Dorgan's mother and father, who had now arrived on the scene, took a hand. A bystander came to the assistance of Yetman and the culprit was taken to jail.

When brought before Judge Coddington, this morning, he pleaded guilty to the charge of disturbing the peace and resisting the officer. The Judge gave him his choice between a fine of $10 and thirty days in the county jail. The fine was paid.

Careless Drivers.

The bicycle riders of Plainfield are getting angry over the way their wheels are used when they leave them standing in the gutters or against a post. Saturday C. Thorp left his wheel standing in front of A. M. Griffen's store, when a carriage drove up and upset it, breaking the pump and badly bending the frame.

Go and See Zimmerman.

The very name of Zimmerman always brings a crowd, and as he is to ride in Asbury Park on Friday, the excursion of the First M. E. Sunday-school ought to be crowded as it goes to Asbury Park. A special car for the accommodation of wheelmen will be attached to the train.

ADRIFT ON THE OCEAN

The Little Rosie Was Helpless for Several Days.

A Fisherman, with His Wife and Two Young Children Supplied with Food and Water by the Steamship Bellarden—A Short Voyage Nearly Ended Disastrously.

New York, July 8.—The steamer Bellarden from Rio Janeiro reports that on Friday last, July 5, at 6:30 in the morning the lookout reported a small sailing craft dead ahead. On approaching the little vessel it was seen that she was unmanageable and had four occupants, a man, a woman, a boy of seven years and an infant.

Twenty-one Days of Suffering.

All were in a very weak condition. Joe Dallas, a native of Bermuda, embarked on board of his vessel, the Rosie, a small fishing boat about twenty feet long, not exceeding four tons burden, to change his residence from one part of the island of Bermuda to another. He took on board all his household effects, his wife and boy and nursing infant. After embarking, the little vessel was blown off her course, and after twenty-one days of hardship and privation the Bellarden appeared.

Supplied with Food and Water.

Dallas said that his provisions had been exhausted for many days, but they had only been out of water for forty-eight hours. Capt. Davidson urged Dallas to come on board the Bellarden with his family, offering to tow the Rosie to New York, but Dallas refused, saying that the Rosie contained all he had in the world and that he thought he would get along all right. They were supplied with provisions and water from the stores of the Bellarden and given the course for Bermuda.

Proceeded on His Course.

The Bellarden proceeded on her voyage, leaving the plucky Bermudian to again face the perils of the ocean. When the Bellarden parted from the Rosie she was about 100 miles southeast of Delaware capes.

NO MORE RACES.

Valkyrie III. Will Now Prepare for Her Voyage to America.

Hunters Quay, July 8.—The representative of the United Press learns that Valkyrie III. will take part in no more races on this side of the Atlantic. She will go to Henderson's yard this afternoon to prepare for her voyage to New York. Lord Dunraven left here Saturday night. Before taking his departure he expressed himself as thoroughly satisfied that the Valkyrie is better than any boat before built in Great Britain.

Criticized by a Clyde Yachtsman.

On the other hand, a Clyde yachtsman, who has followed the yacht closely ever since she was launched, and who has seen all the races in which she has taken part, says that, in his opinion, the boat is pulling out of shape in the sheer. She looks to be distinctly hogged in the wake of the main chain-plates.

Howard Gould Disgusted.

Howard Gould, the owner of the twenty rater Niagara, is much disgusted with racing against the eleven rater Dakotah of the Yacht Racing association's time allowance. He threatens to race his boat as a twenty-one rater, and claim admission to the forty rater class if the Dakotah continues winning in the south.

ANOTHER DRY SUNDAY.

Excise Law Rigidly Enforced in New York Yesterday.

New York, July 8.—This city yesterday had somewhat the appearance of a Maine prohibition town There were less saloons doing business than on the previous Sunday. Many of them which had done a quiet business before were closed beyond all doubt. Many of the saloon proprietors had been impressed by the statement of President Roosevelt of the police department during the week past that the excise law would be strictly enforced on Sunday and that anyone caught violating it would be arrested.

A Few Kept Open.

President Roosevelt had convinced the saloonkeepers that there would be no "bluff" in enforcing the law, so most of them decided not to take any chances. A few, however, kept open, but as on the previous Sunday, they would not admit anyone unknown to them.

Cheese and Crackers Didn't Go.

Heretofore on Sundays in the hotel cafes small plates of cheese and crackers were placed on every table, and anyone who presented a reputable appearance could take a seat, and, by eating or pretending to eat some of the cheese and crackers, could get whatever he called for to drink. This was changed yesterday at all of the hotels. Patrons were handed a menu and required to order something to eat before anything to drink was served to them.

Even the Bowery Deserted.

The famous "Tenderloin" district was no exception to the "dryness" prevailing in other parts of the city and the Bowery was practically deserted. In many churches the ministers delivered sermons extolling the crusade against the opening of saloons on Sunday.

Fewer Excise Arrests.

The arrests for violation of the excise law yesterday showed a decrease in number over any Sunday for years. There were 105 arrests, as against 125 last Sunday.

CHICAGO GALE SWEPT

Lives Lost in the Lake and Property Destroyed.

Disaster Reported from Many Points Throughout the West—Five Persons Drowned at Lake Geneva, Wis. People Killed in Georgia—Late Reports of Last Week's Storms.

Chicago, July 8.—With little warning of its terrific, death-dealing force and destructive character, a wind and rain storm, such as Chicago has not seen for years, broke upon the city about 5:30 o'clock last evening. The complet result will not be known for several hours, but it was known for a certainty this morning four lives were lost on Lake Michigan by the capsizing of boats at the mercy of the hurricane.

First Warning of the Storm.

The first approach of the storm was indicated by a severe blowing of dust in the business part of the city, sending the thousands of pedestrians to refuges in the hotels and stores which were open. In a few minutes the gale had increased to a 50-mile gait and the sky was overcast with circulating clouds and black masses filled with the deluge to come. Wind and rain soon mingled with terrific force and people on the streets and the thousands of women and children in the parks became frightened, thinking a cyclone was upon them.

Much Damage Done.

The heat during the day became oppressive and windows in the hotels were left opened. Before they could be closed thousands of dollars of damage had been done. Several injuries from glass were reported. Several small boats were seen to capsize and their occupants sink. The number of small boats on Lake Michigan was unusually large. Many of them had not sufficient warning to give them time to reach land before the gale was upon them. Thousands in the parks and at the ball grounds were drenched. Severel roofs were broken in by a combination of wind and water and plate glass windows were broken all over the city.

Damage at Peoria.

Peoria, Ill., July 8.—One of the worst storms in the history of Peoria swept over the city yesterday afternoon followed by a light rain. Great damage was done to buildings, several being twisted and moved from their foundations. The roofs of several business blocks were blown to the street. Yesterday was also the hottest day of the year, the thermometer registering ninety-eight in the shade. West of here on the T. P. & W. railway, the damage was great.

Fierce Storm in Wisconsin.

Chicago, July 8.—A special from Delavan, Wis., says the storm there was terrific. Roofs were blown from houses, trees were felled, windows broken and the crops badly damaged. Reports that yesterday was the hottest day of the year comes in from numerous quarters.

Hail Storm at Oshkosh.

At Oshkosh, Wis., the most severe hail storm in years occurred yesterday afternoon, breaking skylights and doing damage to crops. In ten minutes the temperature dropped from ninety to sixty-five degrees.

The Storm in Kansas.

Peadody, Kas., July 8.—A terrific rain and wind storm visited this town and vicinity last evening and much damage to barns, windmills and crops is reported. The streams are higher than they have been for ten years.

People Killed in Georgia.

Atlanta, Ga., July 8.—A storm which amounted to almost a cyclone in violence passed over Morgan county yesterday and many farm buildings were levelled to the ground. Two persons were killed and twenty injured.

Five Drowned on a Lake.

Lake Geneva, Wis., July 8.—Five persons were drowned in Lake Geneva yesterday afternoon by the swamping of the steam launch Dispatch in the tornado which swept over this section about 5 o'clock. The drowned are: Mrs. France and child, Father Hogan, Catholic priest, from Harvard, Ill.; Mrs. Hogan and John Preston, engineer of the launch.

DEATH AND RUIN.

Distressing Reports of the Work of Last Week's Rains in the West.

St. Louis, July 8.—Thursday morning last telegraphic reports began to arrive in this city of rains at western points. These reports grew in numbers Friday and covered a large territory, indicating that the entire eastern watershed of the Rocky mountains, from the Nebraska and Iowa lines to Texas, was swept by a storm. Friday night the severest blow came.

Total Loss Appalling.

Fields of grain that promised the most bountiful yield in many years are to-day swept bare of vegetation. In several instances the seas of rain were abetted in their work of destruction by tornado. It is too early yet to sum up the loss, but the total must be appalling, and those to whom the angry elements spared life have little left to sustain it. The stories of storm are so similar that a statistical summary is all there is left to tell.

Many Lives Lost.

The storm focus embraced an area of two hundred square miles, with the southwestern corner of Missouri as the centre. The greatest loss of life is reported from Winona, Mo., where eleven corpses have been found, and as many more persons are missing. At Baxter Springs, in southwestern Kansas, five were killed and eleven seriously injured by a cyclone that accompanied the storm. One was drowned at Columbus and two at Ottawa, Kans. At Vanburen, Ark., a woman and her child were drowned. A family to five were encamped on the banks of Fish creek, in the Indian territory. Nothing of them or their belongings can be found except a part of their wagon on a pile of driftwood. At Thomasville, Mo., five lives were lost.

Property Loss in the Millions.

The loss in property can be placed in the millions. Dwellings, fences and farm buildings were carried off and wagon and railroad bridges swept away. Thirty of the eighty buildings in Winona succumbed. Five residences, a church and a warehouse went down at Baxter springs. Six bridges went out in Russell county, Kansas.

LOOK IN THE CLOSET

SEE if you can't find some old clothes that you have put aside because of the worn-out look they have, or some clothes that are badly spotted.

We want you to bring any old clothes of that sort to us—or better yet—we'll send for them.

We propose to clean those clothes—or to dye them for you—either way to make them wearable. This is an economical suggestion.

We take out grease spots so they stay out, or we dye clothes with a color that wears. We charge as little as poasible for the work.

Just a dollar or two—and you'll have a lot of new clothes.

IT IS ANOTHER GIRL

Arrival of a Little Stranger at Gray Gables.

The Event Occurred Yesterday Afternoon at 4.30 O'clock—Mother and Baby Doing Well—The President Appeared Satisfied, But a Boy Would Have Been Welcome.

Buzzards Bay, Mass., July 8.—At Gray Gables, the quite and picturesque summer home of President Cleveland, at half past four yesterday afternoon, a little girl was born unto Mrs. Cleveland. Dr. Joseph D. Bryant, the attending physician, this morning informed a representative of the New England Associated Press that both mother and child were doing well.

A Boy Would Have Been Welcome.

This is the third child born into the president's family, and all of them are girls. Ruth is four years old and Esther two. Only a passing glance could be obtained of the president last evening, but that was sufficient to note an expression of satisfaction on the face of the chief executive, although it was an open secret that a boy would not have been unwelcome. Mrs. Cleveland's mother, Mrs. Perrine, is expected to arrive to-day from Buffalo.

SHOTGUN QUARANTINE.

Smallpox Tent on the Levee North of Memphis Guarded.

Memphis, Tenn., July 8.—About twelve miles south of this city is the levee camp of C. F. Degaris, though it now contains two tents. These are in a dense and muddy swamp. Its desertion is due to smallpox. A vigorous shotgun quarantine is maintained. While the camp is on Tennessee soil, a narrow strip of Mississippi land intervenes, and it is to prevent the crossing of this that the guard is kept.

Deserted His Family.

South Norwalk, Conn., July 8.—H. L. Spicer, a builder and contractor, who resided on Wilton avenue with his wife and two children, has been missing since Tuesday. He took considerable money with him. Friday Mrs. Spicer received a letter from him, dated at New York, stating that he would never return. Spicer leaves a number of creditors. Mrs. Spicer's parents are very rich.

NO TRIAL OF DEFENDER.

But She Sailed All Around the Colonia in a Short Run.

Providence, R. I., July 8.—It was supposed that it was the intention to speed the Defender with the Colonia as trial horse outside of Newport yesterday. Both yachts left Bristol about noon, and although the weather was almost ideal for a spin out beyond Beaver Tail, the yachts did not go further down the bay than Gould island. It is thought by those who were watching the yachts that there was an accident of some nature on board the Defender. This, however, was denied at Bristol. It is generally believed, however, that she broke the jaws of her gaff or met with an accident of some such nature. The yacht was some time in coming about after the sailor descended from aloft, and she at one bore away for Bristol.

Ran Away from Her Consort.

The Defender carried a working topsail in addition to the three lower sails which she spread. There was only a fair sailing breeze blowing, yet the Colonia, carrying the same sails, was not in it with the new boat. The Defender simply ran away from her consort.

Deserted His Wife.

Canton, O., July 8.—R. N. Taylor, a member of the law firm of Welty & Taylor, and son of ex-congressman I. N. Taylor, has left his wife and is supposed to be on his way to South America. Mrs. Taylor was a former society belle. The couple were only married a few months. Taylor left a letter to his wife in which he said that he never cared for her and that he would never return.

Husband and Wife Burned to Death.

Chicago, July 8.—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gunnwalk of south Chicago were burned to death yesterday. Mrs. Gunnwalk was getting ready to cook breakfast when the gasoline exploded and set fire to her dress. Her husband in attempting to save her had his clothing ignited. The building then caught and burned to the ground.

Marie Burroughs Denied a Divorce.

San Francisco, July 8.—Judge Troutt has denied the application of Marie Burroughs, the actress, for a divorce from her husband, Louis Massen. Miss Burroughs alleged infidelity as the reason for her suit, but the judge decided that she had not produced sufficient evidence.

Bismarck's Health.

Berlin, July 8.—With reference to the health of Prince Bismarck, the Hamburgische Correspondent announces that he took a long walk alone yesterday, and on returning conversed with a number of visitors whom he found gathered outside the house.

Mine Troubles in West Virginia.

Charleston, W. Va., July 8.—Gov. McCorkle is in receipt of several massages from the strike region, all of which state that everything is quite, and that there is no probability of trouble at present.

Grasshoppers Invade Indiana.

Valparaiso, Ind., July 8.—The southern part of this county was visited by millions of grasshoppers yesterday and several thousand acres of corn and timothy hay were completely destroyed.

Differed with His Flock.

Middletown, Conn., July 8.—Rev. P. F. Jernegan, pastor of the First Baptist church, has resigned. The resignation is the result of differences between the pastor and his flock.

Two Cleveland Prisoners Escape.

Cleveland, O., July 8.—Two prisoners succeeded in breaking jail here yesterday. The prison officials however, prevented a general delivery which had been planned.

Drouth in Iowa Broken.

Clinton, Ia., July 8.—The damaging drouth in this city was broken last night by a heavy rainfall.

BERLIN GOSSIP.

News of General Interest from the German Capital.

Berlin, July 8.—The attempt to force the retirement of Baron von Hammerstein from the management of the Kreuz Zeitung and the action of libel brought by Dr. Von Boetticher against the Hamburger Nachrichten and the Berlin Zukunft are promising some rich revelations if high authorities do not intervene. The conservative committee which was appointed to manage the affairs of the Kreuz Zeitung expected that Baron von Hammerstein would vacate the editorship of the paper on July 1 and the trouble appeared to be over.

The Baron Made Threats.

Suddenly the baron announced that if he should be obliged to quit his post he would go to Switzerland and there publish a pamphlet containing the full text of letters written to him by Baron von Manteuffel making disrespectful criticisms upon the emperor's public policy and attacks upon his private life. The letters bear date covering the period when Baron von Manteuffel indulged in expansive confidences to Hammerstein concerning the emperor's private acts and freely expressed his views in regard to the kaiser's public policy.

Succumbed to the Threats.

The committee succumbed to his threats and Hammerstein still remains in editorial command of the paper, but those who are in a position to know are confident that the scandals are only temporarily smothered and that before a great while they will be revived with greater intensity than ever.

Exodus from Berlin.

The great mass of the Berliners began their holidays on July 1. The schools are all closed for the vacation season and the city is fast being emptied of its inhabitants. The exodus during the past week has been enormous and the stream of travel has chiefly been directed towards the Baltic and North sea. The railways are now making a considerable reduction in their tariffs within the German borders, and have in this way been successful in diverting the annual stream of holiday travellers from Italy and Switzerland and directing it towards the north.

Runyon Goes to Carlsbad.

United States Ambassador Runyon has gone to Carlsbad, where he will drink the waters. From Carlsbad he will go to Switzerland. Secretary J. B. Jackson will be in charge of the embassy during Mr. Runyon's absence. Professor Joynes, of South Carolina, is here studying the scientific institutions.

Mrs. Walter Phelps in Berlin.

Mrs. William Walter Phelps, widow of the former United States minister to Germany, and Miss Boardman are the guests of Mrs. Phelps' daughter, the Countess von Rottenburg, whose accouchment is expected within a month. The Rev. Mr. Owen will retire from the chaplaincy of the church of St. George in Berlin next October and will join his son in Vancouver.

The Kaiser Will Visit Rome.

Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria has promised Emperor William that he will be present at the review of the troops on the Tempelhofer field on Sedan Day, September 1. This is regarded as an offset to the Russo-French demonstrations at Kiel. Emperor William will also go to Rome on the occasion of the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the entry of the Italians into Rome on September 20.

Editors Arrested as Pickpockets.

The Vorwaerts (socialist) asserts that two journalists who were present at the Kiel fetes were arrested by the police at that place as pickpockets.

Toll Over the Canal.

Germany's right to levy toll on all vessels passing through the Kaiser Wilhelm canal forms the subject of diplomatic correspodence upon the part of Great Britain, Russia, Denmark, Sweden and Norway. The claim is made that Prussia, by assuming the proprietory rights over Schleswig-Holstein, also assumed the obligation to lay no tax, tribute or tariff on vessels passing from the German ocean to the Baltic sea.

SMITH'S NEW PROPELLER.

Claimed That It Will Increase the Speed of Vessels 30 Per Cent.

St. Paul, Minn., July 8.—James B. Hubbell of this city is interested with Amroy B. Smith, the inventor of a propeller, which up to this time has been secret. It will be patented now in this country and Europe. The inventor claims it will increase the speed of vessels over 30 per cent. without additional cost on power and the speed can be further increased with greater power. It can be attached to vessels now built. Mr. Smith has made this a life study and has spent his money for years experimenting.

No Strings Attached To Him.

Leadville, Col., July 8.—W. F. Thompson, of New York, president of the National Lead company, is in the city looking over the mining and smelting situations. In an interview he avows he is a bimetallist and has no strings attached to him.

Another Niagara Bridge.

Niagara Falls, July 8.—President Smythe of the Upper Bridge company says that his company had prepared plans for a new single arch bridge to cost $200,000. The time of beginning the work will be settled at the annual meeting July 9.

Emanuel Baptist Church Reopens.

New Bulgarian Cabinet.

WHEELMEN'S BIG MEET

Opening of National Gathering at Asbury Park.

The City in Gala Attire and Hundreds of Visiting Cyclers Have Already Arrived—Some of the Rigid Sunday Laws Relaxed for the Benefit of the Visitors.

Asbury Park, N. J., July 8.—The national meet of the League of American Wheelmen, will formally begin to-day and hundreds of visiting cyclers have already arrived here and established themselves at the various hotels, some of which are even now crowded. The hotels and boarding house proprietors are vigorous in there denunciations of the rates during the meet, admitting that such a policy will be suicidal.

Beginning of the Meet.

The arrival of the century run from Newark Saturday evening was the real beginning of the meet, and the two hundred and odd survivors of the long, muddy ride have been the heores and heorines of the past twenty four hours, their bright, yellow checking badges rendering then conspicuous wherever they wander.

The City in Gala Attire.

The city is in gala trim to greet the stranger wheelmen. The colors of the league and the local club ornament hotels and dweelings, while shops and public buildings are more lavishly decorated. Huge banners bearing words of welcome hang across the principal thoroughfares near the railway station and a sea of showy bunting waves from flag-staffs and cupolas.

Register of the Visitors.

The handsome new club house of the Asbury Park wheelmen is wide open at all hours and a register of each visitor is there kept, with his or her address, in order that friends may easily find out one another and clubmates may be brought together. A reception committee of over a hundred citizens meet all trains, and tents where any sort of information is to be obtained has been erected at the main depot and at the little station at North Asbury Park, close to the race track.

Lamp Ordinance Suspended.

Mayor Ten Broeck and the common council have suspended the bicycle lamp ordiance during the week of the meet in order that visiting cyclers need not be bothered to bring their lamps and may fly about after dark unmolested by the minions of the law a privilege which is sincerly appreciated by the guests.

Even Sunday Laws Relaxed.

The world famous rigid Sunday restrictions of Asbury Park were also perceptibly relaxed an extra service of trolley care was maintained, the club houses were open for once in their existence on the first day of the week and more wonderful still, in the bailiwick of Senator Bradley, the grounds of the Athletic association were open to all comers.

Big Attendance Anticipated.

Last year when the national meet was held in Denver, at the height of the hard times and just after the great railroad strikes, there were about four thousand visitors, despite the fact that the western membership of the league compared with its eastern clientele is as Lake Superior pitted against the Atlantic Ocean. This year, with the meet within easy reach of the majority of league members and the thousand and one attractions of Asbury Park as a meeting place, it is not unfair to anticipate that last year's visitation will be trebled if not quadrupeled.

SHOT WITHOUT TRIAL.

An American Citizen's Execution in Mexico May Be Investigated.

Phoenix, Ariz., July 8.—Albert Tribolet returned yesterday from Fronteras, Mexico, where he has been to investigate the shooting of his brother Robert Tribolet, June 26. Tribolet was taken from prison wherein he had been incarcerated on the charge of complicity in the murder of Stage Driver Moreno, two weeks before, and without the formality of a trial was shot to death by Mexican soldiers.

Denied All Visitors.

No relatives or friends were allowed to be with him during his brief confinement, though the prisoner vainly attempted to show his innocence, and that he was in his field at home on the day of the robbery. His brother met with scant courtesy at the hands of the Mexican authorities.

Will Appeal to Washington.

He was informed by Captain Mendes, who had been both judge and executioner, that Robert had been shot because a horse ridden by one of the robbers had upon it the Tribolet brand. Deceased was an American citizen, and death leaves his large family almost destitute. His brother will appeal to the state department at Washington for redress.

Bisley Rifle Meeting.

Now is the time of the year for the man who is in the hands of his friends to bloom.

Everything looks serene in Plainfield G. O. P. circles, but there is a good deal of thinking going on.

Hon. Foster M. Voorhees is a stay-in-the-field candidate for the Republican Gubernatorial nomination. Mr. Voorhees has stated this over his own signature, and this should settle it. Mr. Voorhees replied that he was not a candidate in the interest of any other person, and that he will not withdraw in favor of any one else.

THE CONTINUOUS SHOW.

Manager Proctor Doing a Big Business in this Amusement.

The continuous show at Proctor's is just a novel, high class and admirable in midsummer as in midwinter. One of the chief factors in the remarkable success of this popular resort has been the maintaining of a high standard of entertainment. On the Fourth of July, about the worst theatrical holiday of the year over a thousand people were turned away. This is significant of the success of the Proctor policy. Elsie Adair, a delightful comiedenne and dancer, who has been touring Japan, China and India with her own company, and winning great honors from Oriental dignities, is a feature this week, assisted in her bright and breezy sketches by Walter Vanderlip. The Four Emperors of Music have a capital melange of humor and harmony. Stinson and Merton are very funny in "The Insurance Agent", and others of entertaining gaiety are Madeline Marshall and Fanny St. Clair, serio comics; Nelsonia, finger shadowist and necromancer; Borgore and Moore, the pretty California character duettists; Claudine, a dancer of remarkable skill; Ward and Lynch, originators of "Little Johnny Doogan", M'lle. Bertini, contortionist; Kennedy and Quinn, eccentric comedians; Aida Armout, male impersonator; Chas. H. Stanley, comedian and parodist and Atlas, the modern juggler. Mr. Proctor's new million dollar theatre in east 58 street, between 3d and Lexington avenues, will be opened September 2, and will be known as Proctor's Pleasure Palace. It will be the most comprehensive place of amusement in America, embracing music hall, thertre, garden of palms, Turkish Divan, German cafe, Roof Garden and other novel features.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Hudson River By Daylight.

The most attractive and charming inland water trip on the American continent for Summer travel, is by the Hudson River Day line of steamboats, leaving foot of Desbrosses street, North River, daily, at 8:40 a. m., and 22d street at nine o'clock, arriving at Albany at 6:00 the same day, thus giving a full day on the magnificent Hudson River. The palatial iron boats, "New York" and "Albany," are second to none in American waters for speed and comfort; and to further add to their attractiveness band concerts are given every morning and afternoon by a first-class orchestra. Meals are served a la carte and table d'hote. The fare on these magnificent floating palaces is considerably less than by rail, (about one half) and the conveniences and comforts are not to be compared.

AMERICAN MANUFACTURES NOW FIND A READY SALE IN EUROPE.

Shoes, Woolens and Typewriters. An Unexpected Result of the Hard Times. Our Tools and Machinery in Foreign Lands. Englishmen Use Our Bikes.

A remarkable phase of the recent business depression has been the singular impetus which it has given to the exportation of American manufactures. American manufacturers found that on account of the hard times not nearly so many goods were being consumed in this country.

All branches of trade were overproduced and the manufacturers were face to face with the problem as to how to get back the money they had locked up in goods. Many of them went promptly to work to find new markets.

A Leicester dispatch says the serious feature of the bootmakers' strike is the rapid growth of American competition. Three tons of American boots and shoes have been delivered in a single day to Leicester dealers at prices cheaper than they could be bought from the manufacturers there. Commenting on this dispatch, the London Daily News said that at this rate there will soon be little left for the English manufacturers or operators to contend for.

And this is entirely true. American ingenuity has invented and perfected the finest boot and shoe making machinery in the world. Furthermore, we have the raw material comparatively close at hand, and while we pay more for labor it is generally considered that this difference in wages is entirely made up in the difference of skill and the comparative amount of work turned out by the American and the English operator. To such perfection has boot making in this country been pushed that to-day we have machines which manufacturers declare turn out finer shoes than those which are made by hand.

But perhaps the most remarkable development of export trade from this country has been that of fine tools. Said the editor of the Metal Worker:

"Probably the finest mechanics in the world are now to be found in New England, and in the making of tools, especially high priced instruments in which great precision and accuracy are required, we lead all other countries. It is the testimony of inventor Hiram S. Maxim that he could not find a square that was really square in all Europe, except those which were made in America. And so in other lines, such machines as turning lathes, planers and shaping machines, drill presses, micrometer calipers, scales and rules, coming almost invariably from the United States.

The sewing machine was one of the first of American manufactured products to be introduced abroad, and it so early acquired precedence that it has held the lead ever since. There are comparatively few sewing machines made in Europe except those made by branches from American factories and by American machinery. Something of the same sort is true of printing presses.

Another curious example is the typewriter. There is to-day practically no English machine on the English market to compete with the American product.

For some reason that it is difficut to explain, the English have not yet been able to turn out a successful machine.

Of course there has been no such an acceptance of typewriters in Europe as in this country, but careful estimates indicate an immense increase in the demand in the next few years.

Another American machine that has found remarkable favor in the European eye is the bicycle. This has been almost entirely within the past one or two years. Previous to that time the English and the French bicycle as well were probably superior to the American makes. Now, however, the American manufacturers are turning out a machine that is not only lighter and stronger but cheaper than any made in Europe, and, in consequence, of this, within the last year a large number of machines have been sent from this country and almost all the leading makers have established European agencies.

American watch case manufacturers, when the depression set in about two years ago, found that the demand for watch cases had suddenly fallen off. So they went to work making cyclometers. These little machines were selling in Europe at seven and eight dollars a piece. Experiments showed the manufacturers that they could make cyclometers of equal value and put it upon the wholesale market in large quantities for about $1.25. When they offered a consignment of 10,000 machines to their European agent, he was utterly dumbfounded; nevertheless, he undertook their sale, and before the consignment reached England the entire lot had been disposed of.

Of late years American made firearms have taken precedence over those of almost every country. They are used almost exclusively in Africa. This is also the case with American agricultural machinery.

Almost all the larger American houses have of late years established European agencies, and the sales through them annually reach a large figure.

Within the year a prominent reaper and mower company had sent a shipload—equivalent to 150 carloads—of machines to the Black Sea, and other large consignments to the Baltic and to Algiers.

The American product is often shipped to the English or Continental market to be thence reshipped to distant parts of the world.

A DRAMATIC EVENING
BY
John Seymour Wood

(Copyright, 1895, by Irving Bacheller.)

THE LAST ACT.

"You seem no longer doubtful, Burnett," remarked the inspector, as in the hushed silence of the darkened house the former approached him, and Marguerite was saying from her white dimity bed, to Gaston, in the play:

"Kind heart; here you are, you who have never been otherwise than a friend; you believe in me, you trust me, and watch over me, till the end?"

Gaston: "I know that you are good; I am assured."

"Yes," replied Burnett; "I, too, am assured!"

The detective smiled.

"It is difficult to conceive the brain that can act as she does," said he, and think of so many momentous affairs. Perhaps she is at this moment planning an escape, or planning her own death."

Burnett laughed contentedly. The love-light from her eyes was still illuminating his soul.

"Wait and see, but be ready," said the inspector, grimly, "for I fear the worst."

The touching catastrophe of the play proceeded to its end. There had never been so sweet, so gentle, yet so pasionate a Camille. The loving woman who had sacrificed her life for her lover was dying. There was little sign of regret; there was no effort to harrow up the feelings of the silent audience; there was simply a marvelous holding up the miror to nature—the sinking away of a hopeful and not unhappy girl.

"I cannot be in danger," says Marguerite, pathetically, "for Gaston would not have the courage to laugh at my bedside; the doctor would not leave me alone."

Then followed that exquisite bit of silent acting before the mirror; the little cry as she totters toward her bed, the heroic effort to keep up; the creeping, awful fear of death; the shuddering glance at the door, as if she saw his ghastly presence entering; and the brave struggle not to faint, not to die until her beloved had come back to her from the ends of the earth. She falls at last gasping across the bed; Nanine enters and announces the approach of Armand. It gives her a momentary rush of joy and strength. She sits up.

"Give me my medicine, the brandy, Nanine! Quick!"

"Now, follow me!" cried the inspector. And he darted to the scene door. "Don't you see?" he cried hoarsely. "She is going to actually kill herself. You know the play; go on, you, as Armand; seize the bottle of medicine. Be quick! The audience will not notice the imposition. Hurry; it may be too late!"

Detective Davids, known as the "sleuth hound" of the New York police force, actually placed his hands on Burnett's shoulders and pushed him toward the stage.

"You can't mean that I—I really go on as Armand?"

"Do you wish to see her die? I tell you, it's what she will do. She will make a dramatic end; it's my theory of the case," cried Davids, excitedly.

Burnett looked at him aghast. But there was no time to question or argue. With his head in a whirl of confusion and excitement, partly caused by the blow he received in falling from the cab on Broadway, partly by the earnest and baleful words of the detective, Burnett sprang upon the stage, nadly shouting:

"Don't die, Marguerite! for my sake, for my sake!"

His acting was certainly very realistic and vivid. A round of applause burst from the gallery. Many in the audience believed it was the true Armand (Mr. Wickersham) "returned from his long journey," and having the traces of his duel with M. de Varville on his pale face, the ordeal he had undergone accounting for the change in his general appearance. He was a much more dashing, much handsomer Armand than Mr. Wickersham. His fervency in throwing himself upon his knees behind Marguerite's bed stirred the gallery gods profoundly.

As for poor Marguerite, she was clever enough to keep her wits about her. She believed that Burnett had suddenly gone crazy, but her quick actress' sense told her that to most of the audience the incongruity of the entrance of Armand in a dress suit, a splashed and muddy shirt bosom and light overcoat without a hat, was not noticed. She whispered to the maid, Nanine, quickly, "Keep Mr. Wickersham off," and with a stage cough, turned to Burnett, who had seized the medicine bottle.

"So you have come at last! Armand—can it be really my Armand? Oh, it is not you? It is impossible that God is so good! (Whisper) It must be the devil prompted you to do this, Mr. Burnett! Have you gone mad?"

"Yes, it is I; I love you. Do not curse me! I have had the most sinister presentiment that you were about to die—that I should never see you—speak with you alive again!"

"Poor Armand! He does love me! But will you not give me my medicine? (Sotto voice) You are very bold, Mr. Burnett. I am very angry at you! I never heard of such presumption in my life!"

Burnett (whispering)—"I dare not give you the medicine. It may be poison."

Marguerite (whispers)—"Nonsense, Mr. Burnett! It is the proper business. Give it to me, and don't let it drop down my neck!"

Burnett stood up by her bedside and pretended to feed her the medicine, but with a dry spoon.

Marguerite—"There, I feel better. Oh, I'm so glad you have come, Armand. Now your father will not separate us ever again, will he? (Cough) You do not find your Marguerite as of the past (cough), but I am still young. I shall become beautiful again, because I am now at last so—so happy!" (She clasps Burnett to her and whispers) "You wretch! How unkind of you!" (He kisses her.)

He whispered in reply, "Forgive me, Miss Armitage—Eleanor—but I am madly in love with you, and I couldn't stand in the wings and see you die in Wickersham's arms again—no, not for worlds!" (Kisses her again.)

Marguerite—"Say something for the audience. Don't speak to me—[illegible] you. She was really half between laughter and tears.

Burnett (aloud)—"Our future is assured. Only tell me you love me and you will live! In a few days we will be married—oh, to be married to my darling!"

Marguerite (aside)—"Really, Mr. Burnett!—I never knew such audacity in my life! Do you think I can ever speak to you again? (Aloud)—Oh, it will be sweet, and it is such a time of happiness. Do you know Nichette is to be married? She weds Gustave this morning. We shall go, too. It will do us good to go into a church. Ah, but tell me again you love me! (To him)—Do you really?"

Burnett (to her)—"Oh, Eleanor, you know love is my only excuse! (Aloud)—I love you forever and ever! My darling! My bride!"

Marguerite (aside)—"Thank heaven, the scene is soon over! The manager must be perfectly furious at you. Please at least pretend to cry a little! (Aloud)—Oh, tell me you love me—that is all I ask. Am forced to give you courage?" (What must the audience think? Probably that Mr. Wickersham has been taken suddenly ill. The manager must announce it. I can see they are all in whispers over the new Armand!)

Burnett (aloud)—"My poor Marguerite!"

Marguerite (coughs)—"Go to that drawer in my bureau; there you will find a locket. I had it painted when I was pretty. When you come to marry, Armand, if your wife is jealous of the past as we women so often are, tell her that it is the portrait of a friend, who, if God permits her to dwell in the darkest corner of heaven, prays to Him every day for her and you. The woman who loves suffers too much when she feels she is not loved."

Armand—"God knows I love you! (Kisses her.)

Marguerite (aside)—"Mr. Burnett, I almost believe you to be really in earnest. (Aloud)—Ah, here come Nichette, Gustave and Gaston. (Aside)—How flabbergasted they look! (Suppresses a smile.) (Aloud)—Kind friends, welcome. So now you are married! When I am dead, you will speak of me sometimes, will you not? Ah, strange feeling! How strange everyone looks."

Armand—"My God, she is dying!" (Aside)—"You do it so naturally that it seems real."

Marguerite—"I am better. No, I do not suffer—I shall live. How well I feel! How very well." (Marguerite sinks back on the bed and dies.)

(Tableau.)

Gaston—"She is dead!"

Armand (solemnly)—"Oh, I will follow her if it is true!"

(Great applause.)

(Quick curtain.)

THE FINALE.

As the curtain descended, Sarah, her maid, threw the long, nunlike cloak about Marguerite's pretty figure, and the latter rose from her couch and stood her full height. She was a sudden and miraculous transformation from a corpse to a beautiful and angry woman.

"What did you mean by this tomfoolery?" she asked of Burnett, her eyes flashing with wrath.

"I—I was half crazed," he muttered, his eyes lowered. "Forgive me; I hardly knew what I did. I feared for your life."

"You have made me a laughing stock before the public!"

"Burnett—how the devil—what did you mean?" asked Wickersham, coming forward, indignantly. "I've asked the manager to explain that I was suddenly taken ill. What in h—hades? Are you crazy, or what?"

They could hear the manager explaining before the curtain.

Burnett said stiffly: "Later on I will explain fully."

"I must say you did it well—great embarrassement—very sincere!" added Wickersham, disposed on the whole to take it as a joke. "I didn't know you could act as well; you shall be my understudy in future, ha! ha!"

"And I shall never forgive you as long as I live, Mr. Burnett," exclaimed Eleanor, trying to keep her indignation at white heat. "The idea of your daring to do such a thing, to risk breaking up the entire climax of the play! Oh, it was wicked! But I really believe you are not yourself; you look ill; are you ill?" (anxiously).

Burnett did not reply. Her indignation seemed to soften as she gazed at him.

Just then the call boy handed her a note. She opened it hastily, and read aloud in her agitation:

"Dear Eleanor—I have been taken with another of my apoplectic attacks, but am better now; and write from my bed to tell you to come to me at the Oldorf as soon as you can. I was nearly two hours utterly unconscious, and supposed to be dead. You can see at once how ill I am.

"Your loving
"FATHER."

"P. S.—Come soon, my darling!"

"My father is ill," she cried. "I must go to him. Call my carriage at once! What a night of horrible experiences and sensations! Come, Sarah, hurry. I will go at once, as I am! My poor, poor daddy!"

She swept out of the theater with a glance of high indignation and scorn at poor Burnett, who, instead of meekly hanging his head in shame, was now clapping his hands and dancing about like a veritable madman, as if "tickled to death." So, Lord Holton was not dead, after all!

"Crazy as a loon, poor fellow!" remarked Mr. Wickersham, as he lit a cigar and prepared to take his departure. "And a very able, capable critic, too—always fair to me."

The manager, a clever fellow, came bustling in, having made a capital little speech and sent the audience away in good humor.

"Don't say a word, Burnett," he said. "But it's all right. Her father had a stroke, that's all; and the detective mistook the odor of iodoform which a guest happened to be using for toothache, for chloroform, and the handkerchief she held over Lord Holton's head made them suspect her. They jumped too quick, that's all. Oh, by the way, where is Mr. Swift? Where is Mr. Davids—the astute detectives? I can't seem to find them anywhere! Burnett, there's a hot bird and a cold bottle awaiting us over at Del's, at my expense. You're my friend! If it hadn't been for you, Swift would have stopped the play, by Jove. Oh, these detectives!"

Burnett grasped his hand and they both laughed.

"And then," said the former, "that man Davids wrought me up to a pitch of frenzy by saying she would certainly poison herself (dear, innocent girl!) in the death scene. And then I went on to prevent it. I wouldn't let her touch her medicine."

"Ha, ha! ho, ho! naturally she died, then," laughed the manager; "but keep mum. Don't say a word. To-morrow see her quietly and explain it all. I'll see her, too, for you. Mark my word, Burnett, she likes you. In the end, she will appreciate your interference. As for you, you never made love better to a girl in your life than to-night. All's well that ends well. I hear that Edward Armitage, whose real name is Roget, has run away to Beantown with Fanny Highkick."

"Hush!" growled Burnett, savagely. "I—I——"

And the manager took his arm and they walked out together.

* * * * * * * * *

Two years later, after Lady Camilla Elizabeth Holton had obtained a divorce from her worthless and dissipated husband, Henry Roget, there was a quiet wedding at the quaint little English church, near Heathdome, Lord Holton's seat near Birmingham. The beautiful Mrs. Harold Burnett, to the regret of the play-going public, has definitely left the stage. She spends her time with the present Lady Holton in nursing her invalid father (poor Lord Holton never quite got over those American oysters at the Oldorf) and assisting her husband in writing his (expected to be famous) novel, "The False Clue; or, A Sensation Spoiled."

Many a hearty laugh has the jolly old lord had over the impetuous Armand of his handsome son-in-law.

As for Lady Camilla, she is completely happy, and that is enough. There is nothing more to be said.

"And they had me—Camilla—dead in Australia, did they, and rigged up an illegitimate sister. Oh, these detectives! But there is one thing, Harold: you did make love to me in a very captivating way on the stage that night in New York, and some day, just for fun, we'll play Camille at some provincial theater for a charity. Will you, Armand, dear?"

"No, don't ask me. What agony I went through that dreadful dramatic evening I wish to bury forever out of sight and memory. To think I feared that you——"

The rest of the sentence was
"A kiss, which he had set Between two charming words."
(The end.)

A LITTLE DEAL.

"Presents—clothes—honeymoon. How on earth can one leave out either?" asked George Littlecash of himself, earnestly drilling his penholder into a much furrowed forehead. "There never was a wedding without presents. As for no honeymoon—why, Hetty would be justified in crying off before the very altar."

What had placed our friend in this unpleasant quandary was, to begin with, Uncle Piper's check for £500. It was a check to marry Hetty and set up house with, and qua cash was satisfactory enough; but accompanied with the wise avuncular injunction, "George, marry on a cash basis—cash, mind—or never look me in the face again." Such excellent advice, plus a £500 check, it is impossible for a nephew to spurn—especially a nephew in love."

And then, when he had this gold mine of untold wealth in his pocket, and a full ocean of happiness to look forward to, George fell into the toils of the plausible fellow, Tom Scherer, of the well known city firm of Mouton, Scherer & Walker. Scherer had such a taking way of remembering, and cherishing affectionately, one's Christian name.

"Ah! Congratulate you, my dear George. Coming off next month, eh? Happy man! Some of you fellows have the devil's own luck. And just in time, too, for me to put you on to one of the nicest little chances of making a comfortable nest egg for the happy home—one of the prettiest chances you ever had. But come into Pipp's and have a coffee."

Pipp's, that long, low, smoky "dive" in Throgmorton street, was crowded with easy mannered gentleman in silk hats, or in no hats at all, who conversed in pairs and in groups with electrical energy. They could not hear themselves for their own talking. "Call-at-five-three - eight," "Book - you thousand." "Buy - six - quarter," "Sell." "Buy," "Panjandrums," "Rhodes," "Barney's stock," "Struck-Bibble - hobble - reef," "Last-crushing-ten-ounces"—such were some of the scraps of jargon that emerged above the din in flashes of comparative silence; while ever and anon a gentleman would draw from his vest pocket a little note book and pencil some entry or other. Almost deafened at first by the hubbub, George Littlecash was soon in the whirlpool himself, an eager listener to Mr. Scherer's glowing tales indicative of the pecuniary advantage certain to result from a small punt in the South African "boom."

"Eighty thou' in one deal, my dear George—what d'ye think of that, eh? Beringett went nap on Gold Bug Extensions—put on every penny he could scrape together, till he hadn't a cent to swear by—and came out 80,000 golden sovereigns to the good. And yet you say it isn't worth trying. My dear George—faint heart never maintained a fair lady, if it won her."

The upshot was that George figured up his liabilities against his check, and handed over to the trusty Scherer £250, to be converted in two days, or some such reasonable time, into £2,500.

"Done!" cried Scherer, as he pencilled the little transaction in his note book.

And "done" George was. For next day, when he looked at Mines in the money column, he found that Gold Bugs had crawled downstairs three-eights.

"What do you advise, Scherer?" asked George, when they met in the city.

"Never advise, my dear George. Don't do it—on principle. 'Cut your losses, let your profits run,' is our old wheeze; but it's no good being too hasty. This fall is simply due to somebody being in too big a hurry to pocket a profit. But you judge for yourself dear boy, that's what I advise."

Next day Gold Bugs had crawled downstairs two or three steps more.

"It's nothing, George," said the optimistic Scherer. "Weak holders—couldn't last out—that's my explanation. Still, don't be guided by me."

Next day after that Gold Bugs had fallen so heavily that you couldn't find anybody to pick them up again at any price. And just then, of course, to make amends, George Littlecash was reminded by his tailor of "that little account" which had been overlooked for so many quarters. It was in this doleful hour, as he sat savagely biting his lips, knitting his brows and inwardly cursing Scherer and all his works that he glanced vaguely at a copy of the Evening Intelligence.

"Renewed activity in Rand Shares," was the line in large type that caught the disconsolate investor's eye as the paper lay on his desk.

"Confound Rand shares!" he ejaculated fervently, wheeling round as though from a too affectionate snake.

Just then, as luck had it, in popped the beaming and expansive Scherer.

"Why, George, my dear boy, you're looking as ghastly as James Canham Read when he was 'taken from life,' as the waxworks bill says. Nothing serious, I hope? Gal chucked you?"

"Look here, Scherer; I don't want you blarneying me again. I've had quite enough of Rand shares, thanks—in fact a long sight too much."

"Rand shares! Why, my dear fellow," Scherer returned with a look of pained virtue, "you really don't mean to tell me that's what put you down in the dumps—that little matter of two-fifty, when you stood to win as many thousands! Bless my soul!"—Scherer's eye had just caught the line in the Evening Intelligence—"have you seen the paper to-night?"

"No," replied George, whose back was turned, "nor want to. I'm sick of the whole thing. You knew, for I told you, I couldn't risk anything under the circumstances unless it was absolutely certain."

"And that's what you call 'risk'?"

"Oh, hang!—I know it's my own fault—only don't bother me with any more of these fine tales."

"Now, I call this very unkind of you, George," said Scherer, injured. "I do, indeed." And so saying, while he stole one eye on George's back, Mr. Scherer cast the other down the money column. When it reached Gold Bugs that particular eye flared up like a fusee.

"Now, what should you say if Gold Bugs went up again to 5 1-4, eh?"

"Rot!"

"Right you are, dear boy. 'Rot' is it? Well, well. You think I misled you about that little deal, eh?"

"Well, if you want plain speaking, Mr. Scherer, I think you did."

"And you an' I friends, George! This is what comes of trying to do a man a good turn! Now what do you say if I offer to take those shares off your hands again, since you're so cut up over 'em?"

"At a shilling apiece I suppose. Ha, ha!"

"A shilling apiece? No, sir! Not at 'a shilling apiece.' I'll give you what you gave for 'em, and 'a shilling apiece' over to soothe your injured feelings. What d'ye think of that!"

Mr. Scherer found his magnanimity so exhilarating that he drew himself up, threw open his coat and slipped George's Evening Intelligence into his own pocket.

"You doubt my honesty and my good faith, eh, my dear sir," he said, pulling out his check book and a roll of notes. "Last week you paid me £250; if you will be so good as to hand me back the scrip I shall have much pleasure in handing you my check for £362 10s. Or, p'raps," he added, with cutting sarcasm, "since you doubt my honesty, you would prefer Bank of England notes?"

George, who had risen, half dazed, had just enough presence of mind to gasp in his astonishment—

"If it's all the same to you, I should."

"Certainly, my dear sir."

"I'm only too delighted to hand it back to you," said George fervently, as he passed over the scrip and received the crisp notes and gleaming gold in exchange.

"And yet, strange to say," laughed Scherer, "I can assure you I'm no less delighted to take it back. Ha! ha! ha! Ha! ha! ha!" For some moments the cachinnation prevented speech. When Scherer found breath he remarked to his bewildered friend, "My dear George, let me give you a word of honest advice—in fact, two words. Don't doubt your friend's honesty again and when you hold active shares keep a sharp eye on the papers—ha, ha, ha!"

"The papers?" echoed Littlecash, "why, no; I haven't seen to-night's paper yet," and he struck a bell.

"Yes, sir?" said the office boy.

"Where's to-night's evening paper, Tippets?"

"Ain't come in yet, sir."

"Oh, yes it has," corrected Mr. Scherer, choking with laughter as he produced the Evening Intelligence. "I just—just—mechanically picked it up for a moment myself."

But the office boy triumphed.

"That's a hold won, sir; to-night's ain't come in not yet, sir."

"Not come in!" shrieked Scherer, turning to the date. "Why, the paper's a month old!"

Mr. Scherer's exclamations as he sank into George's chair were so shockingly profane that even the Office Boy turned pale and expected a flash of lightning.

George got his friend out of the office at last, but made a point of handing him back the odd twelve pounds ten—"to soothe his feelings." The wedding took place and Uncle Piper will never know the particulars of George's first—and last—little venture on the Stock Exchange.—St. James's Budget.

Taking a Bath in Paris.

"The bathing habit comes more nearly being universal in the United States than in any country I've ever visited," said Mr. D. J. Burton, of San Francisco. "Everybody knows of the funny custom in Paris, where the people get their baths from a fellow who hauls around a portable bathtub and takes it up to the rooms of his patrons.

"Think of opening your window in the early morning and whistling to attract the attention of the bath vender. That's the way they do in the gay French metropolis. None of the hotels except a few very lately built that have patterned after the American style, can accommodate a guest who wants to wash; and private houses are utterly without facilities for ablution.

"The Englishman plumes himself on his devotion to cold water, but it's really a travesty on bathing that John Bull performs. He will fill a basin half full of water, and immersing a towel in it, mop himself therewith quite vigorously, splashing around with fearful racket, and thinking that he had done the subject complete justice.

"In a good many other countries of Europe the people seem totally innocent of the practice of applying water externally, and that is why I maintain that my own countrymen are the cleanest on earth."—Washington Post.

Spiders in History.

Spiders have played a greater part in history than most people are aware of. Everybody knows how the perseverance of a spider encouraged Robert Bruce to regain his kingdom of Scotland, but not so many know that according to Jewish tradition a spider saved David's life. Saul was hunting for him, and his soldiers approached a cave where David was hidden. Shortly before, however, a spider had spun her web at the mouth of the cave, and the soldiers, taking it for granted that if he had taken refuge in the cave he must have broken the web, departed, forgetting the web might have been spun after as well as before his entrance. A spider saved the life of the grand-uncle of the German emperor. Frederick William was King of Prussia, and an attempt was made to poison him in a cup of chocolate. By chance a spider fell into the cup, and for this reason the monarch gave the chocolate to a dog, who immediately died. Inquiry was made, with the result that the cook was pensioned, and a large spider's web now decorates one of the rooms of the Winter Palace at Potsdam in memory of the king's escape.—London Opinion.

Mr. Fred Miller of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a Severe Kidney trouble for many years, with severe pains in his back and also that his bladder was affected. Chamberlain's is the best of all. Vincent S. Barkl, of Danbury, Iowa, has used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy whenever in need of a medicine for coughs and colds, for the past five years and says: "It always helps me out. If anyone asks me what kind of cough medicine I use, I reply, Chamberlain's, that is the best of all. 25 and 50c. bottles for sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North Avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Last June Dick Crawford brought his twelve-months-old child, suffering from infantile diarrhœa, to me. It had been weaned at four months old and had always been sickly. I gave it the usual treatment in such cases but without benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born, or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25 cent size had been used a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny constitution disappeared, and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by this remedy. J. T. Marlow, M. D., Tamaroa, Ill. For sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North Avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

W. H. Nelson, who is in the drug business at Kingville, Mo., has so much confidence in Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy that he warrants every bottle and offers to refund the money to any customer who is not satisfied after using it. Mr. Nelson takes no risk in doing this because the remedy is a certain cure for the diseases for which it is intended, and he knows it. It is for sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North Avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

A horse kicked H. S. Shafer, of the Freemyer House, Middleburg, N. Y., on the knee, which laid him up in bed and caused the knee joint to become stiff. A friend recommended him to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which he did, and in two days was able to be around. Mr. Shafer has recommended it to many others and says it is excellent for any kind of a bruise or sprain. This same remedy is also famous for its cures of rheumatism. For sale by Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

GOOD SHOT BUT POOR AIM.

SIXTH STREET HOUSE BOMBARDED WITH A CANNON RAMMER.

A Fourth of July Present that Proved to Be a Dangerous Instrument in the Hands of a Youth.

There are very few Plainfielders who have been bombarded by cannon but that list has been enlarged by Mrs. Alonzo Weseman and children, of East Sixth street, who passed through a novel and rather dangerous experience yesterday morning. A colored lad named Peterson, who lives in the East Sixth street row, was made a present of a cannon all loaded and primed. As he was away on the Fourth, he did not celebrate that day, but the thought of the cannon still remained in his mind and yesterday he decided to shoot it. It was only supposed to be loaded with powder and wadding, but in some unexplained manner an iron rammer about fifteen inches long got down the muzzle. The cannon was a large one, being nearly twenty inches long and with a bore an inch in diameter. Peterson aimed the cannon at the chicken house, so he says, and then fired it. But the cannon was a wicked one and at the moment of explosion turned and pointed at Mr. Weseman's house. With a tremendous bang it went off, and so did the rammer, which missed a window by about a foot and crashed into the clapboarding with a noise that was heard all around. But luckily for the inmates it struck sideways and the filling of brick prevented it from going clear through the wall, but two of the weatherboards were smashed and the framework inside somewhat battered. The cannon became so frightened at what it had done that it exploded and flew in every direction. The colored boy was somewhat worried and actually turned pale with terror. After a well deserved reprimand from Mrs. Weseman, he met Mr. Weseman, who is the superintendent at the Scott Printing Machine Works, on his return to lunch, and like a man told him what he had done and was very glad to pay the damage on being told that the stern policeman would not be sent for.

NO LONGER IN THE CHURCH.

An Elizabeth Priest Discountenances a Temperance Society.

At St. Patrick's Church in Elizabeth on Sunday the pastor, Rev. Martin Gessner, abolished the Young Men's Father Matthew Temperance Society as a church organization, because it refused to expel some of its members who recently took part with a social club in getting up a dance at Grand Army Hall at which beer was sold.

When Father Gessner learned of the affair he sent for the officers of the Father Matthew Society and demanded that the offenders be summarily ousted. The officers explained that their organization had no connection with the affair and that the men could not be expelled, as they had not violated any of the by-lays of the temperance society.

The Father Matthew Society is one of the oldest and the strongest organization connected with St. Patrick's Church. It was founded in 1866, has 155 members, $1,000 in its treasury and a handsomely fitted up suite of rooms. It was about to build a new hall.

The society members, it is said, do not propose to be snubbed out of existence so easily, and it is claimed that not one of them will respond to the call made by the pastor to form a new society. They deny doing anything offensive toward the Catholic church, and say that the pastor's action is unjustifiable. They are prepared to submit the whole matter to Bishop Wigger.

Wheeling Accident.

A very unfortunate accident occured yesterday to Miss Helen Hasbrouck, of Grove street. Miss Hasbrouck was learning to ride a wheel on Fourth street, near the corner of Park avenue, when a dog ran out and frightened her, causing her to run into the horses owned by J. R. Giles. She was upset beneath their feet, but with the assistance of Mr. Giles she was safely taken out and sent to her home, with no serious injuries except a few bruises, while the wheel was taken to F. L. C. Martin's store for repairs.

Two Children Baptised.

Two children were baptised in the Church of the Redeemer during the five o'clock service Sunday afternoon. They were Charles Douglass Waring, son of E. J. Waring of Willow avenue, and Henry Russell Phillips, Jr., son of H. R. Phillips of Rockview Terrace.

A Wednesday Marriage.

The marriage of Miss Sophia McGinnis to Harry M. Cooke takes place tomorrow at the home of the bride in North Plainfield.

THE RIGHT OF PROPERTY.

Misses Boss Have Legal Claim to Property in Dispute.

The case of Samuel Boss against Mrs. Rachael Neal to try the right of property of the former was brought up before Justice Mosher and a six-men jury this morning.

The case was the outcome of a recent suit of Mrs. Rachael Neal against Samuel Boss for rent due her on the house at the corner of Front street and Central avenue, Mr. Boss having left the house owing nearly $300 rent.

Mr. Neal recovered judgment in Justice Newcorn's court for $200 and costs against Mr. Boss. Later a levy was made on Mr. Boss's household goods by Constable Rockafellow.

The plaintiff on the foregoing action was served with a notice by the Misses Susan and Sally Boss, daughters of Mr. Boss, that the property levied upon belonged to them.

The question of ownership of property was tried this morning and the jury rendered a verdict that the property belonged to the Misses Boss.

Lawyers. S. S. Swackhamer and Harry Runyon appeared for Boss and Lawyer Murphy for Mrs. Neal.

The jury consisted of Messrs. Hartpence, Jessup, W. B. Ayers, W. H. Clum, C. J. Price and William Moffett. They were out only about fifteen minutes.

KILLED THE CAT WITH A BAT.

And the Feline Won't Come Back—Made Excitement.

There was considerable excitement on New street this morning over a mad cat which has been prowling about in the neighborhood of Front street. On Sunday Mrs. VanDorn, who lives in the row of houses on New street, was very badly bitten in the right hand by the cat, and since then she has suffered terrible pains.

This morning the cat made its appearance and some small boys threw stones at the feline and succeeded in breaking its back, but the cat still continued to live. Everyone was afraid to go near the animal. When Agent George Hoffman, of the Prudential Insurance Company, came through the street to make his collections the neighbors prevailed upon him to kill the cat, which he did with a baseball bat.

Mrs. VanDorn went to Dr. Simpson's office and had the wound cauterized and dressed, and peace and quietude was once more restored to the neighborhood.

Reports were read by the secretary and treasurer showing the association to be in a flourishing condition. The following members were elected as delegates to attend the semi-annual meeting of the State Association at Morristown Wednesday, July 17: Augustus Smith, W. Westphal, R. W. Barnes and F. W. Dunn.

Thumb Crushed.

Joseph McKait, employed at the Pond Tool and Machine Works, had the thumb on his right hand crushed in a piece of machinery this morning. He went to the hospital, where it was dressed, and then returned to work.

THEIR WORK FINISHED.

General Fourth of July Committee Thank Other People and Adjourn.

The final meeting of the general Fourth of July celebration committee was held last night to settle up the affairs of which they had charge. All bills were presented and audited, after which it was found that there still remained $70 unexpended out of the subscribed fund. This balance, it was decided, to expend on the display of fireworks which will take place this evening on Martine's common.

Before adjourning the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the thanks of the Citizens' Fourth of July Celebration Committee be tendered to the citizens of Plainfield and North Plainfield for the manner in which they decorated their homes and various places of business, and their generous donations toward defraying the expenses of this committee; to the business men and organizations for the interest they manifested in entering floats and other displays; to Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, Improved Order of Red Men, for the gratuitous use of their rooms for meeting purposes, and to Alert Hose Company for the use of their parlors., We also desire to express our appreciation of the services rendered this organization by the newspapers of this city, and to the Hon. James E. Martine for the use of his property for the display of fireworks.

While the general committee adjourned sine die, the executive and finance committee were continued till Friday night, when they will prepare a detailed statement of the money received and expended.

Captain Armstrong in Town.

Capt. G. P. Armstrong has returned to the Revere House from Richfield Springs, where his family are spending the summer months. At an entertainment given on the Fourth, in the spacious parlors of the Earlington Hotel, Capt. Armstrong was elected the speaker for the day. The Richfield Press says that his address was full of American patriotism, and after eulogizing in the hightest terms some officers of the American Army personally known to him, he finished his address in the words of the old song, that speaking as an Englishman, that which happened in 1776 was "best for you and best for me."

Many are glad to know that the health of Mrs. Armstrong has already been greatly benefited by the change.

A Tennis Tournament.

A tennis tournament in men's singles, open to Plainfield and North Plainfield, will be held at 615 East Front street Friday and Saturday, July 12th and 13th. Play will begin at ten o'clock Friday and the tournament will be conducted on Nahant principle, each player meeting every other player in the tournament. Those desiring to enter must leave their names, together with an entrance fee of twenty-five cents, with H. V. Ryder or C. Walz before six o'clock Thursday night.

The Pioneer Velocipede Rider.

It is a fact worthy of note that E. P. Thorn, of East Front street, was the first one in Plainfield to ride a velocipede, which was twenty years ago. Mr. Thorn, speaking of the fact, said that at one time he had the City Hotel, and after he brought the three wheeler to Plainfield, he took it out on the sidewalk to ride and in a very little while fully 200 people gathered to see the exhibition, many of whom wanted to wager they could ride it but none of them succeeded.

Discharged for Lack of Evidence.

Justice Mosher's tent bulged out at all sides with the crowd who came to hear the conclusion of the Julia Dorgan case yesterday afternoon. Witness after witness was brought up by both sides, but there was no evidence that Mrs. Dorgan had struck Special Officer Yetman intentionally, so Justice Mosher had to discharge her.

THE CITY TO BE BONDED

Common Council Will Borrow $100,000 for Sewer Work.

PAYABLE WITH PREMIUM IN GOLD.

Councilmen Moore, Frazee and Westphal Opposed the Loan—Bids for the Chemical Engine Received—The Land for Sewage Beds Purchased—Watchung Avenue Opening Progressed—James Conneely's License Transferred to His Widow.

It was 3:15 by the faithful clock in the City Council rooms when President See called the members to their seats at the adjourned meeting last evening, and all responded to the roll-call except Councilmen Fisk and Erickson.

The regular business was suspended to receive the bids for making house connections from the sewer mains. Councilmen Ginna and Dumont were appointed by the president to assist City Clerk MacMurray in this matter. Seven bids were received and submitted as complying with the advertised specifications. The figures given below are so much per lineal foot. They are as follows:

	A	B	C	D	E	F
P. Plunkitt, Jersey City	27	27	27	27	27	27
J. Siddall, Trenton	19	18	18	18	14	14
J. H. Hurly, Trenton	25	22	25	22	20	19
B. Brady, Plainfield	29	29	29	29	29	29
A. Andrews, Plainfield	38	35	35	30	30	30
T. Dowd, North Plainf'd	30	30	30	28	28	28
Honan&Sons, Chester, Pa.	27	25	23	19	19	27

They were all referred to the street committee.

Mr. Ginna offered a resolution that the city buy the land belonging to the Mutual Life Insurance Company and Mrs. Penfield for the proposed sewer beds. It was carried. The sewer committee were appointed to make the deal. Mr. Ginna then stated that the Mutual Life property would cost $15,500 and the Smock property $8,000, and offered a resolution that the terms be accepted, which was carried. He then presented certificate of title to the property which was received and filed.

The regular order of business was then taken up, and the city clerk read the minutes of the last meeting which were approved.

Mr. Bird, of the fire and building committee, presented two bids for the furnishing of a chemical fire engine. One was from D. C. Woodhouse offering an engine for $1,860, and the other from S. F. Haywood for $1,900. They were received and filed.

J. E. Martine presented a petition through Councilman Bird asking Council for two fire hydrants, one on Martine avenue, and the other nearby on Park avenue.

Mr. Bird's motion that they be granted was lost. Councilmen Ginna, Moore, Frost, Dumont, and Stockton voting against it.

Mr. Dumont offered a resolution that the city treasurer draw $15,500 for the purpose of buying land for proposed sewer beds. It was carried.

Two communications were presented by Mr. Dumont in which the Mutual Life Insurance Company, and Harvey Fisk & Sons, of New York, offered to take $100,000 worth of Plainfield city bonds at four per cent, the same to be payable with the premium in gold. Mr. Dumont then moved that Harvey Fisk & Sons offer be accepted.

Councilman Frazee, Moore and Westphal thought that the city should receive a premium from the bonds and Mr. Moore stated that N. H. Harris, of 15 Wall street, were offering premiums to smaller towns than Plainfield.

The three councilmen argued strongly against the motion, and said they could see no reason why the city should be bonded under such unfavorable conditions to pay for the sewer work.

The motion prevailed however, the three councilmen voting against it.

Mr. Moore introduced an ordinance giving Mrs. Conneely the privilege of continuing the liquor business lately conducted by James Conneely, deceased.

It was adopted on first and second reading and ordered advertised. Councilmen Frost and Ginna voting against it.

Mr. Ginna thought it would conflict with a city ordinance that prohibited a woman from conducting a liquor business.

The Watchung avenue extension ordinance was passed on second reading and ordered advertised.

Mr. Ginna offered a resolution, which was carried, that Monday evening, August 5th, at eight o'clock, be set as the time to hear objection to the proposed extension.

He also made a motion that Monday evening, July 15th, be set as the time to act on the sewer bids. Council then adjourned.

—The North Plainfield Township Committee will meet this evening.

WON'T DO SO ANY MORE.

Henry Lewis Wouldn't Have Got Drunk if He Had Known the Consequence.

The Boulevard seems to have more than its fair share of excitement lately. Last night Henry Lewis, colored, made the night hideous by swearing and cursing and by being disorderly generally. Too much of the fiery liquid seemed to be the cause, and officer John Hartpence decided it was better for him to enjoy a night in the lockup. When brought before Judge Coddington this morning, Dolly Kenney charged him with being drunk and disorderly. He pleaded guilty and remarked that he would not have done so if he had known that he was going to be arrested. The Judge gave him his choice between a fine of $5 and twenty days in the county jail. Dolly Kenney paid his fine for him after he promised never to get drunk any more. This was his second offence.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. BUTLER.

Her Friends to Buld a Memorial Room in Candidates Home.

In memory of Mrs. William E. Butler the Woman's Baptist Foreign Missionary Society, whose board meets at Boston, is planning a Candidates Home to be built at Newton Centre, Mass., where women will receive training for foreign mission work. At the recent State meeting of the Woman's Baptist Foreign Missionary Society of New Jersey held at New Brunswick, a recommendation was made by the executive board, and acted upon by the general meeting, that the society assume the expense of building a room in the Candidates Home as a memorial to Mrs. William C. Butler, of Plainfield. This room will bear her name, and be occupied by a candidate from New Jersey, whenever a resident of this State is receiving training for foreign mission work.

Mrs. Butler's long and devoted service to the cause of missions makes this remembrance by the Baptist women of New Jersey a fitting tribute to her memory. They propose to raise $1,000.

Mr. Rockefeller, of New York, has pledged $5,000 toward the erection of this building, if the necessary sum is raised by September, 1895. The whole cost of the building will be $16,000. Of this sum $4,000 has been received from individual gifts by friends of the society.

Who Lit the Match?

The fools are not all dead yet, and one of them visited F. L. C. Martin's bicycle store yesterday. Mr. Martin had placed a thermometer four feet long just outside his store for the convenience of the passers-by. Yesterday somebody wanted to see how high they could raise the mercury. A match was lighted and placed by the tube. The result of this brainless piece of work was that the tube broke and the colored spirits ran down the sides of the instrument, ruining it completely. Martin would like to interview the holder of the match for about three minutes.

SHOT WHILE ON A VACATION.

YOUNG SEYMOUR G. SMITH KILLED AT HARTWICK, N. Y., YESTERDAY.

Was Enjoying a Good Time in the Country When a Misaimed Bullet Brought His Career to a Close.

Sorrow entered the house of Seymour G. Smith, of Central avenue, yesterday afternoon, in the form of a telegram that told that Mr. Smith's youngest son, Seymour P. Smith, had been accidentally shot and killed at Hartwick, N. Y., where he was enjoying his vacation. The telegram gave no further details but Mrs. S. G. Smith, mother of the deceased, and her other two sons, Fred and George, left on the midnight train for Cooperstown from which a nine mile stage ride takes them to Hartwick.

Last Monday, Seymour and his friend, Lester Baldwin, left for Hartwick where they were to spend the summer, to be joined this week by the rest of the Smith family.

The whole family feels the death very keenly as Seymour was much beloved by all. He was born in Brooklyn in October, 1879, of slight build and quiet in temperment. He was always looked upon as a careful boy and it is the opinion of most of his friends that he was shot through the carelessness of some one else.

He graduated with honor from the grammer department in the public schools, where he always stood high in his lessons, and was expected to follow the example of his brother and take a prominent part in the literary and athletic societies in the High School. He was a regular attendant at Henry B. Newhall's class in the Crescent avenue Sunday school and was very popular among all the young people of the city and borough.

As Mrs. Smith lost her mother about a month ago, the loss of her youngest son comes all the harder, especially as she could not be present when he passed away.

A Sound Sleeper.

As car No. 6 of the street railway in charge of Motorman Mitchell and Conductor Barrell was making its last trip from the mountain last night, a hay wagon belonging to Mr. Baldwin, and in charge of one of his men, collided with the car. The man in the wagon was asleep, and was on the left side of the road near the Arlington Hotel. The collission was hardly sufficient to awaken the man, but he finally regained consciousness. The car was slightly damaged.

Poor Feed for Chickens.

A very peculiar accident occurred yesterday to Mrs. King, of West Third street. After feeding her chickens as usual yesterday morning she let them out, when they wandered in the lot next to her house and began to pick about. It seems that some Paris green had been left about and the chickens ate the poisoned particles with the result that they all died before evening.

Visiting a College Chum.

Edward Waring, of Willow avenue, rode over to East Orange Saturday afternoon. He was accompanied on the ride by his brother, O. T. Waring, who returned to Plainfield at once, while Mr. Waring spent Sunday with his college chum, James Brooks, and returned yesterday afternoon. Brooks and Waring are both students in Lehigh University.

Another Fish Story.

Peter Roselerry, George Goldy, John Coes, and Joseph Brown rode up to Weston, Saturday, in John Coes' wagon and returned with forty pounds of cat fish and eels.

About Six Miles.

It will take about 32,000 feet of pipe to make the house connections to the sewers.

JAPAN ACTED SQUARE

Mr. Foster Talks About the Recent Oriental War.

Good Reason Now To Expect Permanent Peace—The Policy Maintained by the United States Approved — Germany's Intervention Was a Surprise.

Washington, July 9.—In conversation with a reporter for the United Press Mr. Foster, who was Li Hung Chang's adviser in the Japanese-Chinese peace negotiations, was asked for his opinion of the prospects of permanent peace between China and Japan as the result of the treaty of Shimonoseki. He replied: "There is good reason to expect permanent peace between the two empires. The terms demanded by Japan may, under the circumstances, be regarded as reasonable, especially in view of the retrocession of the Liao Tung peninsula. The treaty has been observed and carried out by China with scrupulous good faith. Her conduct in this respect has created a very favorable impression in Japan."

Germany's Intervention a Surprise.

In regard to the attitude of the powers toward the parties to the recent contest Mr. Foster said: "The intervention of Russia, on account of the terms of peace, was not unexpected, and it is not unnatural in view of her predominating interest in the Orient, especially on the north Pacific coast of Asia. That France followed the lead of Russia created no surprise in the east; but that Germany should unite with them in a display of force against Japan was entirely unexpected and is not yet understood.

British Residents Bitter.

"British residents in China and Japan are very bitter in criticism of their government for its abstention in the matter. They allege that its failure to join with the other powers in rearranging the terms of peace, has lost for their country much prestige and has left Russia a free hand in its influence and control at Pekin.

Our Policy Approved.

"Of all countries diplomatically concerned in the contest, the United States has come out of it with better grace than any other. From the first her interest has been recognized by both belligerents as purely disinterested, her only desire being to render such service as would bring about an honorable and lasting peace. The conduct of the state department in its very delicate relations with both combatants has been marked by good judgment and few mistakes, and the good offices of our ministers and consuls in China and Japan, where they represented the interests of both governments, have been very useful and highly appreciated by both nations."

Tired of Residence Abroad.

Mr. Foster was asked why he declined to accept the offer to remain in China as the adviser of the government, the first ever made to any foreigner to enter into the councils of that nation. He answered that during the past twenty-five years he had spent the greater portion in foreign lands, and that while his residence abroad had been generally pleasant he had found no country equal to his native land, and he desired to spend the rest of his days in his own country and own home.

Concessions Granted by Japan.

The Tien-Tsin Times in and editorial review of the peace negotiations as finally promulgated, says that the document showed an abatement of one-third ($144,400,000) of the amount of the indemnity claimed; the reduction by one-half of the area of territory claimed on the mainland; the reduction of the payment to be made by China of the cost of the Japanese army of occupation pending the performance of the treaty of obligations by China, from the whole estimated sum (1,000,000), to one-quarter of the cost ($400,000); the restriction of occupation of Chinese territory by Japanese troops to one post, Wei-Hei-Wei. There was also a complete abandonment by Japan of the claim for special privileges to her subjects trading in China, that immunity from certain taxation imposed by China upon other foreigners doing business in her territory, and the right of Japanese traders to pay for their purchases in China in the currency of Japan. This illustrates to China the value of Mr. Foster's services.

AN HISTORIC STEAMER SOLD.

The Alert To Be Broken Up or Used as a Sealer.

Montreal, July 9.—An historic vessel has just been sold at Quebec—the Dominion government steamer Alert. She was built in England in 1856. The remarkable strength, solidity and completeness of her construction and equipment indicate that she was expressly designed for Arctic expeditions, her timbers being of the stoutest oak and finest teak, and everything about her of the most substantial order.

Used in the Crimean War.

She was first used toward the end of the Crimean war to help in the work of carrying back British troops from the Crimea to England. Her next commission was to the polar seas under command of Lieut. Nares in his famous expedition. She next figured in the Greely Arctic expedition, for which purpose she was loaned to the United States. She subsequently saw service as a training ship for the royal navy at Portsmouth under the command of captain, afterward Admiral Stephenson.

Presented to Canada.

When Canada undertook several years ago to send an expedition to Hudson bay for the purpose of ascertaining the navigability of the straits, the imperial authorities presented the Alert to the Dominion government, and she was again employed on that mission under the late Commander Gordon. Since then her commission has been more commonplace. Her purchasers intend, it is said by some persons, to break her up for the sake of her copper and equipments, which are all of the finest, and by others to use her as a sealer.

THE MEN MAY FIGHT.

Judicial Opinion Declares the Big Mill Legal in Texas.

Dallas, Tex., July 9.—Judge George Clark of Waco has submitted an opinion as to the legality of the proposed Corbett-Fitzsimmons glove contest. The opinion is very exhaustive and lengthy. His conclusions are: That the original act of 1891 was wholly inoperative. That when its provisions were re-enacted in the penal code of 1895, it was still inoperative for want of some court to try the offense. That the law was repealed by the revised statutes, which go into effect on September 1, 1895. That there is now no law upon the statute books of Texas preventing pugilistic encounters, and that upon a payment of tender of the license fee charged for such exhibition, there is no lawful power in the state under present laws to interfere with the exhibition. Judge Clark gave the matter at issue careful study and a patient research and his opinion is most sweeping.

YACHT PUZZLE FOR SALE.

Mr. Flint Denies That She Was Used as a Filibuster Craft.

New York, July 9.—The steam yacht Puzzle, which arrived here Sunday from Brunswick, Ga., consigned to Flint, Eddy & Co., has been taken to Tebo's basin, where she is to be sold. Mr. Flint said that he had been greatly annoyed by the reports that he had been south on filibustering business, and as a result of a report in a morning paper he had been put to some trouble with the insurance people. The Puzzle was formerly owned by H. B. Claflin and was sold to a party in Trinidad, who proposed using her in exploration of the Orinoco river. She subsequently went to Hayti, where, being provided with hunting implements and ammunition, the government sought to purchase her. The offer was refused. Arriving at Brunswick, the crew libeled her for pay. Mr. Flint assumed the debt and took the yacht in satisfaction of his claim.

DEATH ON A TROLLEY

Fatal Plunge of an Unmanageable Car.

Tumbles Into a Creek and Is Broken in Two—The Motorman Killed and Eighteen Passengers Seriously Injured—One Man Scalped and Nearly Drowned.

East Liverpool, O., July 9.—A trolley car with thirty passengers on board became unmanageable last evening and slid down the Franklin avenue hill, on the north side of the city, killing one man and injuring eighteen other people. The car was manned by James Hamilton, a new motorman, it being his first day on duty. The tracks were slippery after the rain and the car got out of his control.

Plunged into a Creek.

At the foot of the hill the car jumped the track on a sharp curve and went over a twenty foot embankment into a creek. The momentum was so great that one-half of the car was almost buried in the sand. Hamilton, the motorman, was instantly killed, his head being crushed to a jelly. The car broke in two as it struck and several passengers fell through and were plunged headlong into the creek.

The Injured.

The most serious injured are: Frank Graeen, aged 14, chest crushed, will probably die. Mrs. Frank Anderson of Rochester, Pa., arm and rib broken. Mrs. Samuel Menor, serious internal injuries. Moody Coburn, of this city, almost completely scalped and his legs and two ribs broken; he was almost drowned before being rescued. A peculiar feature about the accident was that seven of those injured were visitors in this city who happened to be on the car.

TWELVE DEAD IN WINONA.

Awful Scene of Devastation at the Flood-Stricken Town.

Winona, Mo., July 9.—Now that the fatal deluge is subsiding in this ill-fated town and its vicinity, the horror of the disaster and the enormous destruction of property become apparent. The flood has left only a scene of desolation and a menace to the health of the living from the presence of hundreds of dead horses, cattle, hogs and other stock. For miles below the town are strewn the carcasses mingled with household furniture, organs and other property, which was swept away with the dwellings by the raging torrent.

A Dozen Lives Lost.

The loss of human life is placed at a dozen to a certainty, all but one of the victims being known. The bodies have been recovered with the exception of Lloyd Wright's daughter. No arrangements have yet been made for the burial of the victims.

This Man a Hero.

During the flood a man was lowered from the bluff by a rope, and when a human form was whirled past he jumped into the water and carried the body ashore, assisted by men on the bluff. In this way he rescued three from death and recovered two bodies. Many business houses and dwellings were swept entirely away.

BEATEN AND ROBBED.

Brutal Treatment of a Peddler and His Wife.

Flemington, N. J., July 9.—James Golden and wife, peddlers, were assaulted by roughs at Holcombe Island, near this city, at an early hour Saturday morning. The man's head was cut and his eyes blackened, ribs fractured, his leg injured and he was otherwise bruised on the body. The woman was assaulted by seven or eight persons. The roughs then robbed their victims of thirty or forty dollars.

Points to Murder.

New Haven, July 9.—Medical Examiner Beardsley, of Shelton, in his return to Coroner Dolen, of Fairfield county, the result on the autopsy held by him on the body of Thomas Lavelle, found in the Housatonic river July 3, says he is of the opinion that Lavelle was dead when the body was placed in the river. The existing conditions favor the theory of death by strangulation.

Close of the Schuetzenfest.

New York, July 9.—The last gun of the first national schuetzenfest of the United States of America was fired last night at 7 o'clock and the cannon announcing the fact had scarcely done reverberating when the schuetzens shook hands and pledged each other to their next meeting in 1896.

THE HONEST SHAKERS AND THEIR CURE FOR DYSPEPSIA.

The shopkeeper who cheats us by lying with regard to the quality of his goods, and the grocer or the butcher who gives us short weights, is a thief. However, their knavery touches nothing but our pocketbook. There is another widespread form of misrepresentation of a far more dangerous and villainous character.

We refer to the false statements and worthless guarantees that frequently accompany medicines. To guarantee a medicine to cure is to brand it as a quack product. If we can guarantee to cure disease, then we can guarantee everlasting life, for in a large majority of cases people die of disease, the proportion of violent or accidental deaths being very small.

The Shakers have always been known as a most upright and honorable people, and their success in the manufacture of medicines has always been well known. It is therefore not surprising to find them pursuing a very original and novel plan for the introduction of their remedy for dyspepsia.

These God fearing people, whose motto has always been "Try all things and hold fast to that which is good" have put upon the market ten cent sample bottles of their product, or sufficient to give it a trial.

The Shaker Digestive Cordial is so prompt in its action that for the trival sum of ten cents, a person can usually determine as to whether or not it meets the requirements of his case. There are forms of dyspepsia which it won't help, but these are very rare. In most cases the first dose relieves all distress, and an increase of appetite at once follows.

All druggists have it, and the next time you are troubled with indigestion send out and try this popular and successful product. It represents nearly a hundred years of patient investigation and study.

LOOK IN THE CLOSET

SEE if you can't find some old clothes that you have put aside because of the worn-out look they have, or some clothes that are badly spotted.

We want you to bring any old clothes of that sort to us—or better yet—we'll send for them.

We propose to clean those clothes—or to dye them for you—either way to make them wearable. This is an economical suggestion.

We take out grease spots so they stay out, or we dye clothes with a color that wears. We charge as little as possible for the work.

Just a dollar or two—and you'll have a lot of new clothes.

CAMPOS TO THE REBELS

All Captured with Arms Will Be Shot.

Those Who Conspire Against the Nation Will Be Sent to African Penitentiaries and All Who Surrender Released—Spain Will Send Sixty Thousand More Troops.

Havana, July 9.—Captain General Martinez de Campos has issued a proclamation saying that all insurgents captured with arms in their possession will hereafter be summarily tried by court-martial and shot. Those who conspire against the integrity of the nation will be sent to the African penitentiaries, and those who surrender will be released.

More Troops from Spain.

During the present month reinforcements of 16,000 men will leave Spain for Cuba, and during the month of October and the early part of November additional reinforcements to the number of 60,000 troops will be sent. All the steamers of the different Spanish lines will be chartered by the government to send the troops here.

Insurgents Plunder Stores.

At Macagua, near Matanzas, an insurgent detachment, consisting of about thirty men, has plundered and burned three stores. Generals Salcedo and Bazan, while out scouting in the fields near Yateras, had a skirmish with the rebels, who, the government reports assert, left ten dead upon the field. On the side of the Spanish two soldiers were killed and six were wounded. General Navarro has had an engagement with the Souza detachments of insurgents at Botija, Santiago de Cuba, who, it is alleged, lost two killed and left two wounded behind them. The Spanish troops captured two prisoners.

Foreign Adventurers Responsible.

Paris, July 9.—The Gaulois publishes an interview with the Spanish premier, Senor Canovas del Castille, in which he is quoted as saying that the climate of Cuba prevents decisive operations against the insurgents for the present. He said that the rebellion was entirely the work of foreign adventurers, but he was glad to say that the insurgents' supplies of arms and ammunition, coming chiefly from the United States and neighboring countries, had diminished, owing to the correct and energetic action of the United States government.

FIERCE BATTLE REPORTED.

Insurgents Lost 280 Killed and Government Troops Fifty.

Havana, July 9.—Advices that have reached here from Santiago de Cuba are to the effect that Major Sanchez, commanding a government force, disovered 1,500 insurgents under command of the rebel chief Rabi strongly posted near Manzanillo. Major Sanchez thereupon sent a message to Major Aznar inviting him to join forces and attack the rebels. The insurgents captured the messenger and hanged him.

Led Into a Trap.

They then sent a reply to Major Sanchez's message, signing Major Aznar's name to it, directing that an attack on the insurgents be made at another point. Major Sanches fell into the trap and advanced as directed in the forged message. His force was suddenly attacked by the rebels in a narrow defile. The insurgents charged on the Spanish troops in the most plucky manner, wielding the deadly machete freely.

Troops Escape.

The troops were unable to manoeuvre owing to the lack of space. Two sergeants, one at the head of thirty and the other at the head of twelve men, gained commanding positions and succeeded in checking the insurgents, shooting all that came within range of their rifles. Their fire was so deadly that the rebels made no further attempt to charge and the troops were enabled to escape from the defile in which they had been ambushed.

Heavy Losses on Both Sides.

The government force then attacked the main positions of the rebels and compelled them to retreat. The insurgents lost 280 killed. The government loss was fifty killed and wounded.

Lone Highwayman Again at Work.

Redding, Cal., July 9.—The Redding and Alturas stage was robbed yesterday morning twenty-four miles from Redding. Supervisor Bass and a lady passenger who were aboard were not molested. The highwayman took the Wells, Fargo box and registered mail, securing perhaps $400. It is believed to be the work of Brady.

To Improve Jersey's State Prison.

Trenton, N. J., July 9.—A new wing to accommodate 200 cells and a hospital is to be built at the state prison here. The contract has been awarded to Charles W. Kafer of this city for $45,342. There are over 1,000 prisoners in the present building, while the accommodations are for only 800.

New York Jail Wardenship.

New York, July 9.—Sheriff Tamsen has offered the wardenship of Ludlow street jail to James P. Archibald, who was a prominent member of the committee of seventy, which nominated the successful municipal ticket last fall. He has the sheriff's offer under consideration.

Farrall Murder Trial.

La Plata, Md., July 9.—The testimony so far this week in the trial of Mrs. Belle Farrall for the murder of her husband, has brought out nothing new. The strain of the trial is slowly but surely telling on the prisoner.

Died in a Dentist's Chair.

Woodstock, Ont., July 9.—Too much chloroform, administered in a dentist's chair, caused the death yesterday afternoon of William Barnes, a well-known citizen of this place.

Dr. Eddmon's Trial Begun.

Toledo, O., July 9.—Dr. Adam Eddmon's trial for murder of Mrs. Penny at Tontogany last March, is now under way at Bowling Green.

Deaths from Heat at Buffalo.

Buffalo, July 9.—Four deaths occurred yesterday, the result of the oppressive heat.

EUSTIS ON ANNEXATION.

An Alleged Interview Printed in a Paris Newspaper.

Paris, July 9.—The Figaro prints what purports to be an interview with United States Ambassador Eustis. Speaking of the Chino-Japanese war, Mr. Eustis is reported as saying that he greatly admired the Japanese, and regretted very much that they had not taken Pekin. Concerning Canada, Mr. Eustis is alleged to have said that it rested entirely with the United States whether Canada would be taken into the American federation.

Must Be No Nonsense.

The government of the United States preferred to allow that question to rest, at the same time, however, giving Great Britain to understand that there must be no nonsense or Canada would be annexed. In regard to Cuba, Mr. Eustis thought the sympathies of the Americans were in favor of the insurgents, who were finding in the states, without the knowledge of the government, assistance of every kind. If the insurgents maintained the struggle for a year, Mr. Eustis said, he was not sure that Spain would spend her money upon costly expeditions to Cuba to no purpose.

Eustis Denies It.

London, July 9.—The Standard publishes a dispatch from Paris saying that when questioned in regard to the alleged interview with him published in the Figaro, Ambassador Eustis said: "I have had no interview. I have not authorized the publication of my opinion on any of the questions discussed in the alleged interview."

CRIMINAL ACTION DROPPED.

Rev. Charles H. Lincoln Will Now Bring a Civil Suit for Damages.

Pittsburg, July 9.—After a consultation between the counsel for the prosecution and the court, a nolle prosequi upon payment of costs by the prosecution was entered in the conspiracy suit of Rev. Charles H. Lincoln against the trustees of the Cumberland Presbyterian church. The trustees were charged with wickedly and maliciously devising to bring contempt and discredit upon the prosecutor and to prevent him from being retained and employed as pastor of the church. The court suggested that criminal court was not the place to settle church differences and upon Judge White's suggestion the criminal charges will be supplanted by a civil suit for defamation of character. Rev. Lincoln was deposed as pastor of the church a week or more ago.

SHEA MURDERS HIS WIFE.

A Particularly Distressing Tragedy at Newport, R. I.

Newport, R. I., July 9.—A murder particularly distressing in its details was committed yesterday afternoon by James Shea, his wife being the victim, while in his little home, for which he had worked hard and which he had placed in his wife's name, there are four little motherless children, one a nursing babe. Shea ordinarily was a quiet man. Desiring to repair a fence a discussion over some nails resulted, following which he assaulted his wife, who was in a delicate condition. She sank to the floor with blood flowing from her wounds. He called the neighbors and started to this city on his horse for a doctor, but before he could return his wife was dead and he was arrested.

PEARY EXPEDITION.

The Party Expected To Sail from St. Johns This Evening.

St. Johns, N. F., July 9.—Work upon the Peary expedition's steamer Kite is progressing favorably. She is expected to sail this evening for Greenland. Professor Salisbury, a member of the expedition, has just returned from an exploring trip through the interior island. He has acquired a large amount of information concerning the geology of the island, especially of the glacial period here.

M'LAUGHLIN GETS A STAY.

Favorable Decision in the ex-inspector's Case.

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 9.—Judge Gaynor last night handed down a decision on an application of ex-inspector William W. Mclaughlin for a writ of reasonable doubt, which shall act as a stay, pending the appeal of his case. Judge Gaynor grants the application.

Iron Bar Driven into His Brain.

Albany, July 9.—John Bartley, a newsboy aged 11 years, was instantly killed last evening by having an iron rod driven into his brain. The rod was attached to an elevator car which fell on him while he with some other boys were playing in the elevator shaft in the building in which "The State," a new evening paper, has its office.

Populists Ousted.

Topeka, Kas., July 9.—Governor Morrill has summarily removed W. J. Hurd, populist, from the board of directors of the state penitentiary and appointed M. M. Buck, republican, thereby giving the republicans control of the board and prison. He has given notice that he will remove the remaining populist, J. J. Barnes, Saturday.

No Acceptance from Cambridge Yet.

New York, July 9.—Charles H. Sherrill, jr., of the Yale graduate advisory committee, said to-day that he had received no word from Cambridge formally accepting Yale's proposition, although he had no doubt now that everything would go through all right and he was expecting a telegram every moment.

Liberty Bell Will Be Sent South.

Philadelphia, July 9.—The opposition to the removal of the liberty bell to the Atlanta exposition seems now to have entirely disappeared, and the bell will probably be started on its southern journey September 15.

Columbia To Dock at Halifax.

Halifax, July 9.—It is reported that the United States cruiser Columbia is coming to Halifax to go into dry-dock and that negotiations to that end are now in progress with Washington authorities.

All Radicals Released.

Belgrade, July 9.—The first act of the new Servian cabinet was to release all the radicals who were convicted of conspiring with the royal family in connection with the Cebinatz trial.

Efforts To Float the Olinda.

New London, Conn., July 9.—Further efforts to float the Portuguese steamer Olinda, ashore on Fisher's island, will be made to-day by her new purchasers.

MEET OF THE CYCLERS

More Than 1,000 Visitors at Asbury Park.

Incoming Delegations Met at Depot by Reception Committee and Brass Bands—Freedom of the City, Including Free Baths, Extended to the Strangers.

Asbury Park, N. J., July 9.—Over 1,000 cyclers of both sexes have registered at the clubhouse of the Asbury Park wheelmen, being the visitors in attendance at the national meet of the L. A. W. Each received upon exhibiting the certificate of League membership, a little button badge, which conveys the freedom of the city and will prove an "open sesame" to all the varied attractive features of this seaside. With the badge came a ticket for a sea trip on the yacht Emma S., and another ticket calling for a free bath each day in the surf of the old Atlantic at any one of the three large bathing pavillions on the shore. Bridges between Asbury Park and Ocean Grove are free to L. A. W. members on presentation of membership cards.

Receiving the Visitors.

The hundred members of the reception committee are busy receiving late arrivals. The Denver wheel club, seventy-eight strong, whose coming had been announced by telegraph, were received in royal style by 300 cyclers and a brass band. After removing their wheels from a special baggage car, the party from the plains were escorted through the city, past the local club house and down to the beach. A host of visiting wheelmen joined in the impromptu procession, riding to an accompaniment of martial melody and hearty applause. Arriving at the head of Asbury avenue the parade stopped and the Denver men gave vent to their pent up emotions in a characteristic club yell that began with a wild, weird howl and ended in an Indian war-whoop.

"Hod" Kennedy Present.

In the Rock Mountain delegation were a dozen women who seemed to have enjoyed the long journey from the west. "Hod" Kennedy, the famous trick rider, and his wife were with the Denverites, and rode prettily together on a tandem of "Hod's" own designing. Sid Black, the Cleveland trick man who can ride a wheel inside out, George K. Barrett, of Chicago, the editor of the Bearings, and John Wetmore, the veteran eastern representative of the Referee, are also among the prominent wheelmen present.

Trying To Pick Winners.

Almost every racing man in the city is on the track of the Athletic association to-day and the big grand stand holds many strangers anxious to observe the work of the men in training, and pick the probable winners of the national championship. Eddie "Cannon" Bald is generally nominated for the half-mile medal, and A. D. Kennedy, jr., of Chicago, for the two mile, but these, of course, are the merest speculations.

To-day's Programme.

This morning there was runs to Long Branch and Spring Lake, and this afternoon the great parade will take place followed by a monster clam bake at Rhode Island point tendered by the Asbury Park wheelmen to the national and division officials of the league.

PRESIDENT GOES A-FISHING.

Mrs. Cleveland and the Baby Getting Along Nicely.

Buzzards Bay, Mass., July 9.—The condition of Mrs. Cleveland and the little daughter continue to improve constantly, and both of them this morning are reported to be doing very well indeed. President Cleveland after satisfying himself of the favorable condition of Mrs. Cleveland drove down to Sandwich, a distance of ten miles, on a trouting trip. Joe Jefferson and his eldest son, Charles B. Jefferson, accompanied him. They fished all day, returning soon after 6 o'clock with enough fish for dinner. There has been a complete deluge of congratulatory messages here from both home and abroad, many bearing the names of prominent people in political and social life.

Killed His Father-in-Law.

Middletown, N. Y., July 9.—Joshua Townsend, a prominent resident of Livingston Manor, was shot and instantly killed there yesterday by George Brethaner, his son-in-law. The old man administered a good trashing to his son-in-law because the latter refused to stop cutting grass from the lawn, when Brethaner drew a revolver and fired. He was arrested.

Crowds Watching Mt. Vesuvius.

Naples, July 9.—Crowds of people are flocking to this city to witness the eruption of Mount Vesuvius. The Prince of Naples, the crown prince of Italy, has arrived here for the purpose. There was an immense emission of ashes yesterday. The flow of lava tends to diminish.

Parliament Prorogued.

London, July 9.—The Marquis of Salisbury attended the meeting of the privy council held at Windsor castle yesterday at which the queen signed the proclamation proroguing parliament until July 24, and the order to issue writs for the general election.

Business Resumptions.

Allentown, Pa., July 9.—The Allentown Iron company will blow in stack No. 5 on July 15 after more than a year's idleness. The Lehigh Iron & Steel company is arranging to start furnace No. 2 this month.

For International Arbitration.

Paris, July 9.—The chamber of deputies adopted a motion suggesting that the government open negotiations as soon as possible with the United States for the conclusion of a permanent treaty of arbitration.

McAvoy Is a Wife Murderer.

New York, July 9.—Mrs. Emily McAvoy, who was shot by her husband, Thomas McAvoy, in the head and abdomen on Saturday night, is dead. McAvoy has been committed without bail.

"Better wages in sight." And this in the Tribune, too.

Officiousness is worse, at times, than laxity in enforcing laws by public officers.

New Jersey had a reform Legislature, and still they are going to enlarge the State prison.

Plainfield has one liquor place for every 1,000 people, and it costs about $1,000 to get a license.

For the passing moment Farmer Bradley's $25 prize turtle is not in it as an attraction with the bicyclists at Asbury Park.

Wails of disappointment among the chappies may now succeed the announcement that the Prince of Wales is not to visit the United States.

The problem of what a cracker is when you have a glass of beer with it on Sunday in New York is puzzling the learned minds of the judicial bench.

An Elizabeth judge has a proper recognition of the eternal fitness of things. A man stole an umbrella, and hs was tried on the charge of disorderly conduct.

"Our flag in trouble," is the head the Jersey City News placed over a news item yesterday. But it does not take long to get the flag out of trouble. She is bound to wave, and no one dare haul her down.

Judge Coddington did right yesterday in fining the first violator of the bicycle ordinance $20, after proper warning had been given. That act will do more to suppress sidewalk riding than a thousand reprimands.

The gentlemen of the general Fourh of July celebration committee are to be congratulated on something more than the mere festivities of the natal day. They have a balance of money left on hand after liquidating all the attendant expenses.

The time for filing census returns with the Secretary of State expired last Friday, but there are still several places that remain to be recorded. Though no official figures will be announced till October, it is evident that there has been a large increase in population throughout the State. Plainfield and Bridgeton were the only cities taken from the third to the second class.

The Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad are making a feature of selling ten trip tickets at reduced rates from the Oranges to New York. This is a policy that should be commended to the Jersey Central. While the fifty trip ticket of the Central is a great convenience and saving, yet there are many people who are unable to invest all the money at one time necessary to purchase them. The ten trip ticket would be a great convenience to many who make frequent trips to the metropolis, and who, no doubt, would make the journey oftener if such a privilege was extended, and thus increase the revenue of the road sufficiently to pay for its adoption.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

AT KEITH'S THIS WEEK.

A Splended List of Attractions for this Week.

The excellence of the continuous performance at Mr. Keith's popular play house, the New Union Square, is not abated in the least during the summer months. On the contrary, every effort is made by the management to put forth attractions of such uncommon quality and quantity as to induce the Union Square patrons to continue loyal in their patronage. The house is now famous for its coolness, its perfect ventilation and its manifold comforts, while its programs are constantly of high standard. This week's show is headed by that long popular and always clever monologue comedian, George Thatcher, who thus makes his debut on Mr. Keith's stage. His engagement must be regarded as notable. Another new comer in the continuous performance is Harry Gilfoil, whose capital abilities as a mimic and whistler were long ago demonstrated in "A Trip to Chinatown." The Three Milons, the French trio of athletes, gymnasts and strong men, make their first appearance at Keith's tomorrow, and another item of newness in the bill is the engagement of Charles F. McCarthy, who was for many years Mr. Harrigan's leading comedian. McCarthy is to be assisted by Crimins and Gore and a special cast of 7 or 8 others, and they will present a short but lively farce. Others in the program include Smith and Campbell, the conversationalists; Swift and Chase, burnt cork musicians; Alburtus and Bartram, expert club swingers; Edward and Josie Evans, in a new comedy sketch; Whitman and Davis, in their travesty of "Blue Jeans." Sydney Grant and Miss Norton, in a refined singing and dancing skit; Boyal and Graham, knockabout pair; Raymond and Welch, trapeze performers; and Signora Adelina Roattini. and Italian singer new to this city; George W. Monroe, the "My Aunt Bridget" comedian, will make his debut at Keith's next week.

MADE A CHILD HIS BRIDE.

As a Result Mary Mack's Father Is Wrathy and Her Mother Grieved.

Westfield, July 8.—A man, greatly excited, called at the courtroom in Westfield Saturday and demanded that the Judge send a constable at once to get his daughter, who, he said, was going away with a man who he, the father, was bent on shootng. When the man's excitement had somewhat subsided it was learned that his name was Wm. Mack, and he wanted to stop his daughter from leaving town with a man to whom the father had just learned she had been married on July 4th.

An investigation of the matter showed that the information obtained by the father regarding the girl's marriage was correct. It appears that about two weeks ago Mary Mack, who is a bright, good-looking girl of fifteen, became acquainted with Arthur Liggett, a painter, who says that he is twenty-five years old, and came from Boston to Westfield less than a month ago. They met at the house of Mrs. Hankins, where Liggett was boarding, and it was a case of love at first sight.

No one in Westfield knows anything about Liggett. The bride refused to leave her husband and go home with her father.

The umpire subsequently gave the race to the Cornell crew, who went over the course at an easy speed in eight minutes eleven seconds.

THE EXPLOITS OF BRIGADIER GERARD.

HOW THE BRIGADIER CAME TO THE CASTLE OF GLOOM

BY A. CONAN DOYLE.

(Copyright, 1896, by Irving Bacheller.)

CHAPTER I.

You do very well, my friends, to treat me with some little reverence, for in honoring me you are honoring both France and yourselves. It is not only an old gray-moustached officer whom you see eating his omelette or draining his glass, but it is a piece of history, and of the most glorious history which our own or any country ever had. In me you see one of the last of those wonderful men, the men who were veterans when they were yet boys, who learned to use a sword earlier than a razor, and who during a hundred battles had never once let the enemy see the color of their knap-sacks. For twenty years we were teaching Europe how to fight, and even when they learned their lesson it was only the thermometers and never the bayonet which could break the Grand army down. Berlin, Naples, Vienna, Madrid, Lisbon, Moscow—we stabled our horses in them all. Yes, my friends, I say again that you do well to send your children to me with flowers, for these ears have heard the trumpet call of France, and these eyes have seen her standards in lands where they may never be seen again.

Even now when I doze in my armchair I can see those great warriors stream before me, the green-jacketed chasseurs, the giant cuirassiers, Dombrowski's lancers, the white mantled dragoons, the nodding bearskins of the horse grenadiers. And there comes the thick, low rattle of the drums, and through wreaths of dust and smoke I see the line of high bonnets the row of brown faces, the swing and toss of the long red plumes amid the sloping line of steel. And there rides Ney with his red head, and Lefebvre with his bulldog jaw, and Lannes with his Gascon swagger, and then amidst the gleam of brass and the flaunting feathers I catch a glimpse of him, the man with the pale smile, the rounded shoulders and the far-off eyes. There is an end of my sleep, my friends, for up I spring from my chair with a cracked voice calling and a silly hand outstretched, so that Madame Titaux has one more laugh at the old fellow who lives among the shadows.

Although I was a full chief of brigade when the wars came to an end, and had every hope of soon being made a general of division, it is still rather to my earlier days that I turn when I wish to talk of the glories and the trials of a soldier's life. For you will understand that when an officer has so many men and horses under him he has his mind full of recruits and remounts, fodder and farriers and quarters, so that even when he is not in the face of the enemy, life is a very serious matter for him. But when he is only a lieutenant or a captain he has nothing heavier than his epaulets upon his shoulders, so that he can clink his spurs and swing his dolman, drain his glass and kiss his girl, thinking of nothing save enjoying a gallant life. That is the time when he is likely to have adventures, and so it is most often to that time that I shall turn in the stories which I may tell you. So it will be to-night when I tell you of my visit to the Castle of Gloom, of the strange mission of Sub-lieutenant Duroc and of the horrible death of the man who was once known as Jean Carabin and afterwards as the Baron Straubenthal.

You must know, then, that in the February of 1807, immediately after the taking of Danzig, Major Legendre and I were commissioned to bring 400 remounts from Prussia into Eastern Poland.

The hard weather and especially the great battle at Eylau had killed so many of the horses that there was some danger of our beautiful tenth of Hussars becoming a battalion of light infantry. We knew, therefore, both the major and I, that we would be very welcome at the front. We did not advance very rapidly, however, for the snow was deep, the roads detestable, and we had but twenty returning invalids to assist us. Besides, it is impossible when you have a daily change of forage, and sometimes none at all, to move horses faster than a walk. I am aware that in the story books the cavalry whirls past at the maddest of gallops, but for my own part after twelve campaigns, I should be very satisfied to know that my brigade could always walk upon the march and trot in the presence of the enemy. This I say of the Hussars and Chasseurs, mark you, so that it is far more the case with chasseurs and dragoons.

For myself, I am fond of horses, and to have four hundred of them, of every age and shade and character, all under my own hands was a very great pleasure to me. They were from Pomerania for the most part, though some were from Normandy and some from Alsace, and it amused us to notice that they differed in character as much as the people of the provinces. We observed also what I have often proved since, that the nature of a horse can be told by his color, from the coquettish light bay, full of fancies and nerves, to the hardy chestnut, and from the docile roan to the pig-headed, rusty black. All this has nothing in the world to do with my story, but how is an officer of cavalry to get on with his tale when he finds four hundred horses waiting for him at the outset? It is my habit, you see, to talk of that which interests myself, and so I have hopes that I may interest you.

We crossed the Vistula opposite Marienwerder and had got as far as Riesenberg when Major Legendre came into my room in the post house with an open paper in his hand.

"You are to leave me," said he, with despair upon his face.

It was no very great grief for me to do that, for he was, if I may say so, hardly worthy to have such a subaltern. I saluted, however, in silence.

"It is an order from General Lasalle," he continued. "You are to proceed to Rossel instantly and to report yourself at the headquarters of the regiment."

No message could have pleased me better. I was already very well thought of by my superior officers, although I may say that none of them had quite done me justice. It was evident to me, therefore, that my regiment was about to see service once more and that Lasalle understood how incomplete my squadron would be without me. It is true that it came at an inconvenient moment, for the keeper of the post house had a daughter—one of those ivory skinned, black haired Polish girls—whom I had hoped to have some further talk with. Still it is not for the pawn to argue when the fingers of the player move him from the square, so down I went, saddled my big black charger Rataplan, and set off instantly upon my lonely journey.

MAJ. LEGENDRE CAME INTO MY ROOM IN THE POST HOUSE WITH AN OPEN PAPER IN HIS HAND.

My word, it was a treat for those poor Poles and Jews who have so little to brighten their dull lives, to see such a picture as that before their doors. The frosty morning air made Rataplan's great black limbs and the beautiful curves of his back and sides gleam and shimmer with every gambol. As for me the rattle of hoofs upon a road and the jingle of bridle chains which comes with every toss of a saucy head would even now set my blood dancing through my veins. You may think, then, how I carried myself in my five and twentieth year, I Etienne Gerard, the picked horseman and surest blade in the ten regiments of Hussars. Blue was our color in the tenth—a sky blue dolman and pelisse with a scarlet front, and it was said of us in the army that we could set a whole population running, the women towards us and the men away. There were bright eyes in the Riesenberg windows that morning which seemed to beg me to tarry, but what can a soldier do save to kiss his hand and shake his bridle as he rides upon his way?

It was a bleak season to ride through the poorest and ugliest country in Europe, but there was a cloudless sky above and a bright cold sun which shimmered on the huge snow fields. My breath reeked into the frosty air and Rataplan sent up two feathers of steam from his nostrils, while the icicles dropped from the side irons of his bit. I let him trot to warm his limbs, while for my own part I had too much to think of to give much heed to the cold. To north and south stretched the great plains mottled over with dark clumps of fir, and lighter patches of larch. A few cottages peeped out here and there, but it was only three months since the grand army had passed that way, and you know what that means to a country. The Poles were our friends, it is true, but out of a hundred thousand only the guard had wagons, and the rest had to live as best they might. It did not surprise me, therefore, to see no signs of cattle and no smoke from the silent houses. A weal had been left across the country where the great host had passed, and it was said that even the rats were starved wherever the Emperor had led his men.

CHAPTER II.

By midday I had got as far as the village of Saalfeldt, but as I was on the direct road for Osterode, where the Emperor was wintering, and also for the main camp of the seven divisions of infantry, the highway was choked with carriages and carts. What with artillery, caissons and wagons and couriers and the ever-thickening stream of recruits and stragglers, it seemed to me that it would be a very long time before I should join my comrades. The plains, however, were five feet deep in snow, so there was nothing for it but to plod upon our way. It was with joy, therefore, that I found a second road which branched away from the other, trending through a fir wood towards the north. There was a small auberge at the cross roads, and a patrol of the Third Hussars of Conflans—the very regiment of which I was afterward colonel—were mounting their horses at the door. On the steps stood their officer, a slight, pale young man, who looked more like a young priest from a seminary than a leader of the devil-may-care rascals before him.

"Good day, sir," said he, seeing that I pulled up my horse.

"I am Sub-lieutenant Duroc of the Third," said he.

"When joined?" I asked.

"Last week."

I had thought as much from his white face and from the way in which he let men lounge upon their horses. It was not so long, however, since I had learned myself what it is like when a schoolboy has to give orders to veteran troopers. It made me blush, I remember, to shout abrupt commands to men who had seen more battles than I had years, and it should have come more natural for me to say "With your permission we will now wheel into line," or "If you think it best, we shall trot." I did not think the less of the lad, therefore, when I observed that his men were somewhat out of hand, but I gave them a glance which stiffened them in their saddles.

"May I ask, monsieur, whether you are going by this northern road?" I asked.

"My orders are to patrol it as far as Arensdorf," said he.

"Then I will, with your permission, ride so far with you," said I; "it is very clear and the longer way will be the faster."

So it proved, for this road led away from the army into a country which was given over to Cossacks and marauders, and it was as bare as the other was crowded. Duroc and I rode in front with our six troopers clattering along in the rear. He was a good boy, this Duroc, with his head full of the nonsense that they teach at St. Cyr, knowing more about Alexander and Pompey than how to mix a horse's fodder or care for a horse's feet. Still he was, as I have said, a good boy, unspoiled as yet by the camp. It pleased me to hear him prattle away about his sister Marie and about his mother in Amiens. Presently we found ourselves at the village of Hayenah. Duroc rode up to the post house and asked to see the master.

"Can you tell me," said he, "whether a man who calls himself Baron Straubenthal lives in these parts?"

The postmaster shook his head and we rode upon our way.

I took no notice of this, but when at the next village my comrade repeated the same question, with the same result, I could not help asking him who this Baron Straubenthal might be.

"He is a man," said Duroc, with a sudden flush upon his boyish face, "to whom I have a very important message to convey."

Well, this was not satisfactory, but there was something in my companion's manner which told me that any further questioning would be distasteful to him. I said nothing more, therefore, but Duroc would still ask every peasant whom we met whether he could give him any news of the Baron Straubenthal.

For my own part I was endeavoring, as an officer of light cavalry should, to form an idea of the lay of the country, to note the course of the streams and to mark the places where there should be fords. Every step was taking us further from the camp round the flanks of which we were traveling. Far to the south a few plumes of gray smoke in the frosty air marked the position of some of our outposts. To the north, however, there was nothing between ourselves and the Russian winter quarters. Twice on the extreme horizon I caught a glimpse of a glitter of steel, and pointed it out to my companion. It was too distant for us to tell whence it came, but we had little doubt that it was from the lance heads of marauding Cossacks.

The sun was just setting when we rode over a low hill and saw a small village upon our right and on our left a considerable castle which jutted out from among the pine woods.

A farmer with his cart was approaching us—a matted-haired, downcast fellow in a sheepskin jacket.

"What village is this?" asked Duroc.

"It is Arensdorf," he answered in his barbarous German dialect.

"Then here I am to stay the night," said my young companion. Then turning to the farmer, he asked his eternal question: "Can you tell me where the Baron Straubenthal lives?"

"Why, it is he who owns the Castle of

"WHY, IT IS HE WHO OWNS THE CASTLE OF GLOOMS."

Gloom," said the farmer, pointing to the dark turrets over the distant fir forest.

Duroc gave a shout like the sportsman who sees his game rising in front of him. The lad seemed to have gone off his head, his eyes shining, his face deathly white and such a grim set about his mouth as made the farmer shrink away from him. I can see him now, leaning forward on his brown horse with his eager gaze fixed upon the great black tower.

"Why do you call it the Castle of Gloom?" I asked.

"Well, it is the name it bears upon the country side," said the farmer. "By all accounts, there have been some black doings up yonder. It's not for nothing that the wickedest man in Poland has been living there these fourteen years past."

"A Polish nobleman?" I asked.

"Nay, we breed no such men in Poland," he answered.

"A Frenchman, then," cried Duroc.

"They say that he came from France."

"And with red hair?"

"As red as a fox."

"Yes, yes, it is my man," cried my companion, quivering all over in his excitement. "It is the hand of Providence which has led me here. Who can say that there is not justice in this world. Come, Monsieur Gerard, for I must see the men safely quartered before I can attend to this private matter." He spurred on his horse, and ten minutes later we were at the door of the inn at Arensdorf, where his men were to find their quarters for the night.

Well, this was no affair of mine, and I could not imagine what the meaning of it might be. Rossel was still far off, but I determined to ride on for a few hours, and take my chance of finding some wayside bars in which I could find shelter for Rataplan and myself. I had mounted my horse, therefore, after tossing off a cup of wine, when young Duroc came running out of the door and laid his hand upon my knee.

of you not to abandon me like this."

"My good sir," said I, "if you would tell me what is the matter and what you would wish me to do, I should be better able to tell you if I could be of any assistance to you."

"You can be of the very greatest," he cried. "Indeed, from all that I have heard of you, Monsieur Gerard, you are the one man whom I should wish to have by my side to-night."

"You forget that I am riding to join my regiment."

"You cannot in any case reach it to-night. To-morrow will bring you to Rossel. By staying with me you will confer the greatest kindness upon me, and you will aid me in a matter which concerns my own honor and the honor of my family. I am compelled, however, to confess to you that some personal danger may possibly be involved."

It was a crafty thing for him to say. Of course I sprang from Rataplan's back and ordered the groom to lead him back to the stables.

"Come into the inn," said I, "and let me know exactly what it is that you wish me to do."

He led the way into a sitting room and fastened the door lest we should be interrupted. He was a well-grown lad, and as he stood in the glare of the lamp with the light beating upon his earnest face, and upon his uniform of silver gray which suited him to a marvel, I felt my heart warm toward him. Without going so far as to say that he carried himself as I have done at his age, there was at least similarity enough to make me feel sympathy with him.

"I can explain it all in a few words," said he. "If I have not already satisfied your very natural curiosity it is because the subject is so painful a one that I can hardly bring myself to allude to it. I cannot, however, ask for your assistance without explaining to you exactly how the matter lies.

"You must know, then, that my father was the well-known banker, Christopher Duroc, who was murdered by the people during the September massacres. As you are aware, the mob took possession of the prisons, chose three so-called judges to pass sentence upon the unhappy aristocrats, and then tore them to pieces when they were passed out into the street. My father had been a benefactor of the poor all his life. There were many to plead for him. He had the fever, too, and was carried in half dead upon a blanket. Two of the judges were in favor of acquitting him. The third, a young Jacobin whose huge body and brutal mind had made him a leader among the wretches, dragged him with his own hands from the litter, kicked him again and again with his heavy boots, and hurled him out of the door, where in an instant he was torn limb from limb under circumstances which are too horrible for me to describe. This, as you perceive, was murder even under their own unlawful laws, for two of their own judges had pronounced in my father's favor.

"Well, when the days of order came back again my elder brother began to make inquiries about this man. I was only a child then, but it was a family matter, and it was discussed in my presence. The fellow's name was Carabin. He was one of Santerre's Guard, and a noted duelist. A foreign lady named the Baroness Straubenthal, having been dragged before the Jacobins, he had gained her liberty for her on the promise that she, with her money and estates, should be his. He had married her, taken her name and title, and escaped out of France at the time of the fall of Robespierre. What had become of him we had no means of learning.

"You will think, doubtless, that it would be very easy for us to find him since we had both his name and title. You must remember, however, that the revolution left us without money, and that without money such a search is very difficult. Then came the Empire and it became more difficult still, for, as you are aware, the Emperor considered that the Eighteenth Brumaire brought all accounts to a settlement and on that day a veil had to be drawn across the past. None the less we kept our own family story and our own family plans.

"My brother joined the army and passed with it through all southern Europe, asking everywhere for the Baron Straubenthal. Last October he was killed at Jena with his mission still unfilled. Then it became my turn, and I have the good fortune to hear of the very man of whom I am in search at one of the first Polish villages which I have to visit and within a fortnight of joining my regiment. And then, to make the matter even better, I find myself in company of one whose name is never mentioned throughout the army save in connection with some generous and daring deed."

CHAPTER III.

This was all very well, and I listened with the greatest interest, but I was none the clearer as to what young Duroc wished me to do.

"How can I be of service to you?" I asked.

"By coming up with me."

"To the castle?"

"Precisely."

"When?"

"At once."

"But what do you intend to do?"

"I shall know what to do. But I wish you to be with me all the same."

Well, it never was in my nature to refuse an adventure, and, besides, I had every sympathy with the lad's feelings. It is very easy to forgive one's enemies, but one wishes to give them something to forgive also. I held out my hand to him, therefore.

"I must be on my way to Rossel to-morrow morning, but to-night I am yours," said I.

We left our troopers in snug quarters and, as it was but a mile to the castle, we did not disturb the horses. To tell the truth, I hate to see a cavalryman walk, and I hold that just as he is the most gallant thing upon earth when he has his saddle flaps between his knees, so he is the most clumsy when he has to loop up his sabre and his sabre-tasche in one hand and turn in his toes for fear of catching the rowels of his spurs. Still Duroc and I were of an age when one can carry things off, and I dare swear that no woman at least would have quarreled with the appearance of the two young hussars, one in blue and one in gray, who set out that night from the Arensdorf post house. We both carried our swords, and for my own part I slipped a pistol from my holster into the inside of my pelisse, for it seemed to me that there might be some wild work for us.

The track which led to the castle wound through a pitch-black firwood, where one could see nothing save the ragged patch of stars above our heads. Presently, however, it opened up and there was the castle right in front of us about as far as a carbine would carry. It was a huge black place, and bore every mark of being exceedingly old, with turrets at every corner and a square keep on the side which was nearest to us. In all its great shadow there was no sign of light save for a single window, and no sound came from it. To me there was something awful in its size and its silence which corresponded so well with its sinister name. My companion pressed on eagerly and I followed him along the ill-kept path which led to the gate.

There was no bell or knocker upon the great iron studded door, and it was only by pounding with the hilts of our sabres that we could at last attract attention. A thin, pale-faced man with a beard up to his temples opened it at last. He carried a lantern in one hand, and with the other a chain which held an enormous black hound. His manner at the first moment was threatening, but the sight of our uniforms and of our faces turned it into one of sulky reserve.

"The Baron Straubenthal does not receive visitors at so late an hour," said he, speaking in very excellent French.

"THE BARON STRAUBEN THAT DOES NOT RECEIVE VISITORS AT SO LATE AN HOUR."

"You can inform Baron Straubenthal that I have come eight hundred leagues to see him, and that I will not leave until I have done so," said my companion. I could not myself have said it with a better voice and manner.

The fellow took a sidelong look at us and tugged at his long black beard in his perplexity.

"To tell the truth, gentlemen," said he. "The Baron has a cup or two of wine in him at this hour and you would certainly find him a more entertaining companion if you were to come again in the morning."

He had opened the door a little wider as he spoke and I saw by the light of the lamp in the hall behind him that three other rough fellows were standing there, one of whom held another of these monstrous hounds. Duroc must have seen it also, but it made no difference to his resolution.

"Enough talk," said he, pushing the man to one side. "It is with your master that I have to deal."

Last June Dick Crawford brought his twelve-months-old child, suffering from infantile diarrhœa, to me. It had been weaned at four months old and had always been sickly. I gave it the usual treatment in such cases but without benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born, or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25 cent size had been used a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny constitution disappeared, and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by this remedy. J. T. Marlow, M. D., Tamaroa, Ill. For sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North Avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

W. H. Nelson, who is in the drug business at Kingville, Mo., has so much confidence in Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy that he warrants every bottle and offers to refund the money to any customer who is not satisfied after using it. Mr. Nelson takes no risk in doing this because the remedy is a certain cure for the diseases for which it is intended, and he knows it. It is for sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North Avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

A horse kicked H. S. Shafer, of the Freemyer House, Middleburg, N. Y., on the knee, which laid him up in bed and caused the knee joint to become stiff. A friend recommended him to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which he did, and in two days was able to be around. Mr. Shafer has recommended it to many others and says it is excellent for any kind of a bruise or sprain. This same remedy is also famous for its cures of rheumatism. SPARKS FILLED THE AIR.

WHILE A GREAT CROWD FILLED MARTINE'S COMMON.

The Postponed Pyrotechnic Display Given Last Night—Though Slightly Damaged, They Made a Good Exhibit.

"Siss-boom-ah" said the rockets, and "Oh-ah" said the crowd that completely filled Martine's common and the adjoining streets, for the public knew that something good was in store and turned out accordingly. If the committee had applied to Farmer Dunn himself for a night made to order, they could not have secured a better one. There was a little too much wind, perhaps, but that did no harm. And the fireworks—the applause of the immense audience told what was thought of them better than words could do, for it was the best display Plainfield ever witnessed, and that is saying a good deal.

Early in the afternoon the army of visitors poured into Plainfield, on foot, on horseback, in carriages or riding wheels, while the trains deposited their loads all the early part of the evening. But at about seven o'clock they came the thickest, and from that time until long after eight a steady stream of visitors wended their way up Park avenue and all the streets leading to the common. Farmers from Somerset county mixed with the 400 from Westfield, for it was a truly democratic throng, and no one was any better than the rest. Every little hamlet within ten miles sent its delegation, while the larger towns sent armies of sightseers. The grand-stand near Park avenue furnished the only seats besides Mother Earth and the barb-wire fences, and it was well packed before the display had even begun. On a smaller stand, nearby, Guttman's band rendered sweet music to the pleasure of those that could hear, for the hum of the multitude, especially at some display, drowned all other sounds.

A loud saluting rocket began the pyrotechnics, another followed and then the enjoyment commenced. A set piece called the "True Lover's Knot" was the first, and then followed other set pieces, rockets, bombs and mines in quick succession. The serpents and the golden ram from the rockets seemed to please the audience especially. A little excitement was caused by the short-stick rockets which had the appearance of being tipsy, for they flew off in the most unlooked for directions, plowing through the crowd or dashing among the set pieces in a most eccentric manner, but no serious accidents took place from their wildness beyond badly frightening those in its path. The bombs were very pretty with their showers of colored stars, while the wheels spun around and sent off their showers of sparks in a most satisfactory manner. One of the prettiest pieces was a statue of Washington over which was a semi-circle of colored stars. This evoked loud applause while a number of young men gave the well-known cry of "Who was George Washington, etc." An "Eccentric Bouquet" and a "Double Revolving Kaleidoscope" were the next two important pieces. A portrait of Abraham Lincoln in colored lights was a fairly good likeness and was easily recognized. This called for loud applause. The last of the set pieces was the Niagara Falls of fire. It was sixty feet long and made a very pretty effect.

Many in the crowd thought that this concluded the display and started to leave, but suddenly the air was filled with fire and about 1,500 rockets shot into space with a loud roar. A loud bang and nothing could be seen except the brilliant colored stars. The suddenness with which they began rather startled the throng, many thinking that it was an explosion. A grand exhibition of Roman candle batteries ended the pyrotechnic exhibit.

In the later part of the evening, one of the bombs fell without exploding. Edward W. Vail, of 407 Watchung avenue, was directly in its path, when right beside him it went off with a loud report sending its shower of colored fire into the crowd. Vail received the greater part of it on the arm, while his face, neck and leg were badly burned, when to make matters worse in stepping back he sat down on a wheel and fell through the wheel badly wrecking it. This morning, he pluckily resumed his duties as head clerk in Councilman V. L. Frazee's grocery store. Although several were slightly burned by flying fire, there were no other serious injuries.

Coming home after everything was over was a rather difficult job. Most of the immense throng tried to go down Park avenue all at once where scores of cyclists and carriages tried to escape from the general mixup. William H. Brokaw, the builder, of West Front street, was among the jam of vehicles, and in attempting to get out had his back wheel colide with that of another carriage. Brokaw's wheel was completely smashed. After a time the crowd thined out and the common quieted down to its usual silence.

The fireworks were furnished by DeHart, of New Brunswick, who, although his regular occupation is carpentering, he is a great enthusiast in the manufacture of pyrotechnics. Those given last evening were manufactured by him in his labratory in New Brunswick. They were shot off by some of his rssistants.

A number of the rockets failed to explode owing probably to being wet on the Fourth.

WILL RUN IT RIGHT.

Music Hall Patrons Will Enjoy a Good Season.

William M. Stillman wishes to notify the people of Plainfield and vicinity that he has taken personal charge of the management of Stillman Music Hall. He is giving it a complete overhauling and when the season opens in September the place will be as clean as any private residence, and will be kept so, as he has employed Charles Ellis as janitor, who will be under his own personal supervision and pay, and who will have nothing else to do but to keep the place clean and warm.

Mr. Stillman will attend to the bookings himself and give the matter his most careful and personal attention.

William R. Mattox has been employed as stage-manager, and Edward Nelson, the genial Central railroad ticket agent has been employed as ticket seller. Prof. Guttman will furnish the orchertra.

Mr. Stillman asks the people to give this Hall a fair trial this year and help him in making the place a success.

Tried to Drag Him Out.

Last evening when Park avenue was blocked with the carriages of those who came to view the display of fireworks, a dog cart containing a man and a young girl drove up on the sidewalk. For some reason that angered a tall individual he ordered them to move on. The man refused and the irate man was about to pull him out of the cart when the spectators interfered and the man kept his place.

A Free Entertainment.

Before the public fireworks began last evening many of the crowd were entertained by a magic lantern and screen arranged by the Plainfield Camera Club. A number of the views were advertisements, but the rest were funny pictures or views about Plainfield. The lantern was operated by Mr. Vanderveer, of New Brunswick.

Went to Work All Right.

John Macbeth, of Philadelphia, was found by Special Marshal Goodwin on Somerset street yesterday afternoon in an unfortunate condition. He was locked up for awhile and then released. The man has secured a job at the Pond Tool and Machine Works and went to work today.

The Man Ought to be Muzzled.

Some miscreant let all the dogs out of the pound in North Plainfield a few days ago, and Chief Marshal Van-Horn is on the lookout for the guilty one. The authorities are endeavoring to arrange for a place in the rear of Boyce's Hotel for a dog pound.

Giving the Dogs a Chance.

The Elizabeth police have ceased killing dogs on the public highway, and the animals now have free use of the street, muzzled or unmuzzled. The dog-pound, which has been moved to South Broad street, has not yet been put in order.

Another Borough in Prospect.

Wilbur Corey, who is working to have the borough of Locust Grove formed from a part of Westfield Township, reports that he has secured the number of signers necessary to place the petition for a borough before the Court.

A Pig on Their Hands.

The pig which was to have been greased and used at the games Fourth of July afternoon is at the Crescent Oval and is being fed and kept by the Crescent Wheelmen. They are anxious to secure a buyer and thus dispose of him.

Something Very Fine.

The Plainfield Camera Club members are making arrangements for an exhibition to be given in their rooms at an early date. It will be something very fine.

That's What They Are Paid For.

The marshals in the borough are doing excellent work nowadays in keeping peace and quietude within its borders.

HOW THE BOY WAS KILLED.

The Smith Boy Accidentally Shot By Another Lad.

The father of the boy whose sad death was recorded in yesterday's Daily Press, Seymour G. Smith, of Crescent avenue, left last evening for Hartwick, the scene of the accident.

This morning's New York Tribune publishes the following despatch from Oneonta:

Seymour P. Smith, son of S. G. Smith, of Plainfield, N. J., was shot and instantly killed at Hartwick, eighteen miles from Oneonta, yesterday afternoon. Smith, with a companion, was bathing, when a young man named Sternberg came along, shooting frogs. While he was explaining the working of his rifle to the boys the weapon was discharged, the bullet entering Smith's left breast. Smith was 15 years of age. His father is a tea finisher and packer at No. 129 Water street, New York.

The interment will probably take place at Hartwick, as the Smiths own a burial plot in the cemetery in that place.

The Right Idea.

Trades organizations of Essex county have united to prevent the giving of work on the public parks to contractors who, the union men assert, would employ cheap labor and ignore those in the county who might be glad to secure the opportunity to earn a living. The Essex Trade Council have organized a Producers' Home Market League, and appointed a committee to see the Park Commissioners for the purpose of influencing them to have the parks built by county residents, and if that will not be possible, to give the contracts to persons who will promise to employ only men who live in Essex county.

To Fight the Improvement.

Citizens of Paterson who are opposed to the erection of the new courthouse, as decided upon by the Board of Freeholders, have engaged Eugene Stevenson, a lawyer, to fight the case in the courts. He will apply for an injunction restraining the Freeholders from spending the money. The courthouse is to cost $20,000, according to the plans and estimates. The citizens say the new courthouse is unnecessary at the present time.

On to the Park.

The First Baptist and Grace Episcopal Sunday-schools, together with the Third Street Mission and Mt. Olive Mission, go to Ocean Grove tomorrow. The excursion train will be run in two sections, leaving the station at eight o'clock. A baggage car for the accommodation of bicycles will be on the first section. This will be one of the largest excursions of the season. Let everyone go and enjoy the day with the Baptists and their friends.

Off for Somerville Tomorrow.

The truck belonging to the East End Truck Company, of Somerville, will leave Plainfield tomorrow evening en route for Somerville. The truck belonging to this company broke down on the way from Somerville on the third of July night, thus compelling them to store the truck at the barn of Mr. Mumford on Arlington avenue.

The Grocers' Attorney.

At the last meeting of the Grocers Protective Association Lawyer Clarence L. Murphy was appointed counsel for the association. This office was, until recently, held by City Judge W. A. Coddington. Mr. Murphy, although but recently admitted to the bar, is already making rapid progress to a successful legal career.

Folly to Delay.

H. A. Stiles, the eye specialist, will visit this city Thursday of this week, and can be seen at 107 East Front street from ten a. m. to five p. m. To delay the examination of your eyes, when they are effected with weakness, especially when Mr. Stiles makes the examination free of cost, is folly. He is a skillful optician and will give satisfaction.

Everybody Will Be There.

A number of cyclists are going to ride to Asbury Park this week, but they would have much more fun if they took their wheels and put them on the special wheel car in the excursion train of the First M. E. Sunday-schools, next Friday morning, and go down with them. Most of your friends are going, and there will be lots of pretty girls, too.

The Court is Quiet.

The city court was very quiet this morning, only one case coming before Judge Coddington. James Davis was charged with being drunk and disorderly, but this being his first offense the Judge suspended sentence. He was arrested by Officer Cooney on Somerset street last evening.

Mr. Nash's Good Work.

It has been suggested that the Fourth of July committee present Chairman V. W. Nash with an appropriate souvenir for his untiring efforts in making the affair the success it was.

FRONT STREET EXCITEMENT.

Trolley Car Frightened a Horse Into Running Away.

The trolley car was the indirect cause of an exciting time on West Front street this morning. A woman from Fanwood drove down to Plainfield to do some shopping, and stopped in front of a West Front street store.

Her coachman, George Dunn, stood at the horse's head. Just then an electric car passed by and the horse, which already has quite a reputation as a runaway, reared and pulled the reins out of Dunn's hands.

He then started down West Front street until he reached Plainfield avenue, when he ran through that street to Third, and then to Liberty street. Here he tried to run back to Front street again, but there were several wagons in the road, and he stopped instead.

Frank Smith tried to stop the runaway on Front street, and probably would have succeeded, only that some one ran out at the horse and frightened him so that he shied and almost ran into Smith.

The horse was attached to a two-seated surrey.

HORR AGAINST COIN.

These Two Great Men to Debate the Money Question.

One of the greatest debates of the present time will be held in the Palmer House, Chicago, commencing July 16th, between Horr and Coin, two well-known representative men.

Mr. Coin will argue for a double currency standard while Mr. Horr will stand on the single standard. The debate will be private. An audience of not over fifty people will be present. At the conclusion of the debate stenographic reporters will be called in to make a verbatim report of the debate. After that the matter will be published in the papers.

Mr. Horr being a well-known resident of Plainfield, there is naturally considerable interest manifested by those who make the subject one of study, and the result will be anxiously waited for.

DOG TAX DECISION.

Judge McCormick Decides in Favor of the Canines.

In the court of special sessions at Elizabeth this morning Judges Thomas and McCormick rendered a decision that the dog ordinance under which the police have been raising havoc with the canines for the past month is unconstitutional and inoperative. The decision is the result of an appeal brought by fifteen citizens who in 1894 were fined $20 and costs for refusing to tag and muzzle their dogs. The police have no right to molest dogs hereafter and the tax must be collected as other personal taxes.

Trying to Save the Elms.

The Woman's Town Improvement Association, of Montclair, apparently has a big contract on hand to rid the elm trees of the destructive beetle. When nurserymen imported English elms they let in the foreign beetle. In England there is a bird which craves the beetle, and the little pest never becomes very troublesome. The women will have a poisonous solution sprayed over the trees. The association has appointed a committee to have this work done.

At An Opportune Time.

The Baptists and the Methodists have done well in having their excursions to Asbury Park this week, thus giving an excellent opportunity to the many who will desire to witness the bicycle races of the League of American Wheelmen, which take place this week. The Baptists go tomorrow, and the three Methodist schools go on Friday.

A Painless Pull.

The wonderful anaesthetic employed in the painless extraction of teeth by Dr. C. R. Theirs, of 13 Grove street, has received the endorsement of Plainfield's physicians as well as local professional and business men. The anaesthetic allays all pain and has no subsequent ill effects. Special price reductions are made on Thursday.

The Ideal Panacea.

SUDDEN DEATH OF MR. RIKER

TAKEN SICK AND EXPIRED IN A FEW HOURS.

His Wife Prostrated by the Suddenness of His Death—A Substantial and Respected Citizen.

The very sudden death of Ira F. Riker, the undertaker, at his home at 142 Central avenue, this morning at three o'clock, will be a shock to his many friends and acquaintances.

Mr. Riker has not been feeling very well of late, but nothing unusual was thought of it, as he remained at his place of business all the time and even yesterday he was busy all day up till eight o'clock in the evening. Between seven and eight o'clock last evening he went to see Chairman V. W. Nash in regard to some camp chairs which the latter had hired. He returned home and retired early. During the the fore part of the night he was awakened with terrible pains about his heart. He could get no relief and it gradually grew worse until he expired.

His wife was prostrated with the sudden death, and she is not now allowed to see anyone.

Mr. Riker was born in Brooklyn thirty-nine years ago, and was the son of Robert and Mrs. Riker who live at that place.

His father and three brothers conduct an undertaking business in Brooklyn at the present time.

He has lived in Plainfield about fifteen years, and was bookkeeper for A. M. Griffen for several years. His health being poor he gave it up to go in the undertaking business.

He was a member of the Royal Arcanum, and First M. E. church. He leaves a widow, three daughters and one son, besides a father, mother, four sisters, and three brothers.

Mr. Riker was a member of Royal Arcanum, and the announcement of his death has already been forwarded to the Arcanum headquarters. His wife will receive $3000.

Imagined He Had Hydrophobia.

What the physicians term a case of ysnopholya, or false hydrophobia, has developed in Johnson Richards, a young farmer of Spotswood. On May 11th a small dog, affected with the rabies, bit Mr. Richards' dog and he shot it. He had a sore on his hand when he buried the dog and became possessed of the notion that he had been affected through the sore. Richards became melancholy, brooded over his supposed state and neglected his farm duties to read up on hydrophobia symptoms, and he would talk of nothing else. A week ago the farmer became so ill that he was taken to his bed in a delirium. A consultation of physicians decided that Mr. Richards was actually suffering from a case of false hydrophobia, induced by fright. A physician from the Pasteur Institute, who was summoned, said that Mr. Richards was a fit subject for treatment there and he was taken there.

Hanged Himself in His Barn.

Simeon Ammerman, fifty years of age, and an old resident of Peapack, was found hanging from a beam in his barn about five o'clock Sunday afternoon by David Pflower, a neighbor, who was passing the place and looked through the door. The deceased had procured a small rope which he had fastened to a beam, and had evidently stood on a box while putting the rope around his neck. No apparent cause can be assigned for the act, but the supposition is that it was done in a temporary fit of insanity, as Mr. Ammerman had been sick for some time and was despondent. A widow and five children survive him.

Ambulance Soon Will Be Here.

The Muhlenberg hospital ambulance will arrive in town this week, and be harbored in Roberts livery stable on North avenue from where it will respond to the calls as needed. The vehicle has been in course of construction for some months in New York, and is the gift of the Ladies Auxiliary.

Chapel to be Dedicated.

The new chapel at Marconnier is about finished, and will be dedicated on Sunday, July 21st, with appropriate exercises. J. E. Townsend is making the memorial tablet to be placed in front of the building which is a model in every respect.

Don't Forget It.

While all the excursions are going to Asbury Park people should not forget that the Park Avenue, First Presbyterian and Congregational churches go to this great summer place next week.

Royally Entertained.

The Fourth of July Committees were royally entertained last night by Chairman Nash at his home after the display of fireworks.

A HEAT FOR CORNELL

An Unfortunate Misunderstanding at the Grand Challenge Cup Race. First Heat Won by Trinity, While the Eton Crew Take the Second from the Thames' Men.

Henley, July 10.—The weather was cloudy in the early hours of the morning and it was greatly feared that the principal feature of the Thames rowing season would be marred by rain, but the clouds lifted about 10 o'clock and the sun shone brightly, while there was a refreshing breeze all along the river. The entire length of the regatta course was lined with craft of every description, and crowds of people gathered on the Berks and Oxfordshire banks of the river long before there was any sign of activity among the managers, committee or crews taken part in the events of the day. The enclosed grand stand on the Berks side of the finish was packed with beautifully dressed ladies and their escorts, and every accessible point along the course was jammed with enthusiastic sightseers.

Principal Event of the Day.

The principal event of the day was the eight-oared race for the grand challenge cup, which is rowed in heats, the final to be decided on the last day of the regatta. The crews entered for this race were the Leander Boat club, the holders of the cup; the Thames Rowing club, the London Rowing club, the New College (Oxford) Rowing club, the Cornell University Boat club, Trinity Hall (Cambridge) Rowing club and the Eton College Rowing club. The first heat was won by Trinity Hall, who beat the London Rowing club by six lengths. The second heat was won by the Eton eight, who beat the Thames Rowing club crew a length and a quarter.

The Interesting Heat.

Then came the heat of the greatest interest both to Englishmen and Americans. The Cornell crew had drawn to contest with the eight of the Leander Boat club, which won the cup last year, and were considered the strongest crew entered in the race. The wind was blowing strong off the Berks shore, which favored the Cornells, who had drawn a position on that side. C. S. Francis, the manager of the Cornell crew, was unable to be taken on board the umpire's launch, which follows the boat over the course, as Mr. Willand, the umpire, thought she was already filled.

Some Misunderstanding.

When Willand asked "Are you ready?" the Leanders shouted "No," but apparently Willand did not hear them, as he said "Go," and the Cornells went off in good style. The umpire's launch did not follow for some time, but as the Cornells showed no signs of stopping, the launch eventually followed them down the course, while the Leanders remained at the starting point. The Cornells, after rowing at a pretty fast pace for a while, reduced their speed until their stroke was little less than paddling.

Cheered by Cornell Boys.

They occupied 8 minutes and 11 seconds in going over the course. The Cornell boys, of whom there was a large number present, ran along the towpath, cheering the men and filling the air with the Cornell cry, which was taken up by the Americans occupying houseboats along the course. The scene was very exciting.

The Heat Protested.

In the meantime the Leander crew remained at the post, declaring that they would lodge a protest against the heat being given to Cornell. It appears that when the umpire asked if they were ready some one in the Leanders boat said "yes," whereupon the umpire gave the word "go." Almost at the same time the stroke of the Leanders shouted "no, no." The Leanders or part of them, at least, made an faint attempt to get away as the Cornells started, but it was evident that the crew had no intention of going over the course, though for what reason nobody can imagine. As far as any one could see they were quite as ready to start as the Cornells were, though it may be true that they were not ready. Any way it was a very unfortunate misunderstanding, to say the least. The Leanders have protested the heat, and it remains to be seen whether the Cornells will be allowed to retain it or not.

Heat Awarded to Cornell.

It was not until the Cornell men had reached the winning post that the umpire was informed by the other regatta officials on board the launch that the Leanders, before the start was given, had said they were not ready. The umpire, notwithstanding these statements, maintained his right to award the heat to the Cornell crew. Later, the Leanders paddled down from their boathouse above the winning post, but did not again make their appearance during the afternoon, preferring to remain at their headquarters on Temple island. United States Ambassador Bayard was among those who followed the Americans over the course in the umpire's boat.

Grand Challenge Cup.

The first heat for the grand challenge cup was rowed at noon. Trinity Hall Rowing club, Cambridge, beat the London Rowing club eight easily by four lengths in 7m. 30s. A head wind prevented making fast time. Trinity Hall had the Bucks or most favorite shore of the course. In the second heat the Eton college crew beat the eight of the Thames Rowing club. The Thames club led slightly at the start, but, in spite of bad steering, Eton soon gained the lead and kept it throughout, winning easily in splendid form in one and one-quarter lengths and the best time, so far, of the day, 7m. 34½s.

Sustained by the Board.

The board of stewards have decided against the protest of the Leander crew and sustained the umpire in awarding the heat in the grand challenge race to Cornell.

CANADIAN CABINET CRISIS.

Excitement in Montreal—Action of French Ministers Condemned.

Montreal, July 10.—The crisis at Ottawa causes tremendous excitement in this city, and nothing else is talked about. The resignation of the three French ministers, Ouimet, Caros and Ingres, while generally approved of by French Canadians, is condemmed by some who claim they should have remained in the cabinet to look after the interests of the Catholic minority. That the situation is very grave is emphasized by the fact that the governor general started from Quebec for Ottawa immediately on hearing the news.

May Defeat the Ministry.

It is claimed by many that, if the French ministers persist in there determination to resign, they will take with them sufficent following to defeat the ministry. The reason for the resignation, as given by friends of the ministers, is that the delay in passing remedial legislation is entirely futile, and can serve no good purpose.

An Insult to the Minority.

Also, they claim, it is asking the Province of Quebec to go down on its knees, as it were, to Manitoba, notwithstanding everybody knows what answer will be received from the Greenway government. They claim, in short, that it is an insult to the minority. They also object that the government's statement did not specifically assert that as a result of legislation to be passed, Catholic denominational schools would be restored to Manitoba.

Mentioned as Probable Successors.

While some claim that the resignations on the part of the French ministers are in the nature of a bluff, others assert that the action is taken in real earnest, and that the ministers have left the cabinet for good. As one prominent conservative said: "There is not a single French conservative member who is with the government in this matter, and all will follow their leader should they go into opposition." Among the names mentioned as probable successors to the retiring ministers are D. Girouard, member for Jacques Cartier, and Sir Hector Langvin, liberal. politicians in this city are jubilant and predict and early downfall of the Bowell cabinet.

COAL MINING ACTIVITY.

The Sinking of a Big Shaft in the Pennsylvania District.

Pottsville, Pa., July 10.—The Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron company has broken ground for what will prove one of the largest coal operations in this region. This work is the sinking of a new shaft at Wadesville colliery, and the reopening of that mine after an idleness of about fifteen years. The Wadesville shaft revival marks a new era in the Schuylkill coal trade, and follows out the line of improvements long contemplated and already begun by the Reading company. It is stated that $500,000 has been appropriated for this work, and the plans are on an extensive scale that will bring prosperity to this vicinity.

WHY CHINA CONSENTED.

Said She Agreed to the Russian Loan Under Threats.

London, July 10.—The Morning Post to-day prints a dispatch from Pekin saying it is stated there that China agreed to the Russian loan only under the threat that the Liao Tung peninsula would be restored to Japan if she failed to agree. The Chinese government desired to pay the war indemnity immediately so as to save interest and the expenses of the Japanese occupation, but this course was found to be impracticable, Russia insisting that no fresh loan should be negotiated within six months.

CUBANS GROW EXCITED

Increased Activity Among the Insurgents.

Filibustering Expeditions Both from Florida and San Domingo—The Spanish Consul's Keen Detective Work—Seizes a Large Quantity of Arms and Munitions.

Kingston, Jamaica, July 10.—There has been considerable excitement here during the past week or two, particularly in Cuban circles, over the activity of the insurgents in Cuba and the landing on that coast of several filibustering expeditions both from Flordia and San Domingo. But, of course, the greatest excitement was over the fustration of the expedition which was organized to leave here on May 23. This result was due to Spanish Consul Forroja, who proved himself a first class detective.

Came Within an Ace of Success.

The success of the Childs-Bridgeton expedition spurred the Jamaica Cubans to action, and they came within an ace of success. The Childs went off to San Domingo to take up another expedition there which was timed to be ready. She left the Bridgeton here to effect repairs, and, it is now understood, repeat the operation of carrying arms and men out to sea to meet her on her return. This was timed for the evening of June 22.

His Vigilance Rewarded.

The crew having been before this paid off and hurried from the island to a man, the Spanish consul could get nothing against the captain and vessel, but he became very vigilant. His vigilance was rewarded. He discovered that the arms intended for the Bridgeton had been shipped in the coast trader Pearl, which was to sail on the evening of Saturday, June 22, stopping at Bull bay, some miles east of Kingston, there taking up the personnel of the expedition under Col. La Coat and Lanza, the famous pilot of the rebellion of '78. Owing to some hitch the Pearl did not sail Sunday evening of the 23d. Two armed cutters from the Tartar gave chase. When they reached Bull bay the Pearl's boats were in the water.

The Arms Discovered.

A rigorous search was made among the cargo, but, curiously, no contraband of war was found. The boats, therefore, returned to the Tartar, leaving the Pearl unmolested. The consul was not satisfied with the Tartar's report, and succeeded in obtaining an order for the the vessel to be again searched at the first port she touched. This was done, and to the chagrin of the Tartar's officers a large quantity of arms, munitions, stores, etc., was discovered masquerading as general merchandise. The vessel was seized and the captain arrested.

Disappointment Among Cubans.

The Cubans are very much cut up over the matter, although they deny everything, and leave the onus of proof on the consul. Had he known enough and acted with prudence, he would have caught a large expedition sailing out of Rio Bueno bay a day or two later. As it was he only frustrated a small section, although it was the chief's detachment. Whether the bulk of the arms and munitions on the north side was got off is not known.

THE CUBAN REBELLION.

A Report That Victoriano Garzon Has Been Wounded.

Havana, July 10.—In a skirmish at the coffee plantation of Retire, near Minas Daiquiri, province of Santiago de Cuba, the insurgent leader Victoriano Garzon and five more insurgents were wounded, and Tomas Padron was killed. Lieutenant Pedro Rabenes, of the Union battalion, with fifty soldiers of that battalion, on the way from Jobosi to Jatibonico, near Jucaro, and on Mount Guerralleras, was surrounded by 400 insurgents. Lieutenant Rabenes was wounded, but succeeded in holding the position which he occupied when attacked for three hours, owing to the rapidity of fire of the Manser rifle. Finally he was reinforced by a company of government troops and the insurgents retired. The Spanish troops, lost four killed. The loss of the insurgents is not known. The port of Santiago de Cuba has been opened to the importation of petroleum.

THIRTEEN MET DEATH

Terrible Disaster on the Grand Trunk Road.

Two Passenger Trains Loaded with Pilgrims Crash into Each Other. Scenes of Tragic Horror—Many of the Passengers Killed in Their Berths on the Pullman.

Craig's Road, Que., July 10.—The scene at the wreck on the Grand Trunk road here yesterday morning was something which an eye witness can never forget, and the accident has seldom been excelled in horror by any similar event in Canadian railway annals. A special excursion passenger train, rushing along in the darkness, crashed into another train of the same kind, preceding it, and killed thirteen and wounded thirty.

Trains Filled with Pilgrims.

The trains that were in collision were special excursion trains filled with pilgrims en route from Sherbrooks, Richmond and Windsor Mills to Levis, where they were to cross over to Quebec and proceed to the shrine at St. Anne De Beaupre, and were following one another with an interval of some twenty minutes between them. The first train reached this station, which is fourteen miles west of Levis, about 3 o'clock and stopped at the tank to take water. Due precautions were taken and the semaphore thrown to danger against the following train. Only the train men were out and about attending to their duties. The Pullman car in the rear was wrapped in silence and the sleepers were unaware of the terrible fate that was rushing upon them.

The Terrible Crash.

Suddenly there was a great crash—the second train, coming at full speed, had dashed into the rear Pullman of the first section. So great was the impetus of the colliding train that the engine embedded itself in the palace car, and the latter plunged forward and partially telescoped the first-class car immediately in front. Every berth in the Pullman was wrecked, and some of the occupants who were killed never knew what happened to them. They died sleeping. Others awoke to their horrible surroundings and position, maimed, bleeding and bruised, conscious of little else but the agony that racked them

Scenes of Tragic Horror.

It was an awful scene. The cries of the wounded and the moans of the dying, and the outpouring of passengers from the cars that were not badly damaged, and the hurrying forms of the uninjured trainmen, with their flickering lantern, all combined to make a sight seldom exceeded in its tragic horror. The work of rescue was begun as soon as possible. When the blinding clouds of steam had subsided the trainmen, priests and others got together, and the dead and wounded were taken from the ruins of the engine, the Pullman and the first class car and removed to temporary quarters.

Was the Engineer Asleep?

It is hard to say where the blame for the accident rests. It has been suggested that Engineer McLeod might have dozed off to sleep and thus have missed seeing the warning semaphore and was unconscious of his whereabouts. Indeed, this would seem to be the only theory that can be advanced, but a strict investigation will be held at once to determine where the responsibility rests.

Cheated the Electric Chair.

New York, July 10.—James S. McAvoy, who shot his wife on Saturday night so that she died on Monday, committed suicide in an awful manner yesternay morning by plunging in front of an elevated train. McAvoy was not instantly killed, although the engine and one car passed over his body, cutting off both legs. He was removed to the Flower hospital, where he died within the hour.

Another Delay for the Kite.

St. Johns, N. F., July 10.—The Peary relief steamer Kite will not be able to sail before this evening. The hardness of her steel shaft broke the drills used in boring it. The members of the party are much disconcerted over the delay.

FIVE PERSONS DROWNED.

Boat Capsized in Lake Keuka and the Entire Party Lost.

Bath, N. Y., July 10.—A drowning accident occurred just off Bluff Point on Lake Keuka yesterday by which five persons lost their lives. Terry Tufft, with his wife and three children left Gibson's landing in a sail boat to cross the lake. A strong wind was blowing and when opposite the point the boat was capsized and the whole party were drowned. No one saw the accident and the boat was not discovered until last evening, when the bodies were recovered in about ten feet of water. The Tufts lived on a small vineyard near Gibson, where they came last April.

SAVAGE WORK OF TOUGHS.

They Shoot a Father and Son to Death in a Heartless Manner.

Louisville, Ky., July 10.—Howlett Howton was called to his door at Lewiston last night and engaged in conversation by a man unknown to him. He was then seized by eight masked men and taken to a barn in the rear of his house and shot several times. The men returned to the house and murdered Howton's father. The old man begged for mercy, but the miscreants proceeded with their work. They stood Howlett up in the corner of the room in the presence of his wife and daughters, so that the shots would not hit any other member of the family and then fired several times.

GLADSTONE TO THE PEOPLE.

"Concede Ireland's Just Claims," He Writes to London.

London, July 10.—The Westminster Gazette a few days ago asked Mr. Gladstone to write a message to the people, to be displayed upon magic lantern slides, together with cartoons and election news, at the National Liberal club. Mr. Gladstone complied with the request by sending the following: "Above all other present purposes vindicate the rights of the house of commons as the organ of the nation, and establish the honor of England as well as consolidate the strength of the empire by conceding the just and constitutional claims of Ireland."

ALTGELD CHARGES BRIBERY.

Statement That a Member of Assembly Received $5,000 for a Vote.

Springfield, Ill., July 10.—In an interview Gov. Altgeld said: "It is a fact that certain members of the general assembly were paid large sums for their support of the Humphrey racing bill. One member, I am told, was paid $5,000 by an officer of the Racing association. That boodling or attempted boodling has marked the progress of nearly every important bill through the assembly. There is plenty of evidence. The two houses clearly owe a thorough investigation."

WILL LOOK FOR CROOKEDNESS.

Paymaster's Department of the Vermont in Trouble.

Washington, July 10.—The secretary of the navy has convened a court of inquiry to meet on board the receiving ship Vermont at the New York navy yard to investigate alleged irregular payments to members of the crew of that vessel. It was claimed that money had been loaned or advanced to them with usurous rates of interest, amounting in instances to 20 per cent per month, by subordinates in the paymaster's department on that vessel.

EZETA PREPARES TO RETURN.

Ex-President of San Salvador To Take Authority by Force.

San Francisco, July 10.—A local paper says that Gen. Antonio Ezeta, ex-president of San Salvador, who has resided in this city several months, is preparing to return to his native land and overthrow the government. Ezeta has chartered a vessel, he says, has bought arms, cartridges and other munitions of war and has prepared to go to Salvador in a short time to take by force the authority which he claims rightly belongs to him.

A Cold Snap for Iowa.

Sioux City, Ia., July 10.—Ice formed on water in tubs forty miles north of here last night. The corn looks as if it was injured, but it is thought to be too far along along to be seriously damaged. There were light frosts in low places in South Dakota, but no damage was done.

5,000 CYCLERS IN LINE

The Big Parade at the Asbury Park Meet.

Leading Feature of the Gala Week a Grand Success—Crack Riders and Bloomer-Clad Ladies Participate in the Event—The Case of Miss Knox, the Colored Cycler.

Asbury Park, N. J., July 10.—The second day of National League of American Wheelmen meet here has proved the most enjoyable of all thus far. The weather could not have been fairer, the placid ocean more tempting or the roads in better condition for riding. Hundreds of cyclers from every section of the union, Canada and even Europe arrived with wheels and gay badges on every train, bands played welcoming "two steps" and marches and the register of visitors at the cosy club house of the Asbury Park wheelmen fairly bulged out with its host of entries, while the seemingly inexhaustible supply of credential buttons waxed lower and lower in the committeemen's desks.

Entertaining the Denver Men.

The only Arthur Augustus Zimmerman, looking like a typical Jersey farmer, and his side partner, Harry Wheeler, took the Denver men in tow and promenaded them about the town and over the beach until the travel sore hearts of the Rocky mountain men were faint and their shoes full of sand, but with no discouraging effect upon their irrepressible lungs and wild western yell.

Miss Knox's Case.

The only excitements for the day have been the run to Long Branch through Interlaken, Deal Beach and Elberon by the famous surf road, the great parade and the discussion of Miss Kitty Knox's case. Miss Knox is an extremely comely colored girl from Boston, who recently won the first prize in the Malden cycle parade for wearing the most tasteful and artistic woman's wheeling garb, and who has been a member of the league for six years, joining long before the comparatively recent uproar about the race question, as a result of which the membership was limited to white persons alone. When Miss Knox, whose appearance and dress had been objects of admiration all day, walked into the committee room at the local club house and presented her league card for a credential badge the gentleman in charge refused to recognize the card, and the young woman withdrew very quietly and went her way.

The Committee Condemned.

Then the discussion commenced. Ninety-nine out of every hundred members interviewed express the heartiest sympathy for Miss Knox and condemnation for the apparently hasty action of the committee in charge of badges.

The Great Parade.

The great parade, somewhat late in starting, as is usual with such affairs, was reviewed at the league headquarters in the Ocean hotel. A number of prominent cyclers acted as judges to award the prizes for the clubs parading the largest delegations and for the organization making the finest appearance. The principal thoroughfares were lined with thousands of citizens, visitors and excursionists an hour before the procession moved. As the trumpet sounded the signal for the start it is estimated that at least 5,000 shimmering wheels advanced along Asbury avenue to the reviewing stand, the scene was one of extraordinary beauty, bright flags, brilliant costumes and regular military discipline lending to the line an appearance much finer than is usually seen at cycling displays.

Denver Carries Off First Prize.

The Denver Wheel club carried off first prize for both numbers and appearance, parading fifty-four men and women, all attired in spotless white linen suits and yachting caps. The second prize went to the Keystone Wheelmen, of Philadelphia, and the third to the Mercer County Wheelmen, of Trenton. The ladies' division, led by Mrs. Boughton, of New York, the only female consul in the league, showed fifty-seven women, thirty-three of whom wore the bloomer costume, ten the short skirt and the remainder the conventional long habit.

To Break the 100 Mile Record.

An additional feature of the track programme will be a trial this afternoon for the 100 mile record by A. A. Hansen, of Minneapolis, who rode 21,000 miles last year. Hansen will be paced by the Syracuse "quad" and tandem teams, and is confident that he can make at least twenty-six miles an hour with proper co-operation from the pacing men.

Officers Enjoy a Clambake.

After the parade a clambake was tendered by the Asbury Park wheelmen to the national and division league officers at Rhode Island point, the participants returning to the city for supper. Last evening hops were in progress at the hotels and the beach promenade was crowded from side to side by all the dashing men and pretty girls that the town can boast or the fleet produce.

McLaughlin Out on Bail.

New York, July 10.—Justice Gaynor, in the supreme court, Brooklyn, admitted William W. McLaughlin, ex-police inspector of this city who was convicted of extortion, to bail yesterday afternoon in the amount of $80,000. He furnished the necessary bonds and is now a free man.

Olympia's Final Trial.

Washington, July 10.—Reports of the final trial of the Olympia which has reached the navy department show that the vessel maintained a speed of nearly twenty knots in Sansibito channel for four hours on natural draught, which is greater than expected.

The councilmen who voted against the establishment of water hydrants for fire protection purposes on Martine avenue and Park avenue, because Mr. Martine is delinquent in taxes, displayed poor judgment. Whatever Mr. Martine owes for taxes the city will get, with ten per cent interest added. There are several valuable residences in that section, including Harned academy, who are now without proper protection, and against whom the council's action effects as much as Mr. Martine. The Daily Press regrets that any such spirit as evinced in this action should have found favor in the minds of any councilman.

The Courier-News of yesterday published a communication from some one who wants to "call down" The Press, but don't want the public to know who he is. The writer alleges that The Press made a mistake and refused to correct it after attention had been called to the error. If the writer of the communication will get a copy of The Press of June 10th, and glance his eye well down the sixth column on the first page he will read an item that will convince him that his allegations are groundless. The Press is always willing to correct any error appearing in its columns when attention is called to it.

Miss May Simpson is deputy sheriff of San Francisco. She is described as a young woman quietly dressed, with a pleasant face, unobstrusive manners, and nerves of steel. Her work consists mainly in escorting women who have been adjudged insane to their asylums. She treats insane persons with kindness and firmness combined, and is very successful in dealing with them. The men about the Sheriff's office treat her courteously, as they would another man whom they respected. Her pay is small, $2.50 for each trip. If no women are committed there is no pay, and the deputy sheriff goes home and awaits the next session of court. The most she has ever received is $40 in one month, and sometimes there are as few as six cases in a month, that is $15.

Kean Has a Rival in Rahway.

There is complaint by the citizens of Rahway over the fact that the city has been in darkness the past three dark, dismal, rainy nights. The city has for the past few years been using gas, but since John Kean, Jr., has purchased the controlling interest in the Rahway Gaslight Company and closed its works, furnishing gas from the Elizabeth works, the gas has been so bad that complaint was constantly made. The contract with the gas company expired July 1st, and the Board of Aldermen advertised a three years' contract. Manager Jackson Jaques, of the Rahway Electric Light and Power Company, sent in a bid for lighting the street with electricity. The contract was accepted by the Board of Aldermen, but there has not been time to get the city wired and lights placed.

The Forestry Association.

The New Jersery Forestry Association met at the State House, Trenton, the last of June. The idea of holding peripatetic forestry meetings and combining instructive excursions was discussed. It was decided to hold such a meeting in the autumn, and the middle and northern part of the State will probably be visited by the association. It may not be known that Prof. John Gifford, of May's Landing, is publishing an illustrative journal devoted to Forestery, called The Forester. This is the official organ of the New Jersey Forestry Association, and of the Association Summer School of Forestry.

Unforseen Firework.

About nine o'clock last night Mrs. Smalley and her children, living at 31 Linden avenue, went on the roof of the house to see the fireworks. A lamp was left in the kitchen near a window, and when the afr changed it blew the curtain over the lamp setting fire to it. James Pangborn, son of ex-Chief Pangborn, saw the blaze, and broke in the rear door just in time to avert a serious conflagration. The damage was slight.

A Unique Performance.

The unique performance of the "Peck Sisters from Alaska," will be given this evening at the Parish House of the Heavenly Rest, Clinton avenue. The proceeds go towards the Sunday-school excursion.

Activity Would be the Best.

Every member of the Board of Trade is expected to be present at the meeting tomorrow evening. Something in the nature of a surprise will be enjoyed, so The Press is informed.

Several members of Miantonomah Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., will meet at Justice Newcorn's office, this evening, and go to Raritan to visit Raritan Tribe, No. 174. They will assist in the installation and raising up of chiefs.

Henley-on-Thames, England, July 10.—The crews of Cornell University and Trinity Hall, Cambridge, rowed in the fourth heat of the trials for the Grand Challenge Cup at half-past twelve o'clock today. The Trinity Hall crew won as they pleased. The Cornell crew, which led for half a mile with their rapid stroke of forty-six to the minute, went all to pieces after passing that point, three of the men being compelled by faintness or exhaustion to stop rowing. Trinity Hall crossed the finish line eight lengths ahead, while the Cornell men stopped rowing before they passed the judges, Fennell falling into the bottom of the boat in a fainting fit.

—Delegations from New Brunswick, Bound Brook and Somerville, came to Plainfield last night, to witness the display of fireworks.

—The Weston Electric Company is about to erect a large plant at Waverley, where fifty acres of land has been purchased. A number of dwelling houses will be built for the employes.

—Franklin place from Fifth street to LaGrande avenue received a much needed scraping by Street Commissioner Meeker's men yesterday. These two blocks have always been a terror to wheelmen.

—The Johnson Signal Company's works at Rahway Junction were finally sold yesterday afternoon, the purchaser being the National Switch and Signal Company of Easton. The price paid was $52,500.

—Herbert Bogart, of West Second street, cut his foot so badly while in swiming last Saturday that it was necessary for a doctor to take several stitches in it. It will confined him to the house for several days.

—Phillip Swain has the thanks of the community, especially those who use his sidewalk in the winter season, for a fine bluestone sidewalk which he is about to lay. Now Mr. Swain do a little missionary work with your neighbor, and we'll vote for you for a councilman.

The Cosmopolitan.

"'O, will he paint me the way I want,'
As bonny as a girlie,
Or will he paint me an ugly tyke,
And be d——d to Mr. Nerli,
But still and on and which ever it is,
He is a canty Kerlie.
The Lord protect the back and neck
Of honest Mr. Nerli."

This, one of the last verses ever written by Robert Louis Stevenson, is in reference to the portrait of himself, which is given to the public with his verse for the first time in the July Cosmopolitan. The lines might have come from the pen of Burns, and are inimitable in their way. The portrait was declared by Stevenson himself to be the best ever painted of him.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The average age of the circuit chasers is 23 years.—American Wheelman.

Willard Sutton, of Liberty street, is learning to ride a wheel, and succeeds admirably.

Dr. and Miss Fritts will ride their wheels to Asbury Park on Thursday and there attend the bicycle races.

Wren Townley expects to leave here on his wheel for Asbury Park tomorrow morning and attend the national race meet of the L. A. W. He will return Friday.

Harry L. McGee, of Orchard place, and George A. Horne, of Willow avenue, took a spin on their wheels to Newark yesterday afternoon where they spent part of the afternoon with with friends.

Not a few wheelmen and wheelwomen who take Sunday, holiday, and other daylight runs hereabouts strap a light hammock and the fixings to hang it with, to their weels and when they come to a cool and rest-inviting spot in the suburban districts the hammock is swung between two trees, the wheel put aside and a book or pipe and tobacco brought into play. There are a few more pleasant ways of spending an afteenoon.

"The Elbow" is the name of the wrinkle used to advantage in "queer riding." When the men are bunched closely toward the finish of a race the man near the pole is suddenly lifted in the direction of the grass by the rider to his right hoisting the pole man's handle bar up with the aid of his elbow. The unfortunate getting the "touch" is compelled to sit up and must therefore lose his position and incidentally the race. Judges and referees take notice. — American Wheelman.

A Westfield Highwayman.

About eleven o'clock Sunday night W. B. Wilson, who is stopping with his brother on Park street, Westfield, was accosted near the Presbyterian church by a man who asked him for a cigarette. Mr. Wilson told him that he did not have one, and the stranger turned and walked along with him. When they reached Broad street the man drew a revolver from his pocket and showed it to Mr. Wilson, again asking for a cigarette. By this time Mr. Wilson was thoroughly frightened and, again telling the man that he had no cigarettes, left him, and crossed the street, but the man followed him, with his revolver in his hand. When near the depot Mr. Wilson dodged behind some bushes and then ran across the tracks. By dodging among the bushes in the depot park he eluded his pursuer and ran home.

Rev. Mr. Schenck Getting Well.

The many friends of Rev. Cornelius Schenck will rejoice with The Press in the fact that his hearing has been restored and he has so far recovered from his late illness as to be able to go to the seashore for a few weeks and then to the mountains where he will stay until September 1, when he will resume his pastoral duties in Trinity Reformed church. Tomorrow he and Mrs. Schenck go to the home of Mrs. Schenck's mother in Roxborough, a suburb of Philadelphia, and next week Mr. Schenck will go to Cape May and visit with Mrs. Schenck's brother who resides at that place, and about August 1, both Mr. and Mrs. Schenck will go to the Catskill mountains and remain there for the month.

A Young Girl Missing.

Mrs. H. S. Buckley, of Elmer street, Westfield, has reported that her niece, Emma Pulido, a young woman, nineteen years of age, has disappeared from her home and no trace of her whereabouts can be ascertained. Miss Pulido left the house last Friday afternoon about five o'clock. She did not tell her aunt where she was going, but it was supposed that she had gone to the postoffice for the evening mail. She did not return nor has anything been heard from her since. The police of the neighboring towns have been requested to look for her. She is at times subject to fits of mild mental derangement, and her family fear that she may have wandered into the woods.

Trip of the County Solons.

The Union County Board of Freeholders will take their annual trip to the Morris Plains Asylum on Thursday, to make an inspection and report on its needs. They will also begin widening the Grand street bridge of Rahway at once, under the supervision of Freeholder J. A. Farrell.

Breakdown on West Front Street.

The hay rack belonging to Alexander Gordon, of Clinton avenue, broke down on West Front street yesterday morning and the load remained there all day. Late in the afternoon it was carted away.

CHURCH CHIMES.

Next Sunday will be the third anniversary of St. Peter's German Lutheran church, and extra services, both morning and evening, will be held.

There was a sommerfest of the German Lutheran (St. Peter's) congregation to day at Hyde's Grove. The children had games, there was singing, and many received prizes. The next affair will be held the first part of next month.

The regular monthly rally of the Disciples of New York was held in the Second church, One Hundred and Sixty-ninth street, recently, at which time B. W. Hand, of the First Church of Christ (Disciples,) of this city, took an active part in the services. The next rally will be held October 7th, in the First Church, West Fifty-sixth street, New York.

Rev. E. F. Pihlblar is the guest of Rev. E. Kionka. He took the first steps for organizing a Swedish Lutheran church in this city. The Swedes are very glad to now have a minister of their own, for they have been waiting for that a long time. The first meeting will be held on Monday evening next in the German Lutheran church on Grove street. All Swedes are cordially invited to be present.

THE SECRET ORDERS.

The officers elect of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., will be installed Thursday evening.

An interesting part of the programme was omitted at the meeting of the Royal Arcanum Monday evening. It will probably come up at the next meeting.

To Inspect Other Institutions.

The Reformatory Commission will go to Ohio and Illinois this week to inspect the various reformatories in those States, in order to obtain necessary information regarding the construction and management of such institutions. This information will be made use of in the construction of the reformatory on the Edgar property in Rahway. An inspection of the grounds has been made, and measurements taken preparatory to the work to be begun in September. Plans have already been drawn by order of the commission, and submitted for correction.

Funeral Procession Interrupted.

Trolley-car No. 549, of Elizabeth, ran into one of the coaches of a funeral procession passing through Bond street, in that city, yesterday. The team of horses attached to the coach were knocked down by the collision, and badly cut about the legs and body. The harness was almost torn from the animals and the coach upset. Four women who were in the vehicle were badly frightened. They were somewhat bruised.

Parted By the Irate Papa.

The father of Mary Mack, of Westfield, the fifteen-year old girl who secretly married Arthur Liggett, as told in The Press of yesterday, went Monday afternoon to the residence of Mrs. Hankins, where his daughter was stopping, and forcibly took her home with him. Liggett, hearing that his bride had been taken away by her parents, left town with his grip and did not state where he was going.

Can This Be Possible.

The three liquor-dealers, James McCluskey, Henry Ruck, and Jacob Schaiple, of New Brunswick, who have been arrested for doing business on Sunday, have given bail before Recorder Harkins to appear before the grand jury in September. It is likely that several other cases that have been reported by the police will also be brought up at that time.

Did a Thriving Business.

Messrs. F. Wenzel and W. C. Emory did a thriving business selling soft drinks and Tier's ice cream in a tent, corner of Park avenue and Arlington place, last evening during the display of fireworks, and they generously provided free seats for quite a number of ladies.

THE EXPLOITS OF BRIGADIER GERARD.

HOW THE BRIGADIER CAME TO THE CASTLE OF GLOOM

BY A. CONAN DOYLE

The fellows in the hall made way for him as he strode in among them, so great is the power of one man who knows what he wants over several who are not sure of themselves. My companion tapped one of them on the shoulder with as much assurance as though he owned him.

"Show me to the Baron," said he.

The man shrugged his shoulders and answered something in Polish. The fellow with the beard who had shut and barred the front door appeared to be the only one among them who could speak French.

"Well, you shall have your way," said he, with a sinister smile. "You shall see the Baron. And perhaps before you have finished you will wish that you had taken my advice."

We followed him down the hall, which was stone flagged and very spacious, with skins scattered upon the floor, and the heads of wild beasts upon the walls. At the further end he threw open a door and we entered.

It was a small room, scantily furnished, with the same marks of neglect and decay which met us at every turn. The walls were hung with discolored tapestry, which had come loose at one corner, so as to expose the rough stone wall behind. A second door hung with a curtain faced us upon the other side. Between lay a square table strewn with dirty dishes and the sordid remains of a meal. Several bottles were scattered over it. At the head of it facing us there sat a huge man with a lion-like head and a great shock of orange-colored hair. His beard was of the same glaring hue, matted and tangled and coarse as a horse's mane. I have seen some strange faces in my time, but never one more brutal than that with its small eyes, its white crumpled cheeks, and the thick, hanging lip which protruded over his monstrous beard. His head swayed about on his shoulders, and he looked at us with the vague, dim gaze of a drunken man. Yet he was not so drunk but that our uniforms carried their message to him.

"Well, my brave boys," he hiccoughed, "what is the latest news from Paris—eh? you're going to free Poland, I hear, and have meantime all become slaves to yourselves, slaves to a little autocrat with his gray coat and three-cornered hat. No more citizens, either, I am told, and nothing but monsieur and madam. My faith, some more heads will have to roll into the sawdust basket some of these mornings."

Duroc advanced in silence and stood by the ruffian's side.

"Jean Carabin," said he.

The Baron started, and the film of drunkenness seemed to be clearing from his eyes.

"Jean Carabin," said Duroc once more.

He sat up and grasped the arms of his chair.

"What do you mean by repeating that name, young man?" he asked.

"Jean Carabin, you are a man whom I long wished to meet."

"Supposing that I had once such a name, how can it concern you, since you must have been a child when I bore it?"

"My name is Duroc."

"Not the son of——"

"The son of the man you murdered."

The Baron tried to laugh, but there was terror in his eyes.

"We must let by-gones be by-gones, young man," he cried. "It was our life or theirs in those days, the aristocrats or the people. Your father was of the Gironde. He fell. I was of the mountain. Most of my comrades fell. It was all the fortune of war. We must forget all this and learn to know each other better, you and I." He held out a red, twitching hand as he spoke.

AND FACING US THERE SAT A HUGE MAN.

"Enough," cried young Duroc. "If I were to pass my sabre through you as you sit in that chair I should do what is right and just. I dishonor my blade by crossing it with yours. And yet you are a Frenchman and have even held a commission under the same flag as myself. Rise then and defend yourself!"

"Tut, tut!" cried the Baron. "It is all very well for you young bloods——"

Duroc's patience could stand it no more. He swung his open hand into the great orange beard. I saw a lip fringed with blood, and two glaring blue eyes above it.

"You shall die for that blow."

"That is better," said Duroc.

"My sabre," cried the other. "I will not keep you waiting, I promise you!" and he hurried from the room.

CHAPTER IV.

I have said that there was a second door covered with a curtain. Hardly had the Baron vanished than there ran from behind it a woman, young and beautiful. So swiftly and noiselessly did she move that she was between us in an instant, and it was only the shaking curtains which told us whence she had come.

"I have seen it all," she cried. "Oh, sir, you have carried yourself splendidly." She stooped to my companion's hand and kissed it again and again ere he could disengage it from her grasp.

"Nay, madame, why should you kiss my hand?" he cried.

"Because it is the hand which struck him on the vile, lying mouth. Because it may be the hand which will avenge my mother. I am his stepdaughter. The woman whose heart he broke was my mother. I loathe him. I fear him. Ah, there is his step!" In an instant she had vanished as suddenly as she had come.

A moment later the Baron entered with a drawn sword in his hand and the fellow who had admitted us at his heels.

"This is my secretary," said he. "He will be my friend in this affair. But we shall need more elbow room than we can find here. Perhaps you will kindly come with me to a more spacious apartment."

It was evidently impossible to fight in a chamber which was blocked by a great table. We followed him out, therefore, into the dimly lit hall. At the further end a light was shining through an open door.

"We shall find what we want in here," said the man with the dark beard.

It was a large, empty room, with rows of barrels and cases around the walls. A strong lamp stood upon a shelf in the corner. The floor was level and true, so that no swordsman could ask for more. Duroc drew his sabre and sprang into it. The Baron stood back with a bow and motioned me to follow my companion. Hardly were my heels over the threshold when the heavy door crashed behind me and the key screamed in the lock. We were taken in a trap.

For a moment we could not realize it. Such incredible baseness was outside of all our experience. Then as we understood how foolish we had been to trust for an instant a man with such a history, a flush of rage came over us, rage against his villainy and against our own stupidity. We rushed at the door together, beating it with our fists and kicking it with our heavy boots. The sound of our blows and of our execrations must have resounded through the castle. We called to this villain, hurling at him every name which might pierce even into his hardened soul. But the door was enormous—such a door as one finds in medieval castles—made of huge beams clamped together with iron. It was as easy to break as a square of the old guard. And our cries appeared to be of as little avail as our blows, as they only brought for answer the clattering echoes from the high roof above us. When you have done some soldiering you soon learn to put up with what cannot be altered. It was I, then, who first recovered my calmness and prevailed upon Duroc to join with me in examining the apartment which had become our dungeon.

There was only one window, which had no glass in it, and was so narrow that one could not so much as get one's head through. It was high up, and Duroc had to stand upon a barrel in order to see from it.

"Firwoods and an avenue of snow between them," said he. "Ah!" he gave a cry of surprise.

I sprang upon the barrel beside him. There was, as he said, a long, clear strip of snow in front. A man was riding down it, flogging his horse and galloping like a madman. As we watched he grew smaller and smaller until he was swallowed up by the black shadows of the forest.

"What does that mean?" asked Duroc.

"No good for us," said I. "He may have gone for some brigands to cut our throats. Let us see if we cannot find a way out of this mousetrap before the cat can arrive."

The one piece of good fortune in our favor was that beautiful lamp. It was nearly full of oil and would last us until morning. In the dark our situation would have been much more difficult. By its light we proceeded to examine the packages and cases which lined the walls. In some places there was only a single line of them, while in one corner they were piled nearly to the ceiling. It seemed that we were in the storehouse of the castle, for there was a great number of cheeses, vegetables of various kinds, bins full of dried fruits and a line of wine barrels. One of these had a spigot in it, and as I had eaten little during the day I was glad of a cup of claret and some food. As to Duroc, he would take nothing, but passed up and down the room in a fever of anger and impatience. "I'll have him yet," he cried, every now and then. "The rascal shall not escape me." This was all very well, but it seemed to me as I sat on a great round cheese eating my supper that this younger was thinking rather too much of his family affairs and too little of the fine scrape into which he had got me. After all, his father had been dead fourteen years, and nothing could set that right, but there was Etienne Gerard, the most dashing lieutenant in the whole Grand Army, in imminent danger of being cut off at the very outset of his brilliant career. Who was ever to know the heights to which I might have risen if I were knocked in the head in this hole and corner business, which had nothing whatever to do with France or the Emperor? I could not help thinking what a fool I had been when I had a fine war before me, and everything which a man could desire, to go off on a hare-brained expedition of this sort, as if it were not enough to have a quarter of a million Russians to fight against without plunging into all sorts of private quarrels as well.

"That is all very well," I said at last, as I heard Duroc muttering his threats. "You may do what you like to him when you get the upper hand. At present the question rather is what is he going to do with us?"

"Let him do his worst!" cried the boy. "I owe a duty to my father."

"That is mere foolishness," said I. "If you owe a duty to your father I owe one to my mother, which is to get out of this business safe and sound."

My remarks brought him to his senses.

"I have thought too much of myself!" he cried. "Forgive me, Monsieur Gerard. Give me your advice as to what I should do."

"Well," said I, "it is not for our health that they have shut us up here among the cheeses. They mean to make an end of us if they can. That is certain. They hope that no one knows that we have come here, and that none will trace us if we remain. Do you hussars know where you have gone to?"

"I said nothing."

"Hum! It is clear that we cannot be starved here. They must come to us if they are to kill us. Behind a barricade of barrels we could hold our own against the five rascals whom we have seen. That is probably why they have sent that messenger for assistance."

"We must get out before he returns."

"Precisely, if we are to get out at all."

"Could we not burn down this door?" he cried.

"Nothing could be easier," said I. "There are several casks of oil in the corner. My only objection is that we should ourselves be nicely toasted, like two little oyster patties."

"Can you not suggest something?" he cried in despair.

"Ah, what is that?"

There had been a low sound at our little window, and a shadow came between the stars and ourselves. A small white hand was stretched into the lamplight. Something glittered between the fingers.

"Quick! quick!" cried a woman's voice.

"QUICK! QUICK!" CRIED A WOMAN'S VOICE.

We were on the barrel in an instant.

"They have sent for the Cossacks. Your lives are at stake. Oh, I am lost! I am lost!"

There was a sound of rushing steps, a hoarse oath, a blow, and the stars were once more twinkling through the window. We stood helpless upon our barrel with our blood cold with horror. Half a minute afterwards we heard a smothered scream ending in a choke. A great door slammed somewhere in the silent night.

Last June Dick Crawford brought his twelve-months-old child, suffering from infantile diarrhœa, to me. It had been weaned at four months old and had always been sickly. I gave it the usual treatment in such cases but without benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born, or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25 cent size had been used a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny constitution disappeared, and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by this remedy. J. T. Marlow, M. D., Tamaroa, Ill. W. H. Nelson, who is in the drug business at Kingville, Mo., has so much confidence in Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy that he warrants every bottle and offers to refund the money to any customer who is not satisfied after using it. Mr. Nelson takes no risk in doing this because the remedy is a certain cure for the diseases for which it is intended, and he knows it. It is for sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North Avenues. Chamberlain's is the best of all. Vincent S. Barkl, of Danbury, Iowa, has used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy whenever in need of a medicine for coughs and colds, for the past five years and says: "It always helps me out. If anyone asks me what kind of cough medicine I use, I reply, Chamberlain's, that is the best of all. 25 and 50c. bottles for sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North Avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

A horse kicked I. S. Shafer, of the Freemyer House, Middleburg, N. Y., on the knee, which laid him up in bed and caused the knee joint to become stiff. A friend recommended him to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which he did, and in two days was able to be around. Mr. Shafer has recommended it to many others and says it is excellent for any kind of a bruise or sprain. This same remedy is also famous for its cures of rheumatism. For sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

It May Do as Much For You.

Mr. Fred Miller of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a Severe Kidney trouble for many years, with severe pains in his back and also that his bladder was affected. He tried many so-called Kidney cures but without any good result. About a year ago he began use of Electric Bitters and found relief at once. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to cure all Kidney and Liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c for large bottle, at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

BOSS CROKER IN SOCIETY.

His Houses Suggest the Question, "Where Did He Get Them?"

Ex-Boss Croker of Tammany Hall is now in dear old London and dispatches say he is devoting much time to society. He gives numerous dinner parties and has a box at the opera.

The spacious house which he has rented for the London season must naturally take rank henceforth among the historic residences of the British capital.

The house is pointed out to sightseers from all quarters of the globe as the erstwhile home of the great Duke of Wellington; 139 Piccadilly is reverently gazed at as the scene of Byronic revels, and Thomas Carlyle's house in Cheyne row is the object of devout pilgrimage. London boasts a society which undertakes the duty of placing commemorative tablets on houses with which any notable man in politics, literature or art has been prominently associated. An irreverent Englishman suggests that when in due time R. Richard Croker has been gathered to his fathers, a tablet on 9 Palace Gate with some such inscription as this:

Richard Croker
during the summer of 1895 while he transferred the Tammany boodle
to the British bookmaker.

The house and its surroundings are marked by an elegance and exclusiveness which must appeal strongly to the eclectic tastes of Mr. Croker. If he were anxious to patronize mere fashionable society and to throw himself into the giddy world of London frivolity he might have pitched his wigwam in Belgravia or Mayfair. But Kensington, while being select in a social sense, has always possessed a special attraction for the elite of the artistic and literary world, and the vicinity of Palace Gate bears in an especial manner the hallmark of culture.

Immediately opposite No. 9 stands the mansion of Sir John Millais, Baronet, England's greatest living portrait painter; a few doors down Herbert Spencer, of philosophic fame, resides when he is in London; around the corner Henry James's London house is situated; while several eminent members of the British civil service, retired viceroys and other congenial spirits dwell in the immediate neighborhood.

Palace Gate is a broad, quiet thoroughfare, leading to Kensington Gardens, and it derives its first name from Kensington Palace, which is close by. Its houses were built by Cubitt—London's most noted domestic architect of the Victorian era—and they are of a large, substantial pattern, faced with stone. Their rent, unfurnished, would be about £600 ($3,000) a year, but, as Mr. Croker has taken No. 9 furnished, it must cost him between £30 ($150) and £40 ($200) a week.

Considerable curiosity has been aroused here over an advertisement which has just appeared in the newspapers of this city over the signature of a prominent real estate firm. It says:

"Wealthy American wishes to purchase a historical, residential estate with a Tudor or Elizabethan mansion, having twenty bedrooms, five reception rooms and 800 to 1,000 acres of land. Would pay about £50,000 ($250,000).

SPAN ACROSS THE BROOK.

JOINT MEETING OF FREEHOLDERS AWARD A CONTRACT.

W. T. Kirk, of Plainfield, to Build the Clinton Avenue Bridge—Talk About a Watchung Avenue Bridge.

That the members of the Union and Somerset County Boards of Chosen Freeholders are well chosen goes without saying.

Yesterday afternoon was the time set for giving out the contract for building the iron bridge over Green brook at Clinton avenue. The bridge committee from the Union County board, consisting of Director J. F. Hubbard, chairman J. H. Tier, A. S. Clark, Dr. Westcott, J. C. Ogden and J. M. Roll, were present, as were also the following members from the Somerset County board: J. C. Staats, Director, Andrew Lutkins, J. E. Ballentine, L. E. Barkalew, Robt. Zergiebel, and W. J. Logan.

They met in executive session at three o'clock at Tier's lake house, and received the bids offered. They were only a few minutes getting at the figures.

The companies bidding and the men representing them are as follows:

Groton Bridge Co,, New York, F. W. Sage, $1,897; Dean & Westbrook Bridge Co., F. R. Long, $1,920; Havana Bridge Co., New York, F. H. Buck, $1,940; Toledo Bridge Co., Toledo, Ohio, H. E. Beecher, $1,895; Wrought Iron Bridge Co., Canton, Ohio, W. B. La Chicotte, $2,100; Owego Bridge Co., N. Y., W. J. Barnett, $1,997; Horseheads Bridge Co., N. Y., F. A. Case, $2,040; Berlin Bridge Co., East Berlin, Conn., J. R. Watt, $1,960; Penn Bridge Co., Beaver Falls, Pa., S. White, $1,843; Massillon Bridge Co., Massillon, Ohio, F. A. Lyte, $2,000; W. T. Kirk, Plainfield, $1,789.

The last named was the lowest bidder and therefore received the contract, which was signed by Directors J. F. Hubbard, J. C. Statts, and W. T. Kirk.

The bridge when completed will be a handsome one, and a credit to the counties.

After the business all were served with Tier's celebrated ice cream, and a general social time was enjoyed.

The freeholders talked a little about the possibility of a bridge being built over the brook in connection with the extension of Watchung avenue, and all thought it would only be a short time before such a structure would have to be built.

Put a Bell on It.

While a prominent member of the Crescent Wheelmen and a lady friend were riding on West Fourth street last evening the latter narrowly escaped a severe accident. Standing under a very large tree in the shadow was the large street roller to which was attached four black horses. The cyclists approached toward the horses and barely escaped a collision by jumping just in time. The young man, as well as the young woman, were much frightened. It appears that the man in charge of the roller was resting his horses, and they report that he laughed at them when he saw the affair. There should either be a light on the rolling machine or a bell when that monstrosity is traveling Plainfield streets.

The Dog Shot.

A vicious dog belonging to Mrs. Kiss, of East Third street, bit Warren Seaman, of that street, last Sunday, inflicting a painful wound on the leg. Warren was playing with a cousin who had the dog, when the latter snapped at him, his teeth catching the flesh on the leg. Mrs. Kiss was willing that the dog should be shot, and Mrs. Seaman asked Sergeant Kiely if he would attend to it. The canine was shot today. The boy had the wound cauterized by a physician.

A Summer Camp.

H. D. Brewster and family, of Washington avenue, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Sandford, Jr., of West Seventh street, and Mr. and Mrs. Burt Tilney, of Boston, have left for the Maine woods where they will enjoy camp life on the shores of one of those beautiful little inland lakes.

Where They Slaughter.

Chief Marshal VanHorn has succeeded in establishing the dogpound in a building in the rear of Boyce's Hotel, and yesterday the paraphernelia was moved from the old pound to the new one by Dogcatcher Frisbie. One dog was disposed of through the use of the gun.

A Race Meet for Boys.

Frank Talmadge, of Netherwood, assisted by some of his friends, is planning for a boys' race meet at the Crescent oval, next week.

THE PRESIDENT TO MR. MARSH.

Mr. Cleveland Receives the Gift of Mr. Marsh's Pigcatorial Outfit.

President Cleveland is a busy man nowadays who is confronted with a condition and not a theory. But Mr. Cleveland is not so busy but that he can write letters, or, at least, instruct other people to write them.

A few days ago he received the fishing pole which was made by Andrew F. Marsh, of this city, and, though no precise report has been received, it is supposed that the President immediately donned his angling togs, and with a tomato can of angle worms, started for the fishing pools of Buzzards Boy. The news reports of Wednesday state that the President went fishing, and doubtless he fished with the rod made in Plainfield, from the fact that Mr. Marsh received the following letter yesterday:

My Dear Sir: The President directs me to acknowledge the receipt of the hickory trout pole which you were kind enough to send him, and to thank you heartily for it. The President prizes this gift highly and wishes me to assure you that he is especially pleased with it as an evidence of your thoughtfulness and regard.

Very Truly Yours,
Henry F. Thurber,
Private Secretary.

Andrew F. Marsh, Esq.,
Plainfield, N. J.

Anxious Baptists.

Twenty-six cars of anxious humanity left the North avenue station this morning on their way to Asbury Park on the excursion of the First Baptist church Sunday-schools and missions and the Grace P. E., Sunday school. They were all anxious to get there and also anxious about the weather which looked rather like rain. The excursion went in two sections and although not actually packed the cars were all comfortably filled,.

If it does not rain the day will be a delightful one for all those who went down. There were several wheels in the baggage car but that number will be increased on the return as a number of the young men rode down on their wheels to retuan in the train.

Red Men Raised.

District Deputy Great Sachem Charles M. Ulrich visited the wigwam of Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Tribe, I. O. R. M., last evening, and raised to the various stumss the following chiefs: Sachem, Charles Conover; Senior Sagamore, William J. Allen; Junior Sagamore, Charles Stephens; Prophet, Charles I. Young; Chief of Records, Charles M. Ulrich; C. of W., Thomas Osment; First Sannap, John H. Carney; Second Sannap, Harry C. Runyon; G. of W., E. H. Neal; G. of F., L. K. Clark. The meeting was made exceedingly lively by remarks from the Deputy and his staff, and the newly raised chiefs.

New Depot at Cranford.

At the last meeting of the Cranford Township Committee the committee appointed to confer with the Central Railroad officials reported that Superintendent Peddie informed them that the company had plans out for a depot, to be erected on the south side of the track, and that the company proposed to tunnel under the tracks at Union avenue, the improvement contemplated to cost about $75,000.

Washingtonville Hospitality.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark entertained a few of their friends at their summer residence in Washingtonville, last night. After a very pleasant evening dainty refreshments were served.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. William Smith, Miss Redman, of New York, Miss May McLoughlin, John G. McLoughlin, Robert Clark, Edward Clark, George W. DeMeza and William Kitchen.

There Will be a Large Crowd.

Experience is everything and the committee in charge of the First Methodist Episcopal Sunday-school excursion, tomorrow, has been there before. That will insure a pleasant trip on the cars while the National race meet of the League of American Wheelmen and all the regular attractions of the shore will furnish an enjoyable day when there.

Private Theatricals.

The young people of West Seventh street are planing to give a play at the residence of Samuel J. Lawson, on the corner of West Seventh street and Grant avenue, Saturday evening. The admission fee will be ten cents.

To Report the Convention.

On their return from Boston the Misses Emily Coriell and Alice Woodland will furnish interesting reports of the convention which is being held in that city this week, which will be read at the First Baptist church.

MOST REMARKABLE WOMAN.

MRS. SPENCER LIVED EIGHTY-SEVEN YEARS OF USEFULNESS.

She Was of Patriotic Ancestry—Generous to a Fault—Was a Thorough Business Woman.

There was laid at rest yesterday all that was mortal of one of the remarkable of the many women born in the early part of the present century, in the burial of the remains of Caroline B. Spencer, widow of the late James Lyman Spencer. Mrs. Spencer was born in New Providence, Essex county, (now Union) N. J., July 17th, 1808, and was a daughter of John and Sallie Wilcox. Four brothers and two sisters survive her. Isaac lives in Kansas, Henry, Edward, and John M., in New Providence, Mrs. Abbie Jimmerson, in Illinois, and Mrs. Louisa Tuthill, of Orange county, N. Y.

She was of patriotic ancestry, her great-grandfathers, on both her father's and mother's side, having served with distinction in the Continental army in its great struggle for American independence, both having been promoted from the ranks to captaincies while in the service, and it is not therefore at all strange that this same lady was such an enthusiastic American. A more remarkable person with such a retentive memory did not live.

When the late war between the north and the south was raging there were none more loyal than her. She was a member of the Patriotic Society that met in Alberti's block, Front street, this city, (where Griffen's store now is) and assisted in manufacturing underclothing, sheets, lint bandages and supplies, for field and hospital service, for the brave boys who were fighting their country's battles, and where she had a son, Captain Craig Spencer, in active duty. Frequently during the war she would send by express boxes and trunks containing necessary articles of clothing and delicacies not obtainable in the army, to the brave defenders of the old flag.

Born and reared on a farm she always took a deep interest in agricultural matters. She was generous to a fault, more for others than for herself. She never turned a needy person empty handed from her door and would divide her last cent with anyone in want. The early settlers in this locality remember her in their trials of sickness. During the first two years of her residence in North Plainfield she sat up fifty nights with the different sick, the rich and the poor—they were all alike to her when in trouble. A more active business woman could not be found. Shreud and careful in real-estate investments, never making injudicious ventures it is not strange that today realty in which she was interested is paying thirty-five per cent. yearly. A saying of her's was that a piece of land was like a figure, its value depended upon the position it occupied.

She was a great reader and a person that kept papers containing any valuable or notable events that have transpired during the last half century. Among her relics was a British officers coat, red on one side and blue on the other, (turn coat,) which was captured with a British soldier by her greatgrandfather, Captain William Line, at the battle of Princeton.

She moved to North Plainfield in 1861 where she resided nearly all the time since and where the evening of her active life was passed among those whom she loved.

She was the mother of the late John L. Spencer, of Scotch Plains, Captain Craig Spencer, of California, Mrs. Elias Allen, of Washington Valley, Mrs. Alonzo Regur, of Delavan, Illinois, W. F. and Collector H. N. Spencer, of North Plainfield.

The remains were interred alongside those of her late husband in the Presbyterian cemetery, on Chatham street, yesterday. The bearers were her grandchildren Alexander Gibby Spencer, Harry L. Spencer, (sons of H. N. Spencer) Samuel Spencer, son of W. F. Spencer, Louis Schutt and George Demler, Jr., and Charles Blume, the two later husbands of grandchildren. Louis Schutt was a great grandchild of deceased.

Another Stolen Wheel.

Fred Beebe, of New York, who is visiting his aunt, Mrs. S. C. Pearson, of Watchung avenue, had his wheel stolen Tuesday night. It seems that young Beebe left his wheel in the front of Mr. Pearson's yard in his haste to go and see the fireworks and when he returned the bicycle was gone. The wheel was a last year Premier.

A School For Juveniles.

Miss Scribner and Miss Newton expect to continue the Kindergarten with their school, as will be seen by their adverrtisement in another column, although a report to the contrary has been circulated.

A POINTED PERFORMANCE.

FAMILIAR CINDERILLA ACTED BY PRETTY YOUNG GIRLS.

Novel Entertainment at the Parish House of Church of Heavenly Rest — Committee of Arrangements Deserve Credit.

The glimmering light from numerous Chinese lanterns, which were swinging in the cool evening breezes, danced over a merry throng as they came to attend the entertainment given in the Church of the Heavenly Rest for the benefit of the excursion fund, last evening. The parish house was well filled even before the curtain rose, and before the entertainment closed every seat in the room was taken.

A dramatic version of that old familiar story of Cinderilla was given after a duet "You Can't Play in My Yard," by the Misses Lizzie Hendry and Bertha Schunk. The characters were taken by the following: Cinderilla, Miss Viola Lievers; her sisters, Miss Libbie Dennick and Miss Carrie Howard; the god-mother, Miss Sallie Emery; Prince, Walter Sherwin.

The story is too well known to be told and it only need be said that all did their best to make a success of the play and succeeded admirably.

After a recitation by Miss Doty Smalley, the Peek Sisters of Alaska, were introduced. All were dressed alike in long gray gowns with long peaked paper caps which fell over almost at the wrong moment

Miss Sandford, of New York, represented the chaperone of the party, while the parts of her very modest and retiring sisters were taken by the Misses Etta Yaeger, Libbie Dennick, Alma Jackson, Rachael Schunk, Mary Grace, Viola Lievers, Mary Porter, Maggie Porter, Sadie Emory, Minnie Emory, Carrie Howard, and Ida Utzinger. Miss Sandford then gave a speech that the coming representative of the coming state of Alaska is going to make if he is elected. It a was a general mix-up of large words and wrong meanings that sent the audience into roars of laughter.

The other sisters were then introduced individually and sang, or played on some musical instrumment, some of which selections were very amusing.

After the Alaskan visitors had departed, four little boys, Albert Yeager, Tom DeMeza, Everett Sherwin, and Robert Sherwin, gave a vocal selection in a very pleasing manner.

Another little play entitled, "The Aunt's Visit," ended the evening's enjoyment.

Miss Linnie Emory and Miss Minnie Martin, two society girls, are about to have a party when they learn that their old aunt, Miss Peabody, represented by Miss Maggie Porter, is coming to visit them. Their school friend, Miss Elma Jackson is with them and she counsels kindness, but the girls persist in their rude course when their aunt arrives. She in due time makes life weary for them at their party by suddenly appearing in her old clothes. The school friend comes to the rescue and leads the aunt away.

The most abused and yet, by far, the most important part of an entertainment is the committee of arrangements, and the committee who so energetly arranged and carried out the programme without a hitch, certainly deserve great credit. It consisted of Miss Etta Yaeger, Miss Mary Graves, Mrs. C. Lewis, and Miss Sandford.

The Bicycle in Court.

Adolph Knip took his bicycle to Sigmund Fruct to have the tire repaired. The tire was a new one but was punctured. Fruct put on on old tire instead of repairing the new one, which was the cause of the suit entitled Knip against Fruct, in tort, before Justice Nash, yesterday. The plaintiff was represented by George W. DeMeza, and the defendent by Harry C. Runyon. After a great deal of argument by both sides, Justice Nash decided that Fruct must pay for a new tire and the costs of the suit.

An Up-to-Date Party.

There is lots of enjoyment in a cycling party, as a numbet of young people of this city and the borough will testify after their experience yesterday. Those who participated in this up-to-date enjoyment were:

Miss Emma Buckle, Miss Bertha Thorne, Miss Mary Collier, John VanWinkle, Jr., Henry B. Drake, and E. Maxwell Honeyman. Metuchen was their destination.

Out for the Summer.

Mrs. W. H. Roome, mother of W. J. Roome, of North Plainfield, and Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Harbow, of West Fifthy-seventh street, New York, are summering at the Revere House. They bring with them their horses and carriages.

DID HE CARESS OR SLAP?

At Any Rate Will Smith's Horses Started on a Wild Run.

Front street seemed to be a great place for runaways, yesterday. Another occured about half past two o'clock in the afternoon. Will Smith's splendid team of horses, with a surrey attached, were going down Front street under the guidance of young Arthur Smith, who started to turn into Somerset street. One of the electric cars had just stopped to allow the conductor to turn the switch when the team passed by. The conductor of the car either patted the horse as a caress or struck him, which caused them to rear and then run. Arthur saw he could not pull into Somerset street so he pluckily held on to the reins and kept the team, both of which were running now, on the right side of the road. Will Smith was talking with George Moore in front of the latter's store, when he saw the horses run and immediately started in pursuit. Mr. Love, the grocer, kindly lent the use of one of his delivery wagons for the pursuers. But before they could catch the runaway, Arthur Smith had by careful management brought them down to a trot.

BOY RACERS.

East Front Street the Scene of Exciting Contests.

The boys of East Front street had a good time yesterday afternoon in the way of bicycle races. The first was a five-mile race on on the Front street course from Richmond street to Scotch Plains and back. About ten boys entered and Frank Dencklau finished an easy first, while Henry Angerbar finished a close second. The prize for the first man was twenty sodawater tickets given by Mr. Fleischhauer, the East Front street pharmacist, and the second prize was a cap given by U. B. Crane, the West Front street hatter.

The second event was a one and a half-mile race to the foot of Cole's hill and back to Sandford avenue. The first to finish was Charley Dodd who received six sodawater tickets, while the second man, Tunis Hewitt, received three tickets.

The boys all say they had a good time and hope to have more races next week.

JUMPED FROM THE CAR.

A Lad Badly Injured While Stealing a Ride on the Trolley Car.

To steal a ride on the electric cars long been the joy of numbers of youngsters on Somerset street, but now little Myer Moledezky, the son of Harman Moledezky, the shoe dealer, will not try it again for a while. The lad, who is about eight years old, jumped on the back platform of a Somerset street car last evening as the conductor went to the front part of the car to collect fares. When he returned the car was spinning along at a high rate of speed. He discovered Myer crouched close in the corner, but before he had a chance to say a word the lad sprang backwards, striking his head on the roadbed. He was unconscious for a few moments, and was carried into R. G. Shaw's drug store. After he regained his senses, Fred Dencklau kindly carried him home, as the poor boy was too weak and dizzy to walk.

Reckless Celebrators.

On the Fourth of July Adam Miller, of Picton, had his Jersey cow tied to a post in the field opposite the Picton Depot. When he went to get the animal at night he found that it could use but three legs. Thinking that his son had been beating the cow, the farmer gave the boy a sound thrashing, though he protested his innocence. Later, when the cow's injury was closely examined, however, five bullet holes were found in her leg.

Men Who Handle the Ribbons.

The Coachmen elected the following officers last evening for the coming year: President, Daniel F. Dugan; Vice-President, James Cassidy; Treasurer, Harry Forrestell; Secretary, Peter Mc Donough; Board of Trustees, Daniel F. Dugan, James Cassidy, Harry Forrestell, Peter N. Mc Donough, Martin Burke.

CUPID INVADES A HOME.

AND A CHARMING NUPTIAL EVENT IS THE RESULT.

Marriage of Miss Sophia McGinnis to Harry M. Cooke—The Somerset Street Home Prettily Trimmed.

A charming wedding took place yesterday afternoon at five o'clock when Miss Sophia McGinnis, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George S. McGinnis was married to Harry M. Cooke, an employe of the Central Railroad of New Jersey at their Jersey City office.

The rooms were beautifed with roses, ferns and dasies. A large horseshoe of dasies hung gracefully in the alcove where the nuptial knot was consummated. The very pretty decorations was the work of Miss Hattie Powelson, an intimate friend of the bride, and the artistic effect was pleasing.

Miss Katy Bassert, of Philadelphia, played Lohengrins wedding march as the bridal party entered the room, where they were met by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, who performed the ceremony.

The bride was gowned in white French null and carried a bouquet of white roses.

The maid of honor, Miss Nellie McGinnis, sister of the bride, wore a gown of pink and carried sweet peas. The best man was David Bodine. After the ceremony those present extended hearty congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Cooke. Refreshments were then served. Mr. and Mrs. Cooke left the house amid showers of rice, and as the coach passed through Somerset street an old shoe could be seen hanging in the rear. They left on the 6:40 p. m. train for New York, and from whence no one knows where they are going. It is expected they will return the first of the week and take up their residence on Summit avenue, where a furnished house is awaiting them.

The ushers were Lambert B. Bodine and William Cooke.

A large number of handsome and useful presents were received. The employes in the office where Mr. Cooke works gave a very pretty dinner set, and the bride received two checks. Two choice presents were received from relatives in Kansas and Nebraska.

The guests present to witness the happy event included:

Miss Sophia Bossert, Miss Katy Bossert, Phiadelphia; Miss Christy Coddington, Mt. Horeb; Mayor J. E. Coddington, Bound Brook; Mrs. T. L. Littell, Elizabeth; Miss M. Hitchcock, New York; Mrs. A. Gillman, Newark; Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Wooley, Westfield; Mr. and Mrs. Casper Bolsterle, the Misses Emma, Minnie and Dolly Bolsterle, Mrs. Joseph Bolsterle, Miss N. Kreitling, Miss Eva Lance, Mrs. J. Hedden, Mrs. Geo. Angleman, Rev. and Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, Mrs. John Cory, Miss Emma Cory, Miss Maggie Cory, Miss Hattie Powilson, Miss Etta Thorn, Miss May Mills, Miss Mattie Cooke, Mrs. E. Cooke, Wm. Cooke, Edward Smith, David Bodine, and Lambert Bodine.

WEDDED AT MT. OLIVE.

A Happy Event Witnessed by Congratulating Friends.

The Mt. Olive Baptist church was well filled with people last evening when Miss Anna Bonner was united in marriage to Thomas G. Hines.

The bridal party were punctual and exactly at eight o'clock the ceremony was performed. The bride entered on the left, gowned in white, wearing a tulle veil. She carried a bouquet of white bridal roses. Close behind her was the maid of honor, Miss Mary Jones, also gowned in white. On the right was the groom and best man, Wm. Burden.

The party met in front of the church where the pastor, Rev. P. H. Gibson, performed the impressive ceremony, after which they were taken to the North avenue station and left for New York on the 8:31 train. They went to the home of the groom's mother, where a reception was given them. Mr. and Mrs. Hines will live in Plainfield.

The ushers at the church were Charles Barber and Grant Cannon.

Fell Off the Bridge.

A large crowd of boys gathered last night at the Water street bridge, and began to play about the brook. At first the boys were very careful where they went, but after a time they grew careless, and began to see how near they could come to falling in without getting wet, with the result that one of the smaller lads fell off the bridge and came near being drowned.

WILL FIGHT TO THE END

Gomez Refuses a Request To Leave Cuba.

Five Hundred Old Time Fighting Volunteers, with Arms, Ammunition and Horses Join the Insurgents—Preparing for a Concerted Move on Government Forces.

Santiago de Cuba, July 1, via Key West, July 11.—Five hundred volunteers, headed by Commadner Casallas, with arms, ammunition and horses, joined the rebel ranks last week. The men formerly belonged to the famous regiment of volunteers of Camajuani, which, in the war ten years ago, rendered notable services to the Spanish government. It is reported that Commander Casallas was killed in the first encounter his regiment had with the Spanish troops.

Asked Gomez To Quit.

In Puerto Principe, the Cubans loyal to the Spanish government, appointed a commission of three leaders of the first war and several other prominent gentlemen to go and have a conference with Maxima Gomez with the view of prevailing upon him to leave the island. Failing in their efforts to get an audience, the commission wrote Gomez a letter, stating their desire.

Will Fight to the Last.

He, it is said, returned the letter unopened, with the statement that he knew its contents through current rumors, and that he could not consider the subject; that he was not disposed to leave the country, but that he would fight to the last ditch.

Preparing for a Big Battle.

The government has sent most of its soldiers to Puerto Principe and Las Villas. The great strength of the revolution is at present in Las Villas, where there are great numbers of insurgents. Four thousand under Antonio Maceo are near San Luis and are reported to be preparing for a concerted move upon the government forces.

Romero Will Probably Be Shot.

Lieut. Becerra Romero, who surrendered with twenty-five soldiers to Maximo Gomez, at El Mulato, has been arrested and sent to Havana for trial. He will probably be sentenced to death. In the fight at El Mulato the insurgents captured 1,500 cartridges from the Spaniards.

Stormed by Gomez.

Another village of Puerto Principe, San Geronimo, was stormed and captured by Gomez. He afterwards destroyed the town by fire. The lieutenant who was in charge with fifty soldiers, made a noble resistance, but eventually surrendered and tendered his sword to Maximo Gomez. He complimented the lieutenant upon his bravery and gallantly returned his sword.

Lost One General.

In the assault upon the village of Altagracia, Puerto Principe, the Cubans lost one of their generals named Paquito Borrero. Senor Dopez Recio, who was a companion of the Marquis of Santa Lucia, has been appointed to succeed General Borrero.

Dissatisfied with Campos.

Many of the Spaniards here continue to express a great deal of dissatisfaction with Martinez Campos' mild policy. They maintain that if the marshal does not begin a more active campaign and shed a little blood, as in the first war, they will compel him to leave.

Sanitary Condition Bad.

The sanitary condition of this city continues very bad. From June 25 to 29 seventy-six deaths occured, twenty-six of whom were soldiers. The death rate for the past three months shows a frightful increase as compared with the same period of 1894. Last year the deaths reported for April were 69; May, 71, and June, 35. This years' figures are for April, 157; May, 193, and while the June figures are not yet known, the indications point to something over 300.

Death Rate Heavy.

The death rate in Puerto Principe is very heavy owing to the prevalence of yellow fever. Forty-five per cent. of the deaths there are of soldiers. Since the beginning of the war Spain has sent to this island twenty-three steamers with troops, 20,205 soldiers, 269 leaders and officers and three generals.

Tuttle took him in and carried him about half a mile and dropped him, the stranger saying he was going another way. Soon after reaching home Tuttle discovered that his pocketbook was missing with $1,800 in it.

BAND OF TRAMPS RAIDED.

Sixteen Arrests Made—They Seized a P., W. & B. Freight Train.

Baltimore, July 11.—Fifty tramps and vagrant desperadoes seized a freight train of the Philadelphia, Wilmington & Baltimore railroad, at Bayview Junction and fired a fusilade of pistol shots at the engineer, fireman, conductor and brakemen. That all of the train crew escaped unhurt is a miracle. The men retreated to the locomotive cab and when all were safely aboard the engine was uncoupled and the train left to the mercy of the gang, while the locomotive and crew went flying to Canton, about three miles distant, for assistance.

Officers to the Scene.

The Canton squad of the Baltimore county police force was speedily called together from patrol duty. Five officers, each with several pairs of handcuffs, a billy and pair of double action revolvers in his pocket, were put aboard the engine. The party was a small one to attack a mob of fifty, but was all that could be mustered. The return run to Bayview was quickly made. Much to the surprise of the trainmen, no attempt had been made to injure the cars. It was feared when the train was abandoned the thwarted gang would set fire to it out of malice. The gang had evidently rightly guessed the engine had gone for assistance, and had taken to the woods to conceal themselves.

Sixteen Arrests Made.

The officers plunged into the woods. The darkness was so intense there that the officers could not see two feet ahead of them and they dared not carry lanterns lest they might become targets for bullets. The officers found it was a literal case of "the woods are full of 'em" and arrest followed arrest in quick succession until sixteen had been captured. They were loaded in a box car, and, guarded by officers, hauled to Canton, where they were locked up in the police station.

Sullen and Defiant.

They included both white and black, all ragged and dirty, and some of them somewhat intoxicated. They were surly and defiant. The leader of the gang said his name was John Dalton, but denied being related to the notorious Dalton brothers.

Given Ten Days Each.

At the hearing the sixteen men were charged with trespassing on the property of the Philadelphia, Wilmington & Baltimore Railroad company and were sentenced to ten-day terms in Towson jail. Charges of assault with intent to kill would have been laid against them had the trainmen been able to identify them positively as their assailants.

STRIKE IN CARPET MILLS.

More Than Three Thousand Operatives Out in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, July 11.—The weavers employed in a number of ingrain carpet mills in this city have began a strike which threatens to become general in the industry. The demand of the strikers is for an advance in wages of 7½ per cent. at the mills where the highest wages are paid and of very much more at other mills, a number of firms having made bigger cuts in wages than others.

Their Demands Refused.

More than three thousand men and women have already quit their loons, and it is thought that double that number will be eventually affected. The grievance committee called upon the manufacturers and presented their claims, which in most instances were promptly refused. The workers thereupon went out.

The Mills Affected.

At Bromley Bros.', 125 went out; at Ivins, Diets, Metzger & Co., 124 out of 126; Kiefer & Koons, 95 out of 96; John Gay's Sons, 165; David McDowell, 46; E. C. Reed, 35; Thomas Boggs, 85; Joseph Taylor, 75; Artman & Triechler, 45. Besides these the employes of a number of other large establishments went out at various times throughout the day.

Say Trade Is Booming.

The weavers declare that trade is booming and that they are justly entitled to the increase, while the manufacturers contend to the contrary. While most of the latter are firm in their refusals, a number of them have withheld their final decision until to-morrow. A meeting of the strikers to discuss the situation was held late in the afternoon.

May Affect 15,000 People.

Altogether 1,448 weavers in twenty-two mills have left their looms. With this number refusing to work, many more men and women are thrown out of employment, and as the strike threatens to spread to a majority of mills, 10,000 or 15,000 people who were working on Monday may be idle within a day or two.

THE C. E. CONVENTION

50,000 Visitors Already Registered at Boston.

Proceedings Opened Last Night with Nineteen Simultaneous Meetings. Perfect Arrangements for the Reception and Care of the Delegations—The Streets Crowded.

Boston, July 11.—Boston greeted the Christian Endeavor hosts with a wealth of crimson and white decoration, which hung in every shape from thousands of buildings and vied with the floral display in the public gardens, making a brilliant show in the clear, cool air which refreshed the visitors after their journey in the heat of the last few days.

50,000 Visitors Registered.

The delegates began to arrive on Sunday and 14,000 registered Tuesday night. Since sunrise yesterday morning they have poured into the city by the thousands, on special and regular trains and boats. Yesterday morning a second 14,000 registered, and by midnight there were nearly 50,000 Endeavorers in town. It is expected that ten thousand more will register before noon to-day.

Reception of Delegations.

Each delegation, whether from a state or a section of a state, was met at a point 100 miles from Boston by four Endeavorers, two each from the accommodation and reception committees, who greeted them on behalf of the local societies which were to entertain them, canvassed their number, furnished them information about the city, and telegraphed the size of the delegation and the hour of its expected arrival, to the Christian Endeavor booth in the Boston station.

Arrangements Perfect.

On arrival the delegates were met by white-capped "guides," who escorted them to electric cars or led them in a march to the churches in which their headquarters were located. There they were registered, furnished with the neat convention badge and assigned suitable rooms in neighboring houses, which had been canvassed for the purpose. So systematically was the whole matter handled that delegations of several hundred were registered and placed in permanent lodgings within an hour after the arrival of their trains.

Streets Full of Visitors.

During the afternoon the business portion of the city was crowded with bands of Endeavorers, marching with their grips to their headquarters and singing their hymns, or strolling and examining the decorations.

Nineteen Simultaneous Meetings.

The grand convention opened at 7.30 last evening with nineteen simultaneous meetings in Boston, Cambridge and Somerville churches. Among the most important was that at Berkeley temple, at which Rev. George E. Horr, jr., D. D., of Boston, presided, and welcomed the delegates. The subject of the evening, "The Religious Press," was discussed by Rev. William Hayes Ward, D. D., of New York city.

Regilious Press.

Rev. A. E. Dunning, D. D., of Boston, followed upon the relation of the religious press to Christian endeavor. He said that while Christian endeavor had made the Boston secular press religious for one week, the religious press had made the idea of Christrian endeavor news for the world, and then the secular press used it lavishly and generously.

Grand Rally at Jamaica Plain.

Jamaica Plain extended its local greeting to the endeavorers with a grand union rally at the Jamaica Plain Baptist church, Rev. Ralph M. Hunt, pastor, presided. This church, like all others, was profusely and artistically decorated. After a brief praise and prayer service, Rev. Mr. Morgan, of the Jamaica Plain Congregational church, welcomed the visitors. Rev. Elijah Horr, D. D., of Worcester, delivered an address on "A reason for the hope that is in us," speaking of the historical and general proofs of Christianity.

Kennedy got out of bed and chased the negro. The latter made for the stairs. He stumbled when he reached the stairs and fell half way down. Kennedy followed but the thief got out through a window.

She was despondent through sickness. The mother and oldest child are dead and the baby will die.

Dover, N. H., July 11.—A. G. Whittemore, receiver of the defunct Dover national bank, has declared a dividend of 25 per cent., payable in ten days, which, with the one paid in May, makes a total of 85 per cent. He expects to wind up the affairs of the bank by the 1st of January, 1896.

FULLY 100 INJURED

Floor of the Atlantic City Casino Collapsed.

Men, Women and Children Piled on Top of Each Other, Many Broken Bones, Cut and Bruised Heads, But No One Killed Outright—A Social Gathering of Elks.

Atlantic City, N. J., July 11.—A frightful accident terminated the Elk festivities at the Inlet casino last night in which a large number of persons sustained terrible injuries from which some may die. It was 9:30 o'clock when grand exalted ruler of the Buffalo body, Meade D. Deitweiler, of Harrisburg, had finished his address at the opening of the social session of the Elks and was about to introduce James J. Armstrong, of New York, when a cracking sound was heard. A moment later the floor upon which were almost a thousand persons slowly opened and the mass of humanity was precipitated to the first floor, a distance of twenty-five feet.

Piled on Top of Each Other.

Men, women and children were plunged into the hole and upon one another. The cries, shrieks and groans were deafening and the direst confusion reigned. An alarm was immediately sent out and all the physicians in town responded. The work of extricating the injured proceeded rapidly and by 12 o'clock they had all been removed to the hospital or their homes.

Foresaw the Danger.

A more joyous crowd could not have been gathered together before the accident anywhere, but there were several hundred of the people who had noticed the vibration of the floor and left the pavilion fearing that the great weight would lead to its destruction and the consequent injury of the merrymakers. Among these cautious people were a number of members of the Camden lodge. Fearing to create a panic, they quietly approached some members of visiting lodges and discussed with them the advisability of bringing the affair to a close so as to relieve the floor of a portion of the weight.

One Hundred Persons in a Mass.

While they were yet talking the crash came. A portion of the floor, some thirty feet square, located about the middle of the pavilion and near the railing on the board walk side, came tumbling down, bringing along over one hundred people. In a second the electric lights on the second floor were extinguished, but luckily those on the lower floor kept burning long enough to permit some of the panic stricken people to get to the stairway, which remained intact, and reach the board walk. Men, women and children were jammed together, trying to escape by the stairway, while the victims of the crash were screaming for aid to extricate them from the fallen beams and timbers.

Hung Suspended in the Air.

In the meantime the people who were seated in the vicinity of the break found themselves in imminent danger of falling through the hole. Indeed some were obliged to clutch the edge of the floor to keep themselves from going through. Maurice A. Rodgers, ex-president of the senate of the state of New Jersey and a member of the Camden lodge, was seated by the side of his wife in the section that fell. Mrs. Rodgers was precipitated to the ground, sustaining only a nervous shock. Senator Rogers had both hands caught between two beams and hung suspended in the air until released by some one unknown.

List of the Injured.

Among the injured are: C. R. Lombard, of Boston, feet mashed and arm fractured; Ullie Leo, of Camden, internally hurt; George J. Pechlin, of Camden, leg mashed; Charles Folwell, of Camden, left leg broken; James J. Armstrong, exalted ruler of the New York lodge of Elks, internal injuries; Mrs. R. A. Livesley, of East Liverpool, Ohio, leg mashed; Prescot Ackerman, of Mount Holly, N. J., of Jennings band, leg broken; Frederick Laproth, of Camden, of Jennings band, internal injured, probable fatal; J. Melville Janson, of Corncross theatre, Philadelphia, eye cut and leg badly cut; Mrs. Henney, bruised about limbs and teeth knocked out; Mrs. William W. Mines, of Camden, fractured elbow and badly bruised; Frank Gilzman, cornet player, ankle fractured; Genie L. T. Eckman, Mount Holly, N. J., baritone, ankle fractured; Genie L. J. Guist, clarionet player, rib broken; F. Demoud, internally injured; Frank Bolton, eye cut and badly injured; Dr. Erye, of Pocono, Va., seriously bruised and sprain of leg; Miss Golvin, of Allegheny, Pa., head cut and left limb bruised; Leopold Frye, of Philadelphia, leg broken; Mrs. Fleischman, of New York, fractured knee.

Frost in Indiana.

Frankfort, Ind., July 11.—Yesterday morning the crops throughout Clinton county were badly damaged by frost.

the case of the Cornell boat, that the course was "not rowed out."

Fennell Under Doctor's Care.

After the Cornell crew passed the judge's boat they paddled to their boathouse, about a quarter of a mile beyond the finish. A large crowd of their supporters were gathered there and the men were received with cheers. Hager was all right, but Fennell was immediately placed in a doctor's care. He had not fainted, but was merely overcome by exhaustion.

Rowed Against Courtney's Advice.

All sort of stories have been set afloat purporting to give reasons for the failure of the Cornell crew, but the simple fact is that they were not in condition to row, and never would have been allowed to start, had Courtney been able to be about and assert himself. For several days prior to his confinement to his room he contended that two or three of the crew were not in condition, but, incapacitated as he was, he was obliged to take the word of others as to their condition.

FOREST FIRES IN MICHIGAN.

North Muskegon and Vicinity Threatened—Damage to Crops.

Muskegon, Mich., July 11.—The city of North Muskegon and vicinity are threatened by serious forest fires. Farm houses and crops are in danger on all sides, and the farmers have turned out in a body to fight the flames. More than five miles of territory is burning over. Word has reached this city of the burning of Albert Van Zandt's sawmill, a large quantity of logs, shingles and lumber, amounting to several thousand dollars. It is reported that many acres of crops have already been reduced to ashes. Many farm houses cannot escape the flames. Unless rain comes soon, no one can tell what the damage will be.

Spread in All Directions.

Alpena, Mich., July 11.—Forest fires have been raging in the vicinity for the last ten days and much valuable timber has been destroyed. The farm buildings of John Hammond were burned yesterday, spreading the flames in all directions. The air is full of smoke back in the country and it is impossible to see any distance. Most of the streams and wells are dry, and no water is to be had. Telephone wires are down, and it is impossible to get news from the country. It is reported that the buildings on the farm of Representative Cathro at Bolton have been destroyed.

REV. B. H. PHILLIPS DEAD.

He Was Recently Pricked with a Pin and Bloodpoison Followed.

Bethlehem, Pa., July 11.—Rev. B. H. Phillips of Durham, aged 31 years, died yesterday at St. Luke's hospital of bloodpoisoning. Six weeks ago Miss Cope, one of his parishioners, for a jest pricked him with a hat pin in the leg. Bloodpoisoning followed and to save his life the leg was amputated on Saturday, but he failed to survive the ordeal. The young woman, whose thoughtless act ended in the preacher's death, is almost crazed with grief. The deceased was a graduate of Ursinus college, and was professor of mathematics there for two years. He was one of the best known reformed clergymen in eastern Pennsylvania.

THE ILLINOIS EXTRA SESSION.

Selection of a New Speaker for the House—Gov. Altgeld Disregarded.

Springfield, Ill., July 11.—In spite of the fact that Gov. Altgeld requested the democrats of the house to refrain from nominating ex-Speaker Crafts for the speakership they did it. It was not done without the protest of twenty-six out of sixty-one representatives on the minority side, however. Gov. Altgeld's followers say, with a good deal of acrimony, that under no circumstances will they recognize Crafts as the minority leader. Secretary of State Hinrichsen, chairman of the democratic state committee, is with Crafts, and he, it is said, will use the machinery of the state organization to turn the so-called bolters.

THREE DAYS' BATTLE IN CUBA.

The Spanish General, of Course, Reports a Victory.

Santiago de Cuba, July 11.—Brigadier General Gasco, commanding the Spanish troops at Cristo, reports having had a three days' battle with the insurgents at Sierra Maestra, in this provience, capturing a quantity of arms and provisions. No details of the fighting have yet been received.

For Work at the Navy Yard.

Washington, July 11.—Secretary Herbert has advertised for proposals for the construction of the quay wall inside of Whitney basin at the New York navy yard, for which an appropriation of $25,000 is available, and for the reconstruction of the building No. 115 at the same yard at the estimated cost of $39,970.

Lawyer Kills a Preacher.

Bedford, Ind., July 11.—W. H. Colvin, a lawyer, shot and killed the Rev. Josiah Stevens, at Indian Springs station yesterday. Stevens, it is said, first drew his revolver, whereupon Colvin drew a knife and retreated to his home. He returned with a revolver and shot Stevens five times in the breast, and then escaped.

TWO OF THE MEN ILL

Cornell Raced Against the Advice of Courtney.

Fennell May Be Seriously Injured—Struck by the Handle of His Oar in the Groin—Suffering Great Pain and Frequent Spasms—Mr. Francis Says They Were Fairly Beaten.

Henley-on-Thames, July 11.—That the rumors which were current for several days on both sides of the Atlantic that several members of the Cornell crew were ill as a result of the change of water and climate and were in no condition to enter races was proved only too true yesterday when they suffered such a decided defeat.

Fennell in Bad Shape.

In an interview Mr. Francis, the manager of the Cornell crew, said, "I regret to say that Fennell is in bad condition. He caught a crab at the three-quarter mile post, and the handle of his oar struck him in the side, inflicting an injury, the extent of which cannot yet be determined. The poor fellow was doubled up with pain, which was so intense that it was impossible for him to recover as quickly as the rest of the crew. Three times he lost the stroke completely, thereby falling into the arms of Freeborn, who pushed him back each time. Despite the pain he was suffering he pluckily rowed the best he could to the finish.

His Condition Very Serious.

"I lifted him from the boat and carried him to the dressing room of our boathouse, where a physician was immediately summoned. Fennell was then taken to Underwood's house, our headquarters, and put to bed. His pain increased and was accompanied by frequent spasms. Within half an hour the physician was recalled and he gave Fennell morphine. I fear his injury is really serious. There is a great, dark bruise on the groin where the oar struck him. We constantly apply hot fomentings to it."

Fairly Beaten.

Mr. Francis reiterates his statement that the Cornell boys had been beaten fairly, and added: "The Trinity Hall crew is a very good one. I do not wish to minimize their victory. That every boat must abide by its own accidents is the rule the world over. It would be unsportsmanlike to attempt to excuse our defeat on the ground of the accident. Of course we regret to have our friends at home learn that our trip has not been a success, but all cannot win."

May Never Row Again.

Mr. Francis said in conclusion: "The crew will go out of training immediately in view of Fennell's injury. It is quite out of the question that he will row again this year, if ever. Neither of our two starboard substitutes can properly fill his place. The crew will probably sail for home on the steamer St. Louis, which leaves Southampton on July 27.

Tuesday's Fiasco.

The interest in the day's programme seemed to be centered in the one heat between Cornell and Trinity Hall. After the heat between the eights of New College and Eton College, the Cornell and Trinity Hall crews got ready for their contest. The interest in this heat was sharpened by the universal comment upon Tuesday's fiasco in the heat match between Cornell and Leanier, wherein Leanier got the worst of it.

Cornell Leads.

There was no mistake in sending the crews off yesterday. On the word "go!" Cornell went off, pulling twenty-four strokes for the first half minute and forty-six for the minute. Trinity Hall rowed only twenty-one strokes for the half minute and forty-two for the minute. Cornell immediately took a slight lead and at the end of the first furlong was only a few feet to the good. They went well and steadily in their own style, a style that has been very widely commented upon here. The style of the Trinity crew was a great contrast to that of the Americans. Their stroke was longer. Their body form was not so good, though they swung much more. At the upper end of Temple island Cornell was still the same distance in front. Here the cheering for Trinity Hall was enthusiastic but it did not enable the men of that crew, to wrest the advantage from the Cornell boys.

Cornell Falling Back.

At the half-mile distance mark the Cornell men had managed to gain a lead of half a length and it seemed as though they would win without doubt, if they could stand the pace which they were as apparently able to do as the Trinity's. But suddenly there came a change. Trinity Hall began slowly but surely to gain on the American boat, and by the time they had reached the three-quarter of a mile mark they had knocked off nearly half their opponents' lead. This pace was kept up at the same stroke and at Bushey gate, a furlong beyond the three-quarter mark, they had secured the lead.

Went All to Pieces.

About a hundred yards above a point opposite the Isthmian Boat club's house Trinity was about three-quarters of a length ahead, and the men were greeted with frantic cheers as they continued up the course. Hitherto there had been no sign of faltering on the part of the Cornells. But suddenly there came a collapse as when a perfect piece of machinery breaks down, goes all to pieces and leaves not a part that is of use. The blades of the Cornell oars went flying about in all directions, suggesting the antics of an attenuated windmill on a spree. Hager, No. 3, and Fennell, No. 5, almost at the same time missed the water and nearly fell out of the boat. The rest of the crew stopped almost immediately, being completely exhausted and clearly outrowed.

Pace Too Swift for Cornell.

The course had been too strong and the pace too swift for the short stroke of the Cornell men, and they had demonstrated that their style of arm work alone was killing, inasmuch as it had used up the wind and strength of its exponents. In the meantime Trinity kept on without the slightest sign of weakening for the remaing three hundred yards of the course, winning by about seven lengths. The Trinity crew received a tremendous ovation as they passed the winning post. The judges decided, in Something new. A bicycle factory has failed.

Mrs. Shultise, of Manning avenue, Plainfield, is visiting in this city.—New Brunswick Home News.

Ex-Senator John W. Griggs is confident. And so are the others. But there can be but one winner.

The grand lodge of Elks were rejoicing over the healing of the breach in their organization when the building collapsed and sorrow was precipitated.

A Flemington farmer raised high jinks with the town assessor yesterday when he pulled out a bunch of the official's whiskers because he taxed his property too high.

The sneers of the English boat winners at the defeated Americans yesterday, is not the kind of a reception the exponents of Johnnie Bull will receive when they contest in this country.

Judge Wilson, of Cincinnati, says that any man that will give all his salary to his wife is a fool. Quite true. But the man who will take all the salary of his wife is a villain and a coward.

The New York World has for some years berated Tammany Hall because they did not enforce the laws, and now they are criticising Commissioner Roosevelt because he does. Is The World satisfied with anything?

The announcement that Bishop Potter, of New York, will spend his vacation from his regular church duties in working among the poorer classes of the slums of the metropolis, instead of sniffing ocean breezes and bowing to crowned heads, constrains one to say "He is the right kind of a man."

No organization could be effected last night of the new Elizabeth Board of Education, which is controlled by the Republicans. The caucus of the majority party settled on Commissioner George P. Matthews for president, and Joseph D. Lowden for secretary, but owing to the absence of Republican Commissioners Sours and Servis nothing could be done.

The insinuation in the Courier-News last night that Mayor Gilbert was not working for the best interests of Plainfield, but instead was catering to capitalists at the expense of taxpayers, is the most slanderous and vicious libel of the many lying tirades which the editor of that paper has directed against the present administration. Mayor Gilbert is a man of too high character and principle to abuse the trust which the people have reposed in him.

The Courier-News of yesterday attacks the action of the Common Council in awarding the $100,000 sewer bonds to Harvey Fisk's Sons at four per cent., and asserts that four per cent. is a high rate of interest to pay for the loan. The editorial avers that money can be borrowed in Wall street for one and a half per cent., but an instance of this is not shown, nor can it be on a loan of $100,000 or anywhere near that amount. The fact of the matter is that the city made as good terms as can be made. That this is true is proven by the following which appeared in the New York Sun this morning:

The American Tract Society is negotiating a mortgage of $1,250,000 on its new building at the corner of Nassau and Spruce streets. The New York Life Insurance Company has offered to advance the money at 4½ per cent.

The security which the American Tract Society have to offer is just as "gilt edge" as the city of Plainfield is, and still the New York Life Insurance Company, who have millions of dollars to loan, would make the interest ½ per cent larger on a loan twelve times greater than the sewer bonds awarded to Messrs. Fisk.

SEWER TRENCH CAVEIN.

An Italian Laborer Has His Shoulder Injured by a Cave-in.

A gang of laborers were working as usual on the sewer trench at West Second and New streets, when suddenly the side of the trench gave way, and the mass of earth precipitated on the workmen beneath. Andrew Roberts, an Italian, had his shoulder badly disabled, but another man, whose name is said to be Dougherty, was slightly injured. Roberts was taken to the hospital.

Unknown to the laborers, there was a manhole only a short distance off, and when they approched too close the earth caved in. No sheathing or any other kind of protection was made to keep back the soil.

Took His Vacation.

Yesterday morning when Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., of East Second street, went to look after his pony, he found that during the night the animal had "vamoosed the ranch." The door was found wide open, but as it had not been locked the pony could have easily pushed it open, but the one suspicious circumstance was that the halter was not broken but untied.

One of the neighbors reported having seen the pony running down the street at full gallop at about half-past five yesterday morning.

So far nothing has been heard of the missing animal.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

UNGRATIFIED DESIRE.

He Failed to Meet the New Yorker He Was Most Anxious to See.

One day on a Broadway car I took a seat beside an old chap whose every look told of Uncle Josh and haystacks, and I was scarcely down before I noticed that he was eyeing me very sharply. By and by he put his hand up to his mouth and whispered behind it:

"Say! I want to ask ye sunthin!"

"All right."

"Won't git mad and hit me on the nose?"

"Certainly not."

"Wall, I want to ask if you're a pickpocket."

"Why do you ask?"

"Because I'm allus readin' about 'em, and afore I left home I told the old woman I was goin' to keep my eyes open an l try and ketch onto one."

"You want to see what he looks like?"

"That's it—that's it."

"Well, I'm sorry to disappoint you, but I'm no pickpocket."

"Pshaw, but I jest hoped you was!" he exclaimed, in disappointe l tones. "When you came in the door I said to myself that you was a reg'lar pickpocket and I'd better take a good look at yon. It's not your fault, of course, but I kinder felt put out about it."

"If I were a pickpocket it would be an easy matter to get that watch of yours."

"Would it!" he chuckled. "Wall, mebbe so, but the chain is tied to my pocket with a string and the watch is in my left bootleg. I've got an old wallet here, but she's empty, and them $27 is down in t'other bootleg with my jackknife and five nickels. Say, it's too blamed bad you hain't a pickpocket. I jest wanted ye to fumble around for about half an hour, and then I was goin' to tickle ye in the ribs and ha! ha! ha! and ask if yer mother knew ye was out to-day and if ye smelt anythin' like new-mown hay around here!"—Detroit Free Press.

Sunday Homes.

A novel co-operative system has lately been started among the carpenters and painters of San Francisco through which the individual workmen are becoming owners of their own homes without any cost for construction.

As soon as any member of the local organization has saved enough money to buy a lot and the necessary lumber all his fellow workmen turn to the next Sunday and build the house for him. In one of the suburban additions of the city a little colony of these "Sunday homes" has already grown up. The houses are not pretentious, but are solidly built and comfortable. There are ten houses in this colony that have been thus built by the carpenters and painters for their fellow workmen, and it is expected that during this summer as many more will be put up at similar Sunday "building bees."

But for this helpful system the workmen would probably never be able to own homes, while through it almost every industrious man may have a house of his own

A NIGHT OF THE TROLLEY.

Exciting Time in Middlesex County in Which the Railway Wins.

The New Brunswick Traction company, who propose to build a line to connect the different towns in Middlesex county, were granted a franchise by the Millville borough at nine o'clock last night. Samuel Gordon who owns property along the route opposed the trolley and threatened to secure an injunction. Within an hour after the ordinance was adopted the Company had a small army of men at work laying track and stringing wires. By daylight several hundred feet had been laid in front of Gordon's property. The entire railroad will be completed before the Court of Chancery can issue the restraining order. With the exception of Gordon, the sentiment of the public are with the Company.

An Ordinance for the laying out and opening of Watchung avenue, from the northwesterly side line of East Front street to the city line in Green Brook.

Whereas, The Common Council have judged and do hereby judge that the public good requires that Watchung avenue should be laid out and opened between the points named in the title to this ordinance, therefore

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. That a public street to be known as Watchung avenue be and the same is hereby ordered laid out and opened in said city as hereinafter specified, that is to say: The centre line of said street shall begin at a point in the northwesterly side line of East Front street as now laid out and opened, said point being distant thirty-two and five one hundredths (32.05) feet in a course of north 46 degrees and 17 minutes west from an iron monument being the intersection of centre lines of said East Front street and Watchung avenue as now laid out and opened, and running thence in a magnetic course of north 46 degrees and 17 minutes west, a distance of three hundred and eighty-five feet over lands of the Young Men's Christian Association and Hannah Durlach, to a point in the centre line of Green Brook, said point being also in the city and county line, and there to end, and said street shall be sixty feet in width, that is to say, thirty feet on each side of said centre line.

Said center line and also the side lines of said street are delineated on a certain map filed with the City Clerk July 1, 1895, entitled "Map showing proposed extension of Watchung avenue from Front street to Greenbrook, Plainfield, N. The lands, real estate and appurtenances to be taken for the laying out and opening of said Watchung avenue on the Northeasterly side of said center line of said proposed street from the Northwesterly side-line of East Front street to the City line Green Brook, are all those lands, real estate and appurtenances included between said center line and a line thirty feet distant therefrom and parallel therewith and includes all that part of the land, real estate and appurtenances of Hannah Durlach which lies within said lines.

The lands, real estate and appurtenances to be taken for the laying out and opening of said Watchung avenue on the southwesterly side of said center line of said proposed street from the northwesterly side-line of East Front street to the City line in Green Brook, are all those lands, real estate and appurtenances included between said center line and a line thirty feet distant therefrom and parallel therewith, and includes all that part of the land, real estate and appurtenances of Hannah Durlach and the Young Men's Christian Association which lie within said lines.

The lands, real estate and appurtenances to be taken and the lines of the proposed street as the same is hereinbefore ordered to be laid out and opened, are shown on a map on file with the City Clerk, entitled "Map showing proposed extension of Watchung avenue from Front street to Green Brook, Plainfield, N. THE EXPLOITS OF BRIGADIER GERARD.

CHAPTER V.

"These ruffians have seized her. They will kill her," I cried.

Duroc sprang down with the inarticulate shouts of one whose reason had left him. He struck the door so frantically with his naked hand that he left a blotch of blood with every blow.

"Here is the key," I shouted, picking one from the floor. "She must have thrown it in at the instant that she was torn away."

My companion snatched it from me with a shriek of joy. A moment later he dashed it down on the boards. It was so small that it was lost in the enormous lock. Duroc sank upon one of the boxes with his head between his hands. He sobbed in his despair. I could have sobbed, too, when I thought of the woman and how helpless we were to save her.

But I am not so easily baffled. After all, this key must have been sent to us for a purpose. The lady could not bring us that of the door because this murderous stepfather of hers would most certainly have it in his pocket. Yet this other key must have a meaning, or why should she risk her life to place it in our hands. It would say little for our wits if we could not find out what that meaning might be.

I set to work moving all the cases out from the wall, and Duroc, gaining new hope from my energy, helped me with all his strength. It was no light task, for many of them were large and heavy. On we went, working like maniacs, slinging barrels and cheeses and boxes pell-mell into the middle of the room. At last there only remained one huge barrel of vodki, which stood in the corner. With our united strength we rolled it out and there was a little, low wooden door in the wainscot behind it. The key fitted, and with a cry of delight we saw it swing open before us. With the lamp in my hand I squeezed my way in, followed by my companion.

We were in the powder magazine of the castle—a rough-walled cellar, with barrels all around it, and one with the top staved in in the center. The powder from it lay in a black heap on the floor. Beyond there was another door, but it was locked.

"We are no better off than before," cried Duroc. "We have no key."

"We have a dozen," I cried.

"Where?"

"I pointed to the line of powder barrels.

"You would blow this door open?"

"Precisely."

"But you would explode the magazine."

It was true, but I was not at the end of my resources.

"We shall blow open the storeroom door," I cried.

I ran back and seized a tin box which had been filled with candles. It was about the size of my bushy—large enough to hold several pounds of powder. Duroc filled it while I cut off the end of a candle. When we had finished it would have puzzled a colonel of engineers to make a better petard. I put three cheeses on top of each other and placed it above them so as to lean against the lock. Then we lit our candle-end and ran for shelter, shutting the door of the magazine behind us.

It was no joke, my friends, to lie among all those tons of powder, with the knowledge that if the flame of the explosion should penetrate through one thin door our blackened limbs would be shot higher than the castle keep. Who could have believed that a half-inch of candle could take so long to burn? My ears were straining all the time for the thudding of the hoofs of the Cossacks who were coming to destroy us. I had almost made up my mind that the candle must have gone out when there was a smack like a bursting bomb. Our door flew to bits, and pieces of cheese with a shower of turnips, apples and splinters of cases were shot in among us. As we rushed out we had to stagger through an impenetrable smoke, with all sorts of debris beneath our feet, but there was a glimmering square where the dark door had been. The petard had done its work.

In fact, it had done more for us than we had ventured to hope. It had shattered jailers as well as jail. The first thing that I saw as I came out was a man with a butcher's ax in his hand, lying flat on his back with a gaping wound across his forehead. The second was a huge dog with two of its legs broken twisting in agony upon the floor. As it reared itself I saw the broken ends flapping like flails. At the same instant I heard a cry, and there was Duroc thrown against the wall with the other hound's teeth in his throat. He pushed it off with his left hand, while again and again he passed his sabre through its body, but it was not until I blew out its brains with my pistol that the iron jaws relaxed and the fierce, bloodshot eyes were glazed in death.

There was no time for us to pause. A woman's scream from in front—a scream of mortal terror that told us even now we might be too late.

There were two other men in the hall, but they cowered away from our drawn swords and furious faces.

The blood was streaming from Duroc's neck and dyeing the gray fur of his pelisse. Such was the lad's fire, however, that he shot in front of me, and it was only over his shoulder that I caught a glimpse of the scene as we rushed into the chamber in which we had first seen the master of the Castle of Gloom.

The Baron was standing in the middle of the room, with his tangled mane bristling like an angry lion. He was, as I have said, a huge man, with enormous shoulders, and as he stood there with his face flushed with rage and his sword advanced I could not but think that in spite of all his villainies he had a proper figure for a grenadier. The lady lay cowering in a chair behind him. A weal across one of her white arms and a dog whip upon the floor were enough to show that our escape had hardly been in time to save her from his brutality. He gave a howl like a wolf as we broke in, and was upon us in an instant, hacking and driving with a curse at every blow.

I have already said that the room gave no space for swordsmanship. My young companion was in front of me in the narrow passage between the table and the wall, so that I could only look on without being able to aid him. The lad knew something of his weapon, and was as fierce and active as a wildcat, but in so narrow space the weight and strength of the giant gave him the advantage. Besides, he was an admirable swordsman. His parade and reposte were as quick as lightning. Twice he touched Duroc upon the shoulder, and then as the lad slipped on a lunge he whirled in his sword to finish him before he could recover his feet. I was quicker than he, however, and took the cut upon the pommel of my sabre.

"Excuse me," said I, "but you have still to deal with Etienne Gerard."

He drew back and leaned against the tapestry covered wall, breathing in little hoarse gasps, for his foul living was against him.

"Take your breath," said I. "I will await your convenience."

"You have no cause of quarrel against me," he panted.

"I owe you some little attention," said I, "for having shut me up in your storeroom. Besides, if all others were wanting, I see cause enough upon that lady's arm."

"Have your way, then," he snarled, and leaped at me like a madman. For a minute I saw only the blazing blue eyes, and the red glazed point which stabbed and stabbed, rasping off to right or to left, and yet ever back at my throat and my breast. I had never thought that such good sword play was to be found at Paris in the days of the revolution. I do not suppose that in all my little affairs I have met six men who had a better knowledge of their weapon. But he knew that I was his master. He read death in my eyes, and I could read that he read it. The flush died from his face. His breath came in shorter and thicker gasps. Yet he fought on, even after the final thrust had come, and died still hacking and cursing with foul cries upon his lips and his blood clotting upon his orange beard. I who speak to you have seen so many battles that my old memory can scarce contain their names, and yet of all the terrible sights which these eyes have rested upon there is none I care to think of less than that strange beard with the crimson stain in the center, from which I had drawn my sword point.

It was only afterwards that I had time to think of all this. His monstrous body had hardly crashed down upon the floor before the woman in the corner sprank to her feet, clapping her hands together and screaming out in her delight. For my part I was disgusted to see a woman take delight in such a deed of blood, and I gave no thought of the terrible wrongs which must have befallen her before she could so far forget the gentleness of her sex. It was on my tongue to tell her sharply to be silent when a strange choking smell took the breath from my nostrils, and a sudden yellow glare brought out the figures of the faded hangings.

"Duroc, Duroc," I shouted, tugging at his shoulder. "The castle is on fire."

But the boy lay senseless upon the ground, exhausted by his wounds. I rushed out into the hall to see whence the danger came. It was our explosion which had set a light to the dry framework of the door. Inside the storeroom some of the boxes were already blazing. I glanced in, and as I did so my blood was turned to water by the sight of the powder barrels beyond and of the loose heap on the floor. It might be seconds, it could not be more than minutes, before the flames would be at the edge of it. These eyes would be closed in death, my friends, before they cease to see those crawling lines of fire and the black heap beyond.

YET HE FOUGHT ON EVEN AFTER THE FINAL THRUST HAD COME.

How little I can remember of what followed. Vaguely I can recall how I rushed into the chamber of death, how I seized Duroc by one limp hand and dragged him down the hall, the woman keeping pace with me and pulling at the other arm. Out of the gateway we rushed, and on down the snow-covered path until we were on the fringe of the fir forest. It was at that moment that I heard a crash behind me, and glancing around saw a great spout of fire shoot up into the wintry sky. An instant later there came a second crash, far louder than the first, and I saw the fir trees and the stars whirling round me and I fell unconscious across the body of my comrade.

It was some weeks before I came to myself in the post house of Arensdorf, and longer still before I could be told all that had befallen me. It was Duroc, already able to go soldiering, who came to my bedside and gave me an account of it. He it was who told me how a piece of timber had struck me on the head and had laid me almost dead upon the ground. From him, too, I learned how the Polish girl had run to Arensdorf, how she had roused our hussars, and how she had only just brought them back in time to save us from the spears of the Cossacks, who had been summoned from their bivouac by that same black-hearted secretary whom we had seen galloping so swiftly over the snow. As to the brave lady who had twice saved our lives, I could not learn very much about her at that moment from Duroc, but when I chanced to meet him in Paris two years later after the campaign of Wagram, I was not very much surprised to find that I needed no introduction to his bride, and that by the queer turns of fortune he had himself, had he chosen to use it, that very name and title of the Baron Straubenthal, which showed him to be the owner of the blackened ruins of the Castle of Gloom.

PRODIGAL RESCUE.

To judge by his haggard looks and the monotonous way in which he was pacing up and down the room the Hon. Robert Spenceley was evidently under the influence of a serious mental depression, when his particular chum, Tom Langton, favored him with a morning call.

"Halloa! What's up, Bob? By Jove, you are looking seedy."

The Hon. Robert stopped in his purposeless walk, languidly extended his arm, lightly touched the tips of his friend's fingers and heaved a deep and bitter sigh.

"Are you ill, chappie, or has the peerless, patrician Penelope"—

"Sit down, Tom. The fact is, I've been a fool."

"And how did you discover it?"

"Well, as you know, I've been mixed up a bit with Lord Temptown and his set. Jolly fellows, but inclined to go the pace a bit too fast. Hang me if I can say 'No' to anything that they propose, and the upshot of it all is that in two nights I have lost upward of £3,000 playing cards at the Junios Aborigines—at least, that's the amount they hold my I O U's for."

"What confoundedly bad luck you must have had!"

"I posted down to the family nest yesterday, laid the whole affair before the governor and vowed that I would never touch a card again if he would help me out of this scrape."

"And has he refused?"

"Point blank. He reminded me that on several occasions he had paid off my legitimate debts—small in comparison to this one—but he considered playing cards for high stakes so outrageously foolish that he could not and would not help me. I told him they were debts of honor, but he said it was a most dishonorable way either of making or getting rid of money.

"In conclusion, he told me that as it was most desirable that I should break off from this connection he proposed to reduce my allowance to £500 for one year, during which time I am to travel and see as much of the world as I can on a paltry £10 a week."

"And what did you say?"

"What could I say? I have no choice in the matter. I have made up my mind that I will not go to the money-lenders, and so I must get these fellows to wait until I can redeem my paper."

"Look here, old chap, I'll come with you for a time, and we'll go in for a walking tour."

"Tom, you are a brick. Let us start this week."

* * * * *

Three months had elapsed since Robert Spenceley's departure, during which period frequent communications—each bearing expressions of regret for the past and promises for the future—kept Lord Methwick fully acquainted with his son's doings. The absent one seemed to be thoroughly enjoying himself, judging from his graphic descriptions of the scenery and incidents of the walking tour. Then the letters ceased altogether.

Several times lately the doubt had arisen in Lord Methwick's mind as to whether he had not been too severe, remembering that his son had hitherto borne an irreproachable character, evincing deep dislike to all the worst forms of dissipation, and there was no doubt that this unfortunate affair at the Junior Aborigines was not the result of inherent or newly aquired viciousness, but rather brought about by a false position, in which, surrounded by companions of wealth and repute, he had been led away by the excitement and his inability to say "No."

Now that no news came from him, his father's resolution rapidly gave way under the disquieting entreaties of his mother, until at last his recall was decided upon so soon as the next intimation of his address should arrive. The next letter did disclose his whereabouts, and this was the—thunderbolt:

"Most Illustrious Signor—The son of your Excellency is doing us the honor to condescend our humble hospitality to partake and to us your address given so that we may impart his well being. He now his departure desires, but we would that your illustrious Excellency to us sending the sum of pounds 4,000, Englische that we may be solaced for his loss." Then followed an address to which a communication was to be sent, and the missive concluded: "Any information to the gendarmes will be on the on of your Excellency."

(Signed) "GIUSEPPE."

Giuseppe! The most noted and bloodthirsty brigand of modern times, about whose cruelties and tortures so many harrowing tales were told by travelers, and upon whose head a heavy price had been set long ago.

Lady Meehwick piteously besought her husband to send the money at once.

"They will kill my darling boy, and you—you—you will have him sent to his death!"

Her daughters, the honorable Agatha, Nadine and Clovis, added their agonized entreaties; indeed, so carried away were they by their feelings that they actually offered to go without new hats and suits for the next twelve months, in order to contribute to the ransom money. But his lordship did not believe in giving way at once. Doubtless a lesser sum would be accepted, and while negotiations were in progress and there was a chance of the ransom being ultimately paid, he did not think his son would be in any danger.

So he sent an offer of £2,000. The reply to this was a curt refusal, and a postscript added in Robert Spencely's handwriting was:

"Father, send soon; feel sure they will not take less."

But still Lord Methwick would not give in without another effort to reduce the amount, and he increased his offer to £3,500.

The day came when Giuseppe's reply was due, but it did not arrive, and pent-up anxiety caused his Lordship two sleepless nights and two miserable, irritable days. On the third morning, among the contents of the mailbag, was a small parcel, the handwriting of the address of which was immediately recognized.

With trembling fingers Lord Methwick tore open the package, and there lay disclosed the bold brigand's staggering reply—a cardboard box containing a man's ear packed in sawdust, and inside the lid these words were scrawled:

"No less than 4,000. Part of his Excellency is sent free so that he may hear you decide which was final."

In after years that day always remained impressed with startling vividness on his Lordship's memory. What with his wife's continual fainting fits, his three daughters in consecutive hysterics, their conscious intervals being employed in upbraiding him in such severe terms that one would never be able to hear both sides; the horrid possibility of getting the wanderer back for nothing—a piece at a time—and the fear that at that moment further tortures might be in course of infliction—he often marveled, not only that he survived it, but that reason did not altogether foresake her tottering throne.

And the climax was reached when, in the softening shades of twilight, Lady Methwick and her three daughters, dressed in black, went in solemn procession to a distant part of the grounds, where, beside a rippling stream and beneath a spreading tree, the gardener had already dug a grave. There, with fresh bursts of tears and passionate sobs, the box of sawdust with its precious freight was solemnly buried, and a cairn built over and about its resting place.

The outgoing evening mail carried two letters, one to the brigands agreeing to their terms and the other to a friend of the family, who happened to be a consul in the near neighborhood, inclosing a draft for £4,000, and begging him to put himself in instant communication with Giuseppe and obtain the captive's release.

The consul did as he was desired, and in compliance with instructions from the robber band, who were evidently taking every precaution against being trapped, proceeded alone one evening, carrying a parcel of 4,000 sovereigns to an indicated spot on the outskirts of a forest. Here he was met by a sun-browned, black-bearded giant, picturesquely attired in his native dress, who carried a rifle, while a couple of revolvers and a poniard adorned his sash. Motioning the consul to follow him, he proceeded but a few paces in the forest, then halted and blew a long, low, peculiar whistle on his fingers.

Approaching footsteps were immediately heard, and there emerged from among the trees the whilom prisoner, alone. As he ranged up to the side of his deliverer, the gold was handed over, carefully counted, and then, with a low bow, the robber turned on his heel, at once disappeared, without uttering a word, and then the consul and his purchase were free to depart.

Methwick Hall was ablaze with light on the evening of the heir's return to his ancestral home. The female portion of the family had spent the day in alternately laughing and crying for joy, and were now in a state of intense excitement, anxiously awaiting the return of the carriage from the station. Presently the sound of wheels was heard drawing up to the door, and mother and sisters rushed out, fell upon Robert, hugged him and kissed him, and half dragged, half carried him into the house but it was not until after they had been some time assembled in the library that there flashed across their minds the remembrance of that horror that lay buried beside the stream. His mother first made the discovery.

"Why, Robert, you have two ears!"

"Two ears, mother! Have I not always had two?"

"But we buried one of them."

The Hon. Robert was evidently in the dark, and when they explained, he declared (truthfully) that he knew nothing about it. As a word-painter he proved a decided failure, considering the adventures which they expected him to recount. He had nothing to relate, simply monotony waiting for the ransom, and, no matter how they plied him with questions, he could tell them nothing of the doings of the gang, for he said he never saw any of them except the one who had him in charge.

A few days after his return, pleading the necessity of a visit to a West End tailor, he traveled to London, after receiving strict injunctions and giving a promise to shun his old haunts and companions. Arrived in town, he at once proceeded to Tom Langdon's chambers, and his first words to his chum were:

"I say, Tom, what about that ear, and why wasn't I told of it?"

"Well, I thought you might object, and as it was desirable to bring matters to a climax I got it from the dissecting room at the hospital through a student."

"It took me quite by surprise when they accused me of having two ears, and told me they had buried one of them. But how about the money?"

"I have told the fellows that you have negotiated a loan and empowered me to pay your debts. Here are the I O U's that I have bought up, and the total amount is about £2,996. The remaining £1,004——"

"You will please keep for yourself as arranged, for the double purpose of paying you for your trouble and burying your perpetual silence."

"Thanks, old chap. I will be silent as the grave: but, I say, I had a difficulty in keeping silence when we had Her Majesty's Consul in the forest. I never wanted to laugh so much before."—London Tit-Bits.

ARTESIAN WELL FISHING.

Curious Specimens Caught on a Hook in the Bowels of Indiana.

Thomas Mould and Editor E. L. Roys, of Goshen, are the heroes of a fishing story beside which the stories of ordinary fisherman sink into insignificance. Both are known as ardent devotees of Izaak Walton, and whenever their business permits they are usually found in pursuit of the gamey black bass or the voracious pickerel. On Saturday they visited Glenmere together. The fish were not biting with any enthusiasm and about 4 o'clock they started for home.

At Howell's condensery they stopped to talk with some workmen who were repairing the pump at the artesian well. It will be remembered by readers of this paper that at the time this well was sunk an account was given of the striking of a subterranean stream at the depth of nearly 300 feet, the volume of which could not be ascertained except that soundings showed it to be of considerable depth. The stream and its probable size were the subjects of discussion among the little group at the well, and somebody wondered if it contained any fish.

A bright idea occurred to Messrs. Mould and Roys. Each had in his basket a long trolling line, and by uniting them a line long enough to reach easily to the bottom of the well was formed. Amid the good natured "jollying" of the bystanders the lines were rigged and a hook attached. It was baited with a big "night walker" fishworm and lowered 298 feet through the six inch hole. The distance had been carefully measured off on the line, to which a heavy sinker had been attached, and the hook fastened a short distance above to a stout piece of line. Everybody laughed except Mr. Roys as Mr. Mould carefully lowered the line and waited anxiously for the little tug at the bait which brings joy to the heart of the fisherman.

After a few minutes the expression on Tom's face became one of rapt attention. "I believe I've got a bite," he said. A moment later he began to pull in the line rapidly hand over hand. "I've got something," he said, and as everybody began to gather about the well he drew out a fish. It was about half a pound in weight and of the eyeless species which are sometimes found in the waters of caverns. The fish was nearly a foot long, shaped something like a perch, and its struggles as it lay upon the ground showed that it was game to the backbone. Unlike fish which dwell in waters on the earth's surface and which have dark backs and light colored or white bellies, this fish was of a uniform color of light gray. It had very small scales, and where the eyes might be expected to exist there were slight indentations as of rudimentary eyes.

When the excitement attending the capture had died away the hook was baited again and the line lowered. Editor Roys took charge this time, and, after waiting for about ten minutes, he drew to the surface another of the fish, a trifle larger than the first one. Five fish were caught altogether, the largest of which weighed a blump pound and a half. One fish was brought part of the way to the top, but loosened itself from the hook and escaped. Mr. Mould, who had hold of the line at the time, says it was the largest by far of any that fastened themselves on the hook, and he is positive that the reason he was unable to land the fish was that it was too big to pass through the well, which is only six inches in diameter.

The singular appearance of these fish and the remarkable manner in which they were captured made them objects of curiosity to the persons to whom they were shown. Reference to the encyclopedia shows that these fish are remarkable, aside from their appearance, in that they are viviparous, bringing forth their young alive and not depositing eggs, after the manner of most other fish. They have rudiments of eyes, but no optic nerve, and are, therefore, incapable of being affected by the most intense light. Those who tasted them say they are of excellent flavor, but rather too plentifully supplied with bones.—Goshen Republican.

Last June Dick Crawford brought his twelve-months-old child, suffering from infantile diarrhœa, to me. It had been weaned at four months old and had always been sickly. I gave it the usual treatment in such cases—but without benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born, or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25 cent size had been used a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny constitution disappeared, and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by this remedy. J. T. Marlow, M. D., Tamaroa, Ill. W. H. Nelson, who is in the drug business at Kingville, Mo., has so much confidence in Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy that he warrants every bottle and offers to refund the money to any customer who is not satisfied after using it. Mr. Nelson takes no risk in doing this because the remedy is a certain cure for the diseases for which it is intended, and he knows it. It is for sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North Avenues. Chamberlain's is the best of all. Vincent S. Barkl, of Danbury, Iowa, has used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy whenever in need of a medicine for coughs and colds, for the past five years and says: "It always helps me out. If anyone asks me what kind of cough medicine I use, I reply, Chamberlain's, that is the best of all. 25 and 50c. bottles for sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North Avenues, T. S. A horse kicked H. S. Shafer, of the Freemyer House, Middleburg, N. Y., on the knee, which laid him up in bed and caused the knee joint to become stiff. A friend recommended him to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which he did, and in two days was able to be around. Mr. Shafer has recommended it to many others and says it is excellent for any kind of a bruise or sprain. This same remedy is also famous for its cures of rheumatism. For sale by Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

It May Do as Much For You.

Mr. Fred Miller of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a Severe Kidney trouble for many years, with severe pains in his back and also that his bladder was affected. He tried many so-called Kidney cures but without any good result. About a year ago he began use of Electric Bitters and found relief at once. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to cure all Kidney and Liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c for large bottle, at L. W. RUN DOWN BY A ROAD HOG.

FRED BIRD KNOCKED OFF HIS BICYCLE AND HURT.

Was One of the Crescent Wheelmen Party to Asbury Park—Accident Occurred at Long Branch.

A serious accident happened to Fred W. Bird yesterday in riding his wheel to Asbury Park. In the party were G. O. Stevens, M. A. Havens, Frank Havens, W. J. Stephenson, F. A. Pope, T. J. Carey, Arthur Mumford, Charles Lister, J. F. Buckle and F. W. Bird.

They were riding through Long Branch on the asphalt pavement which had just been sprinkled. There was a strip of the roadway about twelve feet from the curb on the right hand side that had not been touched by the water, and the wheelmen rode single file so as to escape the wet part of the street. Mr. Bird was riding behind George O. Stevens when Frank Tilton, of West Long Branch, came from the opposite direction with a horse and wagon driving on the left hand side of the road.

The wheelmen ahead escaped, but Mr. Bird was forced to the curb and at the same time was thrown, not being quick enough to get out. He fell under the wagon wheels and received severe injuries which proved worse than at first was thought.

Policeman Charles Hathaway, of Long Branch, assisted Mr. Bird to a hotel nearby, where in a little while he regained consciousness.

After he revived he insisted on riding to Asbury Park, a distance of six miles, which he pluckily did with one foot.

At the Park his injuries became very painful and he was taken to the Hotel Vendome, where he remained till last night, coming home on the Baptist excursion.

Those who saw the accident at Long Branch were much incensed at the action of Tilton, and the Crescent Wheelmen are determined to push the case against the driver and make him pay all damages. The matter will be placed in the hands of the L. A. W. The names of several witnesses are in their possession, and they will be used in the case.

George O. Stevens in the presence of a policeman measured the roadway which was forty feet wide, and the exact distance from the curb where Mr. Bird and the others were riding, was twelve feet.

ALIMONY AND COUNSEL FEES.

Mrs. Elizabeth Keller, of Elizabeth, Makes Application for a Divorce.

Senator Voorhees and Judge Gilhooley, of Elizabeth, were opposing counsel in an application for alimony and counsel fees heard before Vice-Chancellor Emery Wednesday morning. Judge Gilhooley represented Mrs. Elizabeth Keller, of Elizabeth, who has instituted divorce proceedings against her husband, Louis Keller, on statutory grounds. The plaintiff asked that an order be granted compelling her husband to support her pending the trial of the suit.

In her affidavit, the wife sets forth that she married Keller in 1873, and that she has four children, the eldest of whom is married. Since 1883 the couple have not lived together.

A general denial of the charge made was entered by Mr. Voorhees for the defendant. The husband claimed his wife left him in 1883, and that he never refused to support her. It was shown that two of the children were able to support themselves, and the Vice-Chancellor granted an order giving the wife $7 a week alimony and $25 counsel fees.

Baptist Song Service.

There will be a special musical service at the First Baptist church on Sunday evening, when the choir will render selections from Gounod's "Messe Solemnelle" and Mendelssohn's Nineteenth Psalm. They will also sing entire Mendelssohn's "Hear My Prayer." Miss Cathrine Krymer, the contralto soloist of Dr. Madison Peters' church, of New York, will sing the contralto solos.

Appealed to a Higher Court.

The case of Julia Pendleton vs. the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, on contract, which was tried before Justice Mosher on June 28th, has been appealed by the defendent's counsel, J. C. Connelly, city attorney of Elizabeth, to the Court of Common Pleas of Union county. S. S. Swackhamer, of the Babcock building, represented Julia Pendleton.

Married Yesterday.

Lulu VanDoren, of Somerville, and Richard Jervey, of Charleston, S. C., were married yesterday at the residence of Mrs. Lottie Jervey on Arlington avenue. The ceremony was performed by Rev. P. J. Gibson.

OFF TO THE PARK.

A Host of Young and Old Go With the Methodists.

When the clouds broke yesterday afternoon, and the blue sky appeared, there was a general rejoicing all over the city for it promised pleasant weather for today, and a good time on the excursion of the Methodist Sunday-schools. Twenty cars were provided to carry them; two sections of ten cars each. In piled old and young until every car of the first section was full and running over, then the train pulled out. The second section was just the opposite for there was plenty of room to spare. A telegram was sent ahead to stop the first section at Roselle, and allow the crowded cars to overflow into the empty ones of the second section. It was also decided to leave off the last two cars in the rear section.

When the last section started off to return on the main track, a number of the excursionists on the platform thought they were left behind and departed very sorrowfully.

There were a number of wheels in the baggage car.

MERRY WEST END.

Outing Club Hold a Picnic in Vail's Grove Last Night.

The fourth annual picnic given by the Plainfield Outing Club was held in Vail's grove on West Fourth street, last evening. The grounds were very prettily decorated with Chinese lanterns and bunting, which made a very fine appearance. A large number of people were in attendance, and the large, extensive platform which had been erected for the occasion, was full with the merry crowd who tripped the light fantastic toe to the strains of O'Reilly's orchestra, composed of six pieces, until early this morning. Nothing happened during the entire evening to mar the pleasure of those present, the best of order being maintained. The committee deserve mention for the manner in which the affair was carried out.

Getting Ready to Parade.

Two candidates were elected members of Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., last evening and two propositions were received. The quarterly reports of the secretary and treasurer were read, which showed the council to be in a prosperous condition. District Deputy Charles I. Young installed the officers elect. Arrangements were made to secure uniforms for the annual parade at Asbury Park, on Friday, August 16th.

No Right to Name Wages.

At a meeting of the Essex County Board of Freeholders yesterday afternoon County Counsel Munn gave an opinion as to whether the board had the right to require contractors to pay their employees at least $1.75 a day. Mr. Munn declared that the board had no legal right to force a contractor to pay certain wages, and that such a requirement would hamper the board.

Final Purchase to be Made.

It is expected that the deed for the sewage bed property will be signed today by those who have charge of that part of the work. The heaviest portion of the sewer work will be commenced today by John Marsden on Grant avenue. It is not likely that the city will start work on the sewage beds before spring, as there is considerable in detail to do before that time.

Caught "Knocking Down."

The Consolidated Traction Company discharged ten men yesterday, the majority of whom were conductors who have been caught, as alleged, "knocking down" fares that they had not registered. The numbers and badges of several of them were stripped from them by Superintendent Chapman in front of the main office yesterday.

TOURNAMENT CLOSED.

The Hillside Tennis Club's Finals Played Yesterday Afternoon.

The postponed tournament of the Hillside Tennis Club was brought to a close yesterday afternoon when the finals between Messrs. H. Ryder and F. K. Fish, Jr., were played off. Mr. Ryder won without difficulty owing to the listless playing of his opponent who apparently had no desire to win. The score was as follows: Final round, Ryder beat Fish 6-1, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4; the points were, first set, Ryder 28, Fish 13; second set, Fish 37, Ryder 26; third set, Ryder 28, Fish 11; fourth set, Ryder 38, Fish 26.

An invitation has been received and accepted from the South Orange Field Club to send four men to Orange on Saturday afternoon, July 20th, for an interclub match. The games will no doubt will be very interesting as it will be remembered that Holcombe Ward, of the South Orange Field Club, won the invitation tournament held by the Hillside Club on Decoration Day. On that occasion Hillside's strongest player, C. F. Walz, was compelled to default owing to the extreme heat. He is great form now and will be one of the players for Hillside at Orange. The others are Messrs. F. W. Walz, R. A. Beebe and C. Sherwood West.

Rahway Groping in Darkness.

Mayor Daly of Rahway has sent a communication to the Common Council recommending that the contract given to Jackson Jaques of the Electric Light and Power Company be annulled. He states that ten days have elaped since the city was to have been lighted by electricity, and little progress has been made, that the citizens are making complaint, and that, although the company has been to some expense preparing to carry out its agreement to have the seventy-two arc lights in operation by July 1st, it is not the duty of the council to overlook the failure of the company to fulfil its agreement. The matter was referred back to the lamp and police committee.

Saengerbund Transacts Business.

The Saengerbund held a meeting last evening. The invitation to spend Sunday, July 21st, at Setler's Park, was accepted. It was decided to call a special meeting for Thursday evening to make arrangements for the joint picnic that the Saengerbund and the Independent Gun Club expects to hold sometime during September. A number of out-of-town societies will be invited to join. George Houseman and S. Trentle were elected members, and Frank Hicknar was proposed for membership.

Private Theatricals.

The barn of Samuel Q. Lawson, 752 West Seventh street, is going to be a lively place Saturday evening, when a number of the young girls of West Seventh street will give a little play entitled "Full Back." Those taking part in it are the Misses Cassie Lawson, Amy Burt, Florence Taylor, Marian Egan, Ada Woodruff, and Marion Woodcock. The admittance will be ten cents, and the money raised will be used for the benefit of the Fresh Air Fund. Mr. Lawson has very kindly built a stage and furnished the scenery.

The Westfield Wanderer Found.

Word has been received in Westfield by Justice Collins, from the Chief of Police of Brooklyn, that Emma Pulido, who left her home in Westfield last Friday while temporarily deranged, had been arrested in Brooklyn and would be detained until her friends called for her.

An Open Air Concert.

The neighborhood of Sanford avenue and East Front street, was treated to a new form of amusement yesterday, when Irene Dunham, Edna Martin, Lisle Leland, and Irving Leland, secured a little doll's piano, and placing it in an express wagon tramped about the streets serenading the different houses. The total of their collections amounted to ten cents.

An Editor's Opinion.

Senator Voorhees's friends are working quietly, but energetically, to capture the delegates from Rahway to the Gubernatorial convention for the Elizabeth statesman. Editor Rollinson, of the Rahway Advocate, claims that Mr. Voorhees will have a solid delegation from Rahway—Newark News.

They Were All On the Excursion.

The meeting of the Victor Wheelmen, which was to take place last evening, was postponed until next Thursday on account of the absence of a quorum which was due to so many of the members being on the Baptist excursion yesterday.

GIRLS AS NEGRO MINSTRELS.

A Church Show at Metuchen Which Surprised Some of the Audience.

A dozen young women, whose families make their summer home in Metuchen, gave a negro minstrel performance for the benefit of St. Agnes Guild, of St. Luke's Episcopal church on Monday night in Robin's hall. The best families in town were represented.

People were turned away for lack of room. The girls were made up by a professional. The curtain went up on a semi-circle of well-blacked performers. The men were in burlesque negro attire, and the young women wore red bandannas, basques of calico or gingham, and skirts of wonderful hues that hung just far enough from the floor to show pretty ankles encased in hosiery of lurid stripes.

Pretty soon sensitive people began to fidget under the jokes. There was no evidence that the rector of St. Luke's had exercised a censorship over the jokes that flew about the circle. Then, when three very proper young women stepped out and did a song and tambourine dance, there were exclamations of surprise from some of the more staid ladies of the guild.

The audience as a whole was immensely tickled and applauded wildly. The show came to a close with a rattling cake walk, in which there was a lively dance.

Wanted on a Charge of Embezzlement.

The police of Elizabeth are searching for James H. Dougherty, a well-known amateur actor and law student, who is wanted on a charge of embezzlement. The complaint against him is made by Justice Charles Jacobs, who charges the young man with defrauding him out of considerable money. Two officers went to Dougherty's home on Florida street yesterday to arrest him, but the young man had disappeared, and is said to have left the city. He was studying in the office of Lawyer Allen Benny, of Bayonne.

The Wife Knew Her Business.

Moses Cary and wife, colored, of North Plainfield, had a dispute yesterday which resulted in their being brought before Justice Crosley. Moses wanted his wife to mortgage her property for $600 and furnish a bail bond of $500 for "Jumbo" Lewis, who was arrested recently for stealing paint from Woolston & Buckle. This she refused to do. Justice Crosley suspended sentence on Moses and held his wife under $100 bail for six months to keep the peace.

Cranford People Hurt.

At Westfield as George Ely, of Cranford, was getting into his carriage the horse took fright and started to run away. Mr. Ely was thrown to the ground and Mrs. Ely, who was also in the carriage, was thrown out and her arm broken. She was also badly cut about the head. After her injuries were attended to by a physician, she was taken to her home. Mr. Ely was not injured.

Fell Through the Window.

Glass is not made to fall against, as one of the clerks in the New York and Philadelphia candy store has found out. Yesterday afternoon at about 5:30 he was cleaning the window when his chair slipped and fell against one of the large panes of glass, completely shattering it. A new one was put in immediately.

But Little Difference.

For some time past Chief Doane has been closely watching the difference in time between that sent out by the Western Union and that at the Washington observatory, and he finds that they vary but about a quarter of a second.

Water and New Brunswick.

New Brunswick is to have a water carnival, under the auspices of the Boat Club. The necessary funds are being raised by the New Brunswick Times.

A FAMILY REUNION.

H. O. Newman, of This City, Meets With His Brothers at Jersey City.

When a man has five grown-up sons, all prospering in business, as H. C. Newman, of Jersey City, has, he is a lucky man. Last evening at the home of Hiram Newman, of Jersey City, one of the sons, a family reunion took place. H. C. Newman, the father of the family, now eighty-two years old, was present, and besides him were Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Newman, of West Fifth street, this city, Mrs. Geo. Newman, of Orange, Frank Newman and daughter, Miss Mabel Newman, of Falls Church, Va., and Edwin Newman, of Brooklyn. Hiram Newman, assisted by his hospitable wife, entertained the visitors. The evening was spent most enjoyably, music taking a prominent part. This is the first reunion for many years, but the brothers hope not to let as many years pass before they all come together again.

A MALICIOUS LIE.

The Courier-News Circulated a Slanderous Report About Mr. Riker.

Mrs. Ira F. Riker is deeply grieved over the statement made in the Courier-News that her husband, whose death occurred suddenly Wednesday morning, died by unnatural means. She says there was not the slightest foundation for printing the statement, and the bereaved relatives, together with the many friends of Mr. Riker, feel that it was a malicious slander on a man who had always had the respect of his fellow-men when alive, but whose sad demise is made the subject of a sensational story by the Courier-News. The very fact that County Physician O'Reilly gave a burial permit disproves the statement of poisoning.

Moved Out in the Night.

For sometime past Hallet & Davis, the New York piano makers, have had a branch office in this city, but the company have had more or less trouble with their representatives.

Their place of business has lately been in A. D. Thomson's building on North avenue, but the patronage was not sufficient to warrant its continuance.

This morning about two o'clock a truck and four horses came out from New York and removed the stock of pianos to the city.

A man by the name of Hadley, who had charge of the branch, is still in town.

Hetfield's Pony Has Returned.

"The cat came back," and so has Walter L. Hetfield's pony that wandered away day before yesterday. A strange pony was found up in a vacant field in Dunellen and taken to a livery stable. When the account of the runaway appeared in last evening's Daily Press one of those that found the straying animal notified Mr. Hetfield at once and this morning he went after his wandering property and brought him back to Plainfield.

Dogs Attack Deliverymen.

A vicious dog on Manning avenue bit Frank Sheppard, a young boy employed on Rogers' delivery wagon, this morning. The boy was delivering a package into a house, when the dog attacked on the stoop. Deliverymen for local merchants say that they are troubled a great deal with bad tempered dogs, whose owners say they will not bite, but nevertheless when the men attempt to enter the house, they are frequently attacked by the dogs.

Professor Watson Insane Again.

Professor J. Madison Watson, the well-known scientist and compiler of school books, who over a month ago was taken to the Morris Plains Asylum, was recently discharged as cured, and was at his country seat in the suburbs of Elizabeth Tuesday night, when he again became violently insane. Two policemen were sent to the house to protect his wife. At noon he was conveyed, securely bound in a coach, back to the asylum. His case is now regarded as hopeless.

A Little Girl Burned to Death.

A four-year-old child of John J. Kelly, of 136 Ripley place, Elizabethport, was fatally burned and died yesterday morning. Some men were burning a mattress in a field opposite Mr. Kelly's house, and the wind blew the flames toward the child, whose clothing ignited. Before assistance could reach her the little one was horribly burned about the body. She was carried to her home and medical aid summoned, but the child's life could not be saved.

Driving Park Events.

Racing will be held at the Driving Park on Park avenue tomorrow afternoon, commencing at half past two. A number of horses from Woodbridge are entered. The admission is free.

TRILBY HAS COME AND GONE.

A DRAMATIC ADAPTATION OF A FAMED NOVEL.

Hotel Netherwood Parlors Transformed Into a Model Play House in Which a Select Number Gather.

Trilby has been all the rage this year, and so it was that John Spitler, the genial proprietor of the Hotel Netherwood, secured Miss Catherine Lewis and her company of players to present an adaptation of that well known book.

The spacious parlors of the hotel, with their rich hangings and plate-glass mirrors, were last night transformed temporarily into a theatrical hall. One side was shut off by a velvet curtain, while in front of it easy chairs were arranged in rows. At half-past eight a small but select audience gathered there, composed mainly of the hotel guests, but with a few from nearby residences.

The evening's entertainment was of a very high class, and it seemed too bad that the parlors were not crowded, as it is not every day that Plainfield is enabled to hear and see such artists. The programme was as follows:

PERDITA (anonymous).
(A Poem in Costume).
The Countess of Castelvecchio.

Shakespeare's PYRAMUS AND THISBE.

Prologue.....Charles Marriott
Pyramus.....Edgar Norton
Wall.....L. M. B. Pratt
Moonshine.....W. J. Romain
Lion.....A. F. Stanford
AND
Thisbe.....Miss Catherine Lewis

A one-act adaptation by Miss Catherine Lewis of "TRILBY."

Svengali.....Miss Oldcastle
(Countess of Castelvecchio)
Taffy.....L. M. B. Pratt
Sandy.....Edgar Norton
Little Billie.....W. J. Romain
Mrs. Bagot.....Miss Ashcom
AND
Trilby.....Miss Catherine Lewis

Of course, everybody wanted to see "Trilby," and that was the real attraction, but "Pyramus and Thisbe" was very amusing, and showed the result of careful thought. Several very pretty songs were introduced in the performance. The whole caste in "Trilby" played their parts to perfection; W. J. Romain, as "Little Billee," is certainly the right man in the right place, and Romain, Pratt, and Norton make a trio that are hard to beat. Miss Oldcastle played the difficult part of Svengali as Du-Maurier must have meant it. J. Grahame Slee is the business manager of the company.

The music was well rendered by another of the hotel's attractions, Gosca's orchestra.

After the programme was concluded, the audience dispersed and strolled about the long halls and on the long veranda, for which the Hotel Netherwood is famed.

PUNCHED THE CONSTABLE.

A New York Coachman Resisted Arrest by a Country Constable.

Two New York coachmen drove into Westfield Tuesday morning. Each had charge of two horses and behind each team were hitched two empty coaches. The men were on their way from New York to Somerville.

When they reached the square one of the horses dropped in the traces and died a few minutes later. It had suffered a sunstroke. The animal was emaciated and William Earl wanted the driver arrested for cruelty to animals. Constable Picken started to make the arrest and forgot to display his badge. The driver didn't intend to let a common citizen interfere with his liberty and punched the constable several times before he learned his captor was an officer. Then he submitted and was taken before Justice Collins.

The other driver had a fit during the interim, which was caused by the sun, but nobody thought of having him arrested for cruelty to himself.

When he had learned the facts of the case, Justice Collins discharged his prisoner, and the two men hitched the four coaches to the three remaining horses, climbed on the box of one of the vehicles and drove triumphantly out of town.—Elizabeth Journal.

Makes His Own Wheel.

Herbert Johnstone, of East Fifth street, is riding a new wheel. All the different parts for it were secured from a cycle factory and the safety was then put in rideable shape by Wm. Johnstone.

Comply With This.

Pastors and church clerks who supply notices of Sunday services for publication in the Daily Press tomorrow must have them at the office by 10:30 a. m. Otherwise they are liable to be left out.

WITH SONG AND PRAYER

Endeavorers Praise God for Gladdened Hearts.

The Splendid Welcome Officially Extended to the Visitors by Gov. Greenhalge Ad's Sunshine to Their Happy Lot—Monster Meetings in Hall, Tents and Churches.

Boston, July 12.—All Boston has sounded with the loud acclaim of the great army of young Christians now within her gates. The splendid welcome that was officially extended to the 53,000 delegates to the grand Christain Endeavor convention by Governor Greenhalge yesterday has gladded their hearts, and last night three magnificent divisions of the happy multitude praised God in song and prayer.

In Hall, Tents and Churches.

In the afternoon the Endeavorers met in rallies according to their denominations in the hall, tents and city churches. Mechanics hall was filled with the Presbyterians. Rev. Geo. B. Stewart, D. D., of Harrisburg, Pa., presided, and William M. Benham, of Pittsburg, lead in a brief prayer service. Rev. James T. Black, of East Boston, gave a welcome for the Boston Presbyterian churches. Such a gathering, he said, would help and encourage the denomination in its work in Boston.

Loyalty to the Church.

Dr. Henry C. Cook, of Philadelphia, presented resolutions which were unanimously adopted pledging loyalty to the church and authorizing the chairman to appoint a committee of nine, himself chairman, to co-operate with the committee appointed at the last general assembly upon relations of young people's societies to the church. Rev. John Pollock, of Glasgow, Scotland, presented the greetings of the Scottish National Christian Endeavor union. The rally adjourned at 5.15.

Congregational Rally.

Though a denominational affair the Congregational rally in tent Williston on Boston common, yesterday afternoon, was much more largely attended than the general gathering in the same place in the morning. The crowd was enormous, filling all available space. Mrs. W. H. Strong, of Detriot, Mich., presided. George C. Stebbins, of Brooklyn, N. Y., led the praise service. Rev. Dr. Alden, offered prayer. In calling the meeting to order Chairman Strong said it was probably the largest gathering of Congregationalists ever known in the world.

Fire and Enthusiasm Needed.

William Shaw of Boston spoke briefly to the effect that Congregationalism did not lack wisdom. It needed fire and enthusiasm. Rev. Dwight Pratt of the Williston Church of Maine, where Christian Endeavorism had its birth, said that Congregationalism was born of the struggle for free thought. It stands for an open and authoritative Bible.

To Reproduce the Life of Christ.

Rev. A. E. Dunning, D. D., of Boston, spoke of the Calverism as tending the intellectual freedom of every human soul. Congregationalism was simply an attempt to reproduce the life of Jesus Christ among men. Rev. Dr. Nepemiah Boynton spoke of the missionary and educational spirit of Congregationalism, and other addresses were made by Christian Endeavor state presidents including Frank Page of Chicago, Thomas Jones of Kansas City, Mo.; A. J. Leffingill of Iowa, Rev. A. T. Kinsey of Iowa and W. S. Wilcox of Spokane, Wash.

Baptists Rally.

Tent Endeavor was even more densely crowded in the afternoon at the Baptist denominational rally than at the morning exercises. Vocal music was plentifully supplied. Rev C. H. Vedder of Chicago presided, and Rev. L. A. Crandall, D. D., of Chicago, was the first speaker, taking for his topic "Dangers to be Met with in Christian Endeavor Work." Some of his remarks were quite caustic as he pointed out the follies, conceits and other annoying things that might prove a source of injuiry to the society and its work.

Greeting to the Baltimore Union.

Gen. T. J. Morgan, secretary of the Baptist Home Missionary society, spoke on "Home Missionary Work." "An Open Parliament," followed for a discussion on "Advanced Endeavor," conducted by Rev. Wayland Hoyt, D. D. A resolution was adopted sending greeting to the Baptist union to be held in Baltimore, July 18, and the meeting closed with the doxology and Benediction.

Great Gathering at Mechanic's Hall.

At 6 o'clock in the evening Mechanic's hall was opened, and within half an hour it was so densely packed that the doors had to be closed. Thousands gathered before the building and an overflow meeting was held on the steps and avenue, at which Rev. Henry Montgomery, of Belfast, Ireland, Rev. John Pollock, of Glasgow, Scotland, and president S. C. Clark spoke. Secretary John Baer presided in the hall and George K. Somerby acted as musical director. After a brief praise and prayer service, led by Rev. James Marsall, of Derby, England, W. H. H. Smith, of Washington, extended to the convention an invitation to meet in that city.

To Meet in 'Frisco in '97.

Rev. Francis E. Clark, D. D., of Boston, president of the United society, then read his annual report with enthusiastic applause. Secretary Baer then announced that the trustees had unanimously voted to hold the convention of '97 in San Francisco, providing that a satisfactory railroad rate could be obtained.

Moody Urges Bible Study.

Evangelist Dwight L. Moody, of Northfield, was the last speaker. He said some feared the Christian Endeavor movement would cease to be a power for good; but every movement founded on the Bible would be sustained. He hoped endeavorers would believe the whole Bible. In closing he urged systematic Bible study.

At Tent Endeavor.

The greatest audience of the day gathered in tent Endeavor last evening, for not only was the tent crowded, but all around the outside of the canvas, the sides of which were raised, were lines of people. A number of speakers were listened to with interest, including John G. Woolley, of Chicago, who spoke on "Church Resolutions vs. Saloon Resolution."

"COMMON MEN" HANGED.

Pak Is a Nephew of the King of Korea and Suffered Banishment.

Washington, July 12.—Additional details concerning the fall of Pak Yong Hyo, Korean minister of the interior and practical dictator of that country, have been received at the state department from Mr. Sill, the United States minister at Seoul.

Pronounced a Traitor.

Mr. Sill says that Pak, who is the king's nephew, was accused of treason, and the trial resulted in a verdict of guilty of conspiracy. He was pronounced a traitor and the case was referred to his majesty, the king, for judgment.

Banished for Ten Years.

The minimum legal punishment for Pak's offense is banishment for life, but the king exercised his clemency and cut it down to ten years. The imperial judgment was delivered on May 13, and that evening Pak was taken out of Seoul to an island near Chemulpo where he will pass the period of exile.

"Common Men" Hanged.

Five "common men" (to quote Mr. Sill), also implicated in the conspiracy, were hanged the same night. Mr. Sill says there was no excitement over these troubles.

CONSUMPTION OF SUGAR.

Over 2,000,000 Tons Used in the United States in 1894.

Washington, July 12.—Worthington Ford, chief of the bureau of statistics, treasury department, has prepared tables and maps showing the sugar consumption of the United States for 1880 to 1894. The amount of sugar consumed during the calendar year 1894 is stated at a little over 2,000,000 tons or 63 1-2 pounds for each man, woman and child in the United States. In 1880 the per capita consumption was 43 pounds. In 1891 the per capita consumption reached 66 pounds. Of the sugar consumed in 1894, 1,700,000 tons were imported, the balance being domestic production, mostly from cane. The domestic production of sugar has increased from 150,000 tons in 1880 to 340,000 tons in 1894.

LETTER CARRIERS' TROUBLES.

Investigation of Charges To Be Begun at Philadelphia Next Week.

Washington, July 12.—First Assistant Postmaster General Jones will next week institute an investigation by a direct representative of the department into the charges against letter carriers of Philadelphia, preferred by special agents of the department. Each carrier involved will have an opportunity to disprove the charges filed against him. Those reported for offenses considered sufficiently serious for dismissal, will probably be suspended until they disprove the charges. Similar investigations will follow in other large offices throughout the country.

MORENO MUST ANSWER

Indicted for Libelling Ambassador Fava.

For Years He Has Pursued the Italian Diplomat Through the Press with Charges Most Serious—Accused of Bartering in Human Flesh from His Native Country.

Washington, July 12.—Caesar Celso Moreno, who came into notoriety some years ago by being appointed by King Kalakaua prime minister of Hawaii, a position which he held only twenty-four hours, resigning in response to the unanimous protest of the representatives of the foreign governments in Honolulu, has since that time resided in Washington and has for years pursued the Italian ambassador, Baron Fava, through the press with charges of almost every kind of misconduct.

Moreno Indicted.

The particular offense alleged against him in an indictment just found against him in a criminal suit for libel is that after the appointment by Baron Fava, with the consent of Secretary Carlisle, of an agent to warn and advise Italian immigrants arriving at Ellis island, N. Y., and to protect them against the padrone system, Moreno, "being a person of evil and wicked mind, and of a most malicious disposition," caused to be published the following libel:

Moreno's Serious Charges.

"In order to continue to control the Italian padroni and slaves, to continue to receive the lion's share of the spoils, to continue to blind the American police, to continue to mislead the United States commissioners of immigration at Ellis island and to continue to keep in ignorance the American people and government on the nefarious traffic in human flesh, viz., the traffic in Italian slaves of both sexes and of all ages, 'don basilio' Fava, the ambassador of the king of Italy, has appointed the self-styled professor, Count Oldrini, a veteran accomplice of the said padroni, and a go-between for Ambassador Fava, the Italian consuls and the padroni all over this country, as the chief of the bureau for the protection of the Italian immigrants.

Traffic in Human Flesh.

"The Italian ministers, Corti, Blanc, Fava, and consuls Deluca, Raffo, Riva, in New York; Galli, in Philadelphia; Manassero and Scintli and Squitli, in Chicago, and Lombertenghi, in San Francisco, have received millions of money from the Italian padroni as their share of the spoils derived from this traffic of Italian slaves, or, better said, of human flesh. But they have outraged and dishonored Italy, America and humanity." A bench warrant was issued for the arrest of Moreno and was placed in the hands of a deputy marshal for service

SIX O'CLOCK.

WEARY WOMEN WATCH FOR THAT BLESSED HOUR.

Help for our Working-Girls and Women Near at Hand.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

IN the stroke of six ends the day's work at stores, offices, factories, mills, where women are employed. But their necessary work at home, sewing, mending, etc., must be done after that time, and "their work is never done." All women work; some for ambition, some for economy in the household, but the great mass of women work for their daily bread. All are subject to the same physical laws; all suffer alike from the same physical disturbances, and the nature of their duties often quickly drifts them into the horrors of all kinds of female complaints, ovarian troubles, inflammation, ulceration, falling and displacement of the womb, leucorrhœa, and perhaps irregular or suppressed "monthly periods," causing severe backache, loss of appetite, nervousness, irritability and weakness.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the unfailing cure for all these troubles. It strengthens the proper muscles, and cures displacement.

Backache, dizziness, fainting, bearing-down, disordered stomach, moodiness, dislike of friends and society—all symptoms of the one cause—will be quickly dispelled. Write Mrs. Pinkham about your trouble.

You can tell the story of your pain to a woman, and get the help that only woman can give. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass.

LOOK IN THE CLOSET

SEE if you can't find some old clothes that you have put aside because of the worn-out look they have, or some clothes that are badly spotted.

We want you to bring any old clothes of that sort to us—or better yet—we'll send for them.

We propose to clean those clothes—or to dye them for you—either way to make them wearable. This is an economical suggestion.

We take out grease spots so they stay out, or we dye clothes with a color that wears. We charge as little as possible for the work.

Just a dollar or two—and you'll have a lot of new clothes.

THE HONEST SHAKERS AND THEIR CURE FOR DYSPEPSIA.

The shopkeeper who cheats us by lying with regard to the quality of his goods, and the grocer or the butcher who gives us short weights, is a thief. However, their knavery touches nothing but our pocketbook. There is another widespread form of misrepresentation of a far more dangerous and villainous character.

We refer to the false statements and worthless guarantees that frequently accompany medicines. To guarantee a medicine to cure is to brand it as a quack product. If we can guarantee to cure disease, then we can guarantee everlasting life, for in a large majority of cases people die of disease, the proportion of violent or accidental deaths being very small.

The Shakers have always been known as a most upright and honorable people, and their success in the manufacture of medicines has always been well known. It is therefore not surprising to find them pursuing a very original and novel plan for the introduction of their remedy for dyspepsia.

These God fearing people, whose motto has always been "Try all things and hold fast to that which is good" have put upon the market ten cent sample bottles of their product, or sufficient to give it a trial.

The Shaker Digestive Cordial is so prompt in its action that for the trival sum of ten cents, a person can usually determine as to whether or not it meets the requirements of his case. There are forms of dyspepsia which it won't help, but these are very rare. In most cases the first dose relieves all distress, and an increase of appetite at once follows.

All druggists have it, and the next time you are troubled with indigestion send out and try this popular and successful product. It represents nearly a hundred years of patient investigation and study.

TREASURY STATEMENT

Receipts and Expenditures Both Running Heavy.

Decline in the Treasury Balance and Also in the Gold Reserve—A Deficit of Over $12,000,000 So Far This Month—Believed, However, That It May Not Further Increase.

Washington, July 12.—Treasury receipts and expenditures have both been running heavy so far this month. The former have attained the aggregate of $10,979,000, or nearly $1,250,000 a day, Sundays and holidays included, and the expenditures foot up $23,318,000, making the deficit $12,338,000.

Decline in Treasury Balance.

Since July 1 the general treasury balance, according to the printed daily statement, has declined $2,000,000, standing at $191,518,000. From this there is to be deducted $6,527,616 for bonds and interest paid. The gold reserve has declined from $107,557,000 to $107,213,000. The amount of treasury notes and United States notes redeemed in gold and reissued amount to $533,189.

Deficit May Be Reduced.

It is not believed that the deficit will be very much increased for the month over the figures it has now reached, and it may be reduced.

COURTNEY COMING HOME.

He Will Sail To-morrow—Fennell Still Confined to Bed.

Henley, July 12.—Mr. Courtney, the coach of the Cornell crew, is better. He has so far recovered from his sickness that he was able to go out yesterday afternoon. Fennell is still confined to his bed.

Courtney Coming Home.

Mr. Courtney's illness will cause his early return home. He will sail tomorrow on the steamer New York. The Cornell boys will be banquetted by Mr. Nickall on Monday. Some of them intend going to France for a few days, while others will visit various parts of England.

Still Blame the Umpire.

The Leander crew's captain has issued a statement in regard to the fiasco of Tuesday. He lays the whole blame on the umpire. He says when Mr. Willans called out "are you ready?" several men of the Leander crew called back "no" loud enough for others on the starter's boat to easily hear them. The captain says the Leander's had not got their boat straight when the start was announced and that they made no effort to start.

FALSE PRETENCES CHARGED.

Arrest of Proprietors of the Failed Leader Department Store.

Chicago, July 12.—The members of the firm which operated the Leader department store, which failed recently, have been arrested at the instance of J. V. Farwell & Co. Carl Dernburg, Lipman Glyck and Joseph Horner, members of the insolvent firm, were taken into custody upon an affidavit made by J. V. Farwell & Co., charging them with making false statements with regard to their credit and obtaining goods on the strength of such statements. The three men were released under heavy bonds.

Reports were received from Kenton, West Union and Cincinnati from persons holding bonds all of which are thought to be bogus.

FEARS FOR BISHOP COXE'S SON.

Went Rowing with a Companion, and Has Not Been Heard From.

Geneva, July 12.—Grave apprehensions as to the fate of Arthur Cleveland Coxe, a grandson of the bishop of western New York, and Henry May, of Pittsford, both junior students at Hobart, pervades this community. They both started off last Wednesday in a rowboat for a leisurely tour of Seneca lake, intending to camp on shore wherever night overtook them. They have not since been heard from and it is feared both are drowned.

Operatives Kept Away by Strikers.

Amesbury, Mass., July 12.—A number of operatives from Exeter, N. H., arrived here yesterday, intending to go to work in the Hamilton mills, but they were met by the strikers' committee and prevailed upon not to enter the mills. Agents are here from several New England cities engaging operatives and half of the 800 strikers have already left town.

A Cuban Bank's Suspension.

Havana, July 12.—The Banco Agricola of the city of Puerto Principe has suspended payment. It is expected, however, that the suspension is only temporary, as the bank's resources are estimated at 700,000 pesetas, and its liabilities 70,000 pesetas.

Los Angeles, July 12.—Articles of incorporation of the Big Horn Gold Mining company have been filed here. The capital is $2,000,000. The mine is located at the head of the San Gabriel river. There are easily 1,000,000 tons in sight.

SPOFFORD'S ACCOUNTS.

Statements by Auditor Holcomb and the Librarian Himself.

Washington, July 12.—Treasury Auditor Holcomb, speaking of his reported investigation in the accounts of Mr. Spofford, librarian of congress, said: "I am investigating his accounts, and that is really all there is in it. He has not rendered his accounts for copyright fees. The investigation is not instigated by politicians, as has been suggested.

Believes Everything Is All Right.

"Mr. Spofford has made deposits in the treasury from time to time. These accounts have to be audited and the deposits verified by accounts as rendered. It is simply a business matter with me. I do not have any opinion about it. I have always understood that Mr. Spofford stood very high, and I shall be very much surprised and shocked if it does not come out all right. Mr. Spofford is absorbed in literature and is not very good at accounts, I think."

Not a Question of Deficiency.

Librarian Spofford, who was afterward seen, said: "The charges as a whole are absolutely foundationless. It is not a question of deficiency in any fees, for there is none, but simply of delayed accounts. The accounts have been delayed owing to the vast mass of details imposed upon the librarian and the rapid increase of copyright business. The present difficulty arises from these delays, and all accounts in arrears are now being investigated by the proper auditor of the treasury department. Until these are fully examined and digested no full statement can be made of their condition."

MURDERS BY AN EX-CONVICT.

Deeds of a Man Who Was Pardoned by Gov. Flower.

Watertown, N. Y., July 12.—Minnie Ingersoll, 16 years old, who lived with her brother at Chapel Hill, thirty-five miles from here, and Nicholas P. Strife, a farm hand employed on the Ingersoll place, were murdered Wednesday night by John Hoch, who had been an inmate of the prison at Auburn serving a sen- sentence of seven years for attempted murder, and was pardoned two years ago by Gov. Flower.

Gave Her No Warning.

Late in the evening Hoch sneaked into the Ingersoll barn, and when Miss Ingersoll passed with a pail of milk, he fired, the ball lodging in her heart. She fell dead instantly. Strife was following the girl with a pail of milk, and the murderer fired the second time, the ball entering Strife's left side. He died a few hours later.

Tried To Kill Himself.

Hoch made for the woods and escaped, but was located in a farm house early in the morning by the sheriff. When the officers arrived Hoch showed fight, but finding resistance useless, he put a revolver to his forehead and fired, fracturing his skull. It is expected that Hoch will recover. Hoch's attentions to the Ingersoll girl had been rejected.

IN NEED OF $5,000,000.

University of Pennsylvania After an Endowment Fund.

Philadelphia, July 12.—Provost Harrison and the trustees of the University of Pennsylvania are endeavoring to secure an endowment fund for the institution of $5,000,000. Mr. Harrison has made public a circular letter which is being sent to the friends of the university, in this connection, and wherein is cited the expenditures now being made by other leading universities of the country. In explaining the need for money the provost said: "It is evident that for the reasonable provisions for the university's immediate needs, in libraries, equipments, dormitory buildings, endowments of scholarships and fellowships, and for the development of growing departments, such as architecture, etc., and for the professional schools of laws, medicine and dentistry, the sum of at least $5,000,000 could not only be immediately but economically used. Nearly twice this amount has been given to the universities in the United States within the last few years."

HIGH ORDER OF RACING

First Day's Pedaling at Asbury a Success.

Almost All the Crack Riders Take Part—General Miles Witnesses the Events—Zimmerman and Wheeler Spin Around on a Tandem—Titus and McDonald Ride a Dead Heat.

Asbury Park, N. J., July 12.—The crowd that was present upon the trial heats of the first day's racing of the League of American Wheelmen's national meet completely filled the grand stand and went a long way out on the big new bleachers. Notables were present by shoals and scores. One notable face being that of Gen. Nelson A. Miles.

Racing of a High Order.

The racing was all of a high order and unexpectedly free from accidents considering the dangerous banking on the turns. The novice race was not extraordinary. McKay, of Denver, looked like a winner until the last shoot, when C. C. Dirnberger, of Buffalo, came away and won easily with McKay second. Walter Douglas, the champion swimmer of America, who is becoming a class A crack, took the two-mile handicap in masterly style, running well all the way.

Tom Butler Outdone.

Little Tom Butler, from down Boston way, should have had the half-mile class A open, but, after winning his heat, was obliged to start at once in the final without rest or rub down, and ran second to Ertz, of New York, in a driving finish with Douglas, Ertz squeezing between the others at the very tape. The class A tandem events were pretty but rather tame. Caldwell, of Manchester, and Tom Butler having an easy thing in heat and final.

Single Professional Event.

Of course, the main interest lay in the single professional event, the first wedge in the prophesied downfall of the amateur purity in league meets. Zimmerman and Wheeler paced on a tandem, which Fred St. Onge, caught, with Berlo, Starbuck, Eaton, Bartholomew, Cutter and McCurdy tagging on in order. The race was too hot, however, and St. Onge soon lost the tandem and fell at the three-quarters. Berlo did the rest alone, Starbuck and Bartholomew in the places.

Class B Events the Best.

However deserving of attention the professional event may have been as a novelty and curio, the best racing and liveliest performance were seen in the class B contests. Cabanne, looked upon by many as the star competitive man of the world, having been laid up in a heat in the morning, Bald, McDonald, Titus and Gardiner were left to fight it out in three races—a mile, a mile open and the two-mile national championship. In the latter, of course, class A men were permitted to compete and two qualified, but were lost in the shuffle when the sprinting commenced.

It Was a Beautiful Sight.

The first heat was a beauty. McDonald, Titus, Scott and Earl starting. Earl made the gate for the first half when McDonald went up taking Titus with him. These giants hung to each other until the quarter pole at which post Titus, who seemed to feel that he must do something pretty soon, ran out and gained twenty yards before McDonald saw him.

A Dead Heat.

Then came a memorable rush down the stretch, McDonald gaining at every inch and Titus forging along like a Kansas cyclone with an object in view. The men almost touched elbows as they flashed over the tape at the same instant, Monte Scott beating Earl easily for third place. Half the crowd shouted for Titus while the remainder shouted "McDonald." The judges announced a dead heat.

Less Exciting Events.

The other heats were less exciting and caused a good deal of uneasiness owing to the large field of starters. Mayo and Saunders, the two Johnsons, Louis and Ernie went into pace respectively the halves of the two-mile national championship final, in which Coulter, Gardiner, Nat Butler, Kiser, Stowe, Caldwell and Ferrell started. Butler, Gardiner and Coulter had it hot on the run home, coming in side by side like the lady riders in Tuesday's parade. At a yard from the mark Butler jumped ahead and the others came over with wheels lapping, while the crowd howled.

A Great Day's Sport.

It was a great day's sport. Last evening the annual bar carnival was held on Wesley lake, eclipsing all former water pageants. Many elaborate pyrotechnics and aquatic novelties were introduced.

The census reduces that 20,000 population, of which Plainfield papers have been boasting, to less than 14,000. This is characteristic of Plainfield.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

Not quite so sarcastic and not quite so knowing, if you please. Plainfield has two governments — city and borough—owing to the dividing line of Union and Somerset counties running through her midways. With the city and borough Plainfield has 18,000 population.

Elias A. Ward is a candidate for the Republican nomination of Governor. Mr. Ward resides in Newark and is a railway magnate. The gentleman is not quite so optimistic of Republican prospects as some other G. O. P. followers, for he says in reference to his party electing their candidate: "I don't think it is going to be as easy as rolling off a log, as some of the boasters would say." If Mr. Ward is not a practical candidate, he is, at least, a practical advisor.

Sir Wilfred Lawson, the English temperance advocate, once accosted a laborer who was walking along with a black bottle, and lectured him on the wickedness of intemperance. The man seemed to be impressed and emptied the contents of the bottle on the road, whereupon Sir Wilfred, highly pleased, gave him a sixpence, with the remark, "Take that, it will buy you something better." A few minutes afterward Sir Wilfred saw the man go into a public house and spend the money in beer. He had been carrying a bottle of tea.

To Investigate the Child's Death.

What is believed to be the suspicious death of the two-weeks-old infant of Lucy Bullock, an unmarried colored servant, is being investigated by the Bayonne police. About a month ago the woman was admitted to the Bayonne Hospital and Dispensary, and her child was born a fortnight later. She was discharged from the institution Tuesday afternoon. Then her child was apparently in good health. Late that night the woman entered Daniel Dempsey's undertaking establishment and said she was in trouble. She carried a parcel in her arms, and when she opened the wrappings she disclosed the dead body of her child. County Physician Converse refused to grant a burial permit until he could learn the circumstances of the baby's death. The woman professed to know nothing about her infant's sudden death.

Singular Coincident.

An interesting event is related by H. N. Spencer in regard to his mother, the late Mrs. Caroline Spencer. When a young girl she was an intimate friend of Alfred Bonnell, now living in the borough, and it was the desire of both that they witness each other's marriage. One day in December, 1828, Mr. Bonnell called on Mrs. Spencer and gave her an invitation to his wedding. She inquired the date, and he told her it was on the following Wednesday. She said she was very sorry, but it would be impossible for her to be present, as she was going to be married at the same time. It was the regret of both that they could not see each other married, and it was particularly strange that the same date should be chosen by them.

New Jersey Crop Prospects.

Secretary Franklin Dye, of the State Board of Agriculture, having received word that in Hunterdon county ninety-five per cent. of the peaches had fallen in the usual "June drop," determined to find out what the prospects for peaches and other crops in the State might be. He accordingly sent out letters of inquiry to reliable persons in all the counties of the State. The result of his information was that the outlook is not so black as he was led to suppose, even in Hunterdon county. According to reports received, peaches will be rather over half a crop. The June crop has been very heavy, the general opinion being that it was made so by the May frost, which weakened the trees. The reports of the other crops generally show a better condition.

South Orange to Have a Dry Spell.

A special committee, composed of fifteen citizens, has been named to watch the liquor dealers in South Orange. Next Sunday the citizens will begin, and it is anticipated that the thirsty will be compelled to experience a full-fledged Roosevelt dry Sunday. Citizens accountable for the appointing of the committee of fifteen have also pledged themselves to endeavor to have the license fee for saloons and hotels increased from $150 to $500. In Vailsburg an effort is being made to have Sunday baseball playing in the Shooting Park stopped.

Increased the Judgement.

Farmer John Edgworth, of Linden, was tried in a Rahway Justice's Court on action for damages for an assault upon Henry O'Rouke, a policeman in that city. O'Rouke and Edgworth had some difficulty over the purchase of some cows, out of which trouble the assault occured. A verdict of $50 was found against Edgworth, and through his lawyer, ex-Assemblyman Kelly, he appealed to the County Court. Judge McCormick read the opinion of the court. It sustained the result of the case in the lower court, and increased the verdict against Edgworth to $80.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

INS AND OUTS.

The Dunellen and Westfield teams had a tame game of ball yesterday at Westfield. The Dunellenites walked all over the Westfield boys, and at the close of the ninth inning the score stood twenty-seven to eleven in favor of the Dunellenites. The men on the two nines where placed as follows: Westfield, Williams, pitcher; Howe, catcher; Kimball, first base; Richardson, second base; Brainard, third base; Alben, short stop; Brown, left field; Kitchen, centre field; Embleton, right field. Dunellen, Churchill, left field: Keller, catcher; Atchison, pitcher; Dellinan, centre field; Bellur, short stop; Peters, third base; Bogart, first base; Coriell, second base. A special feature of the game was the pitching by Sam Atchison and the catching by C. Kellar. The Dunellen team is doing fine work these days.

A close and exciting game was played yesterday between the Fanwood and the Scotch Plains nines, with the result of the Scotch Plains boys beating the Fanwooders by the score of nine to thirteen. The men lined up as follows: Fanwood, Johansen, S., left field; Douglass, B., second base; Quereau, N., catcher; Bartlett, O., third base; Bartlett, H., centre field; Briggs, R., short stop; Davie, G., pitcher; Collins, F., right field; Allen, G., first base. Scotch Plains, Macaply, U., right field; Flanery, H., short stop; Macanly, B., second base; Haskard, B., third base; Marsh, E., pitcher; Chapin, A., catcher; Reich, S., left field; Day, R., first base; Fitzgerald, R., centre field. The game was a close one up to the eighth inning when the Scotch Plains boys began to gain and from then to the close of the ninth inning the boys on the both teams worked hard. Tomorrow the same teams will meet again to decide which are the champions. Edward Hand umpired.

A YOUNG HERO.

Bound Brook Boy Prevents a Disastrous Railroad Accident.

Tuesday evening as Herbert Henry, who lives about a mile west of Bound Brook, says the Elizabeth Journal, was doing some chores about the barn he noticed that some empty coal cars, standing upon the side track of the P. & R. Railroad, were somewhat nearer the main track and switch than is usual. To satisfy his doubts as to the matter he climbed the fence and upon reaching the cars saw that his fears were confirmed, for one car was wholly upon the main track, and another partly so.

Knowing a through train to be nearly due, and that a serious wreck would most certainly occur, did he not stop the train, he without a moment's hesitation hastened to the house and procured a lantern, tying some red flannel around it. He then stationed himself several hundred yards down the track, just at a curve in the road which would have prevented the engineer of the train from seeing either the coal cars or the regular danger signal.

The train which soon approached, was a fast train leaving New York at 7:30 and due at Bound Brook at 8:33, and being behind time was running at a high rate of speed.

As it came around the curve young Henry swung the lantern to and fro, and was seen by the engineer, who hastily brought the train to a stop, but not until it was within a few yards of the coal cars on the main track.

This is the third time young Henry has prevented a wreck while living near the track, and it is certain the passengers feel that there is no one more worthy of recognition by the company than this young man.

CYCLING COMMENT.

George Sanders, of West Second street, who rode his wheel to Atbury Park on Wednesday, will return today the same way.

T. J. Carey, when down at Asbury Park yesterday, snapped the bar that goes from the seat to the crank on his new Spalding bicycle. He had the pleasure of walking the rest of the day.

Will Kreitling, of West Front street, went to Asbury Park yesterday with the intention of spending some time there, but he punctured the tire of his wheel and returned home. He expects to return to the shore tomorrow.

William W. Taxis, the ex-champion bicycle rider of Pennsylvania, who was so severely injured at the Crescent Oval, last year, has retired from the track for good. Taxis was one of the most unfortunate riders in Class B.

A large number of the Crescent Wheelmen rode their wheels to Asbury Park yesterday. When the First Baptist excursion passed through Mattawan in the morning the cyclists were seen at the station. Among those in the party were T. J. Carey, Fred Bird, Charles Lister, Bert Demarest, J. F. Buckle and several others.

Phillip Cottrell and Wren Townley, of this city, left Plainfield yesterday morning about three o'clock, on their wheels, to ride to Asbury Park. When New Brunswick was reached Mr. Cottrell punctured the tire on his rear wheel and was obliged to have it replaced with a new one. They arrived at the Park about ten o'clock in the morning.

The removal of the cranks from a bicycle is one of the most delicate of operations; to do it successfully the crank key should be driven tightly into place by striking its head and then driven out from the end, which is much reduced in size and threaded, and should be done with but one blow of the hammer. If the threaded end of the crank projects beyond the nut, loosen the nut until key and nut are exactly flush, otherwise remove nut entirely. Whatever is held against the opposite side must be heavy, so as to absorb the momentum of the hammer without injury to the shaft or bearing.

CLOSING SCENES OF THE WAR.

A Confederate Band Which Deserted in a Body to Washington.

In the latter part of the month of March, 1865, Washington saw many signs of collapse of the rebellion. The Confederate army appeared to be badly demoralized, and deserters, who arrived constantly in large numbers, reported that men from Alabama, Georgia, Florida and the Carolinas could not be expected to have any heart in a fight which then seemed only for the defense of Virginia, while their own States were overrun by the armies of the Union. During the month of March more than 3,000 deserters were received at Washington, and great numbers were quartered at Fort Monroe, Annapolis and other points nearer the lines, where they were put to work in the quartermaster's department or in the naval service.

One curiosity of the times was a Confederate regimental band which had deserted in a body with its instruments and was allowed to march through the streets of the national capital playing Union airs. This was one of the oddest signs of the final break up. People recalled a story, told by Hooker, that when the Union army scaled and occupied Lookout Mountain, a rebel sentry on duty on the crest of one of the most difficult precipices saw our men pile up in solid masses over steeps which had been thought inaccessible, and was so surprised that he forgot to run, but stood with feet rooted to the spot, watching the Union force climbing up and streaming past him, and driving the enemy far to the rear, until he was left alone, a statue of amazement. Recovering himself at last he threw down his musket, stripped off his rebel-gray jacket, stood on them both, and, looking far off to the sunny South, stretched out as a map below him, said, "How are you, Southern Confederacy?"

But notwithstanding such indications of a collapse of the rebellion, at this very time many Northern Union newspapers, led by Horace Greeley and others of his stamp, were demanding that appeals should be made to the Southern people "to stop the flow of blood and the waste of treasure," and that some message should be sent to the Southerners "so terse that it will surely be circulated, and so lucid that it cannot be misconstrued or perverted," by way of an invitation to cease fighting. Curiously enough, the nearer the time came for a final surrender, the more fervid was the demand for negotiation and appeal from the unreasonable radicals in the ranks of Northern Unionists. But all this was soon to end; and while a small party was asking, "Why not negotiate?" the downfall came.—Century.

Napoleon's Sardonic Pleasantries.

The King of Sweden had claimed representation both as Duke of Pomerania and as a guarantor of the peace of Westphalia; to that end he had sent as his delegate Count Fersen, a shrewd agent, once Swedish ambassador in Paris, the friend of Marie Antoinette, and known everywhere as an intimate counselor of the Bourbons. Bonaparte, outraged at such effrontery, summoned the envoy to his presence, and, trampling on the forms of a hollow politeness, informed him with a few biting words that his presence was not desired. The envoy tarried long enough to assure himself that Austria was quite as hostile as France, and returned to Stockholm. It annoyed Bonaparte even more to find that the imperial delegates had not yet arrived. But he passed the interval with considerable satisfaction in pleasantries with the various personages who were on the ground. "How," said he to a canon of Wurzburg, "can the station of an ecclesiastical prince of the empire, a man who is both warrior and spiritual minister, accord with the precepts of the Scriptures, with the poverty and lowliness of early Christianity?" "Where will your master live?" he said to the agent from the Bishop of Mainz, "when he loses his present residence?" The hollow shells of worn out institutions rattled wherever this innovator stopped.—Century.

He pleaded not guilty and retained George DeMeza as his counsel. The Judge adjourned the case until Monday morning in the City Court rooms.

Accidents Galore.

Ex-Coroner Dr. Alfred Q. Donovan, of Elizabeth, was drivng across Elizabeth avenue, yesterday, when he was run into by a trolley car. The hind part of his carriage was damaged and the doctor was thrown out, but he luckily escaped injury. This makes four trolley accidents in Elizabeth inside of two days and, it is said, that lack of caution on the part of the motormen was the cause in each case.

SANG FOR LINCOLN.

THE CAREER OF PHILLIP PHILLIPS THE SINGING PILGRIM.

An Evangelist and Composer Who Has Been Heard Sing and Whose Works Have Been Sung in All Civilized Parts of the World.

Phillip Phillips was one of the best known evangelist in this country and the composer of numerous hymns which are sung by most Protestant denominations in Europe and in the United States.

Mr. Philips was born in Chautauqua county, N. Y., on August 13, 1864. His father and mother were earnest members of the Baptist Church. He was the teenth of fifteen children, and his mother died when he was about nine years old.

To her influence the evangelist often attributed his religious inclinations. As a child Phillips attracted attention by his singing. He had a voice of great range and sweetness, and his musical talents were as marked. The few opportunities he had for musical study were seized eagerly, but they were few, and after his mother's death it looked for awhile as if they would be taken from him.

The largeness of the family made it necessary for young Phillips to be apprenticed to a farmer for six years. He was to be instructed in the art of farming and dairying, to be provided with food and clothing, and sent to school for three months each year. At the end of his term he was to receive a new Bible and two suits of clothes, one to be of common quality and one to be a handsome suit.

There was no mention of musical instruction in the indenture, but the young apprentice's talents impressed his master so strongly that he bought him a melodeun and permitted him to use it on the condition that it did not interfere with his duties.

This was really the beginning of Phillips' musical studies. Soon after this, during a revival at Delanti, N. Y., young Phillips was converted. He became an earnest worker in the Good Templar movement, and began his career as a singing missionary.

When only nineteen years old he opened his first singing school at Allegany, N. Y. For a while his time was devoted exclusively to his profession. He studied under Dr. Lowell Mason and others, taught church and school music, and sold musical instrnments. But his preference was at all times for religious work.

Phillips' first revival services were held in the church at Delanti, N. Y., of which Dr. A. Wheelock was the pastor. The services lasted several weeks, and Mr. Phillips, who sang and played the organ, was so successful that he was asked to go to Ohio to hold services. He accepted the call, and held his first services at the Baptist church in Marion, where he met Miss Olive M. Clark, afterward his wife. His first published work, a cantata called "Esther," appeared at this time. It was followed in 1860 by a collection of songs called "Early Blossoms," of which more than 20,000 copies were sold. At that time he changed from the Baptist to the Methodist Church and settled in Cincinnati, where he formed the publishing firm which afterward printed his songs and books. Then he brought out "Musical Leaves," of which more than 700,000 copies were sold, and soon afterward it appeared an arrangement of "Pilgrim's Progress" under the name of the "Singing Pilgrim." It was so successful that the name was later frequently applied to the composer and became his familiar title over the whole world. Once Mr. Phillips sang in Washington for the United States Christian Commission. Among those present were President Lincoln, William H. Seward, Schuyler, Colfax, Edwin M. Stanton, James G. Blaine and James A. Garfield. After Mr. Phillips hrd sung his famous hymn, "Your Mission," this note was handed to William H. Seward, the Chairman:

"Near the close let us have 'Your Mission' repeated by Mr. Phillips. Don't say I called for it. LINCOLN."

This request of the President's got into the newspapers and Phillips found himself famous. In all parts of the country the people wanted to hear the gospel singer. In 1865 all his property was destroyed by fire, and Mr. Phillips moved to New York, where he held numerous religious services. In 1868 he went to England and sang in Spurgeon's Tabernacle and at the Temperance Convention and in the Crystal Palace. Four years later he went back to England and gave 150 concerts. Returning to the United States he settled for a while in San Francisco. Later he traveled with Evangelist Moody in the West and South.

On March 8, 1875, he sailed from San Francisco on a three years' tour around the world. He held services in New Zealand, the Sandwich Islands, and through Australia and India. He sang also in Ceylon and Madras and the Holy Land. Reaching Europe, he sang for four months on the Continent, and many of these services were gratuitously given. In England he gave over 200 song services, and one temperance meeting held there was attended by 40,000 people.

An Estrangement.

Ethel—She is no friend of mine. I'm not on speaking terms with her now; we only kiss when we meet.—Boston Transcript.

It is hard to conceive of Mr. Gladstone as a lightning change artist, but it is on record that, several years ago he entered a cab on Downing street in ordinary dress upon the occasion of a hurried departure for a great social function, and alighted at the door of the St. James' Palace in the resplendent official toggery of the Prime Minister of England.

PIE LORE.

The Custom of Eating Pie in the Fingers Introduced by the Puritans.

All the Puritans ate pie held in their fingers. The Pilgrims, an inferior people, who landed on the south shore of Massachusetts Bay, acquired the habit of eating pies from the Puritans, who imported the first seeds for pie fruits into this country, as may be seen by the manifest of the first ship sent out by the Governor and Company of the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

The original manifest is in the archives at the State House in Boston; and it shows that "64 pye platters and 300 pyrs of Irish woolen stockings" were packed in one box set in a case of apple, cherry and other seeds. After the Puritans and Pilgrims intermarried, the custom of eating pie with knives was introduced for indoor meals, but for fishing excursions, clambakes and militia musters the good old custom of taking pie in the hand continues from Newburyport even unto the far end of Cape Cod.

All sorts of juicy fruit pies are eaten on Cape Cod in this way. The cuts are carried to the mouth by the right hand; the left hand is held underneath the right as a reservoir for the juice. The true art of eating fruit pies is only understood by Cape Cod girls, who never spill a drop of berry juice on their gowns, nor drope a flake of pie crust on their chins.

When the custom of eating pie with knives was introduced by the Anglomaniacs of the eighteenth century, many accidents befell the knife users, who became scarred all about their mouths by cuts from the sharp scimetar pattern steel knives made in England. After a time dull knives were introduced; then an inventor made a knife with a straight blade and rounded point; next came the fashion of silver plating the dulled knives, and for forty years 99 per cent. of the table knives used in this Commonwealth have been as dull as hoes; all on account of the necessity of catering to pie eaters.

Steel knives with sharp blades are never seen hereabouts, except in fashionable clubs, the mansions of cultivated persons, and in hotels patronized by New Yorkers, Westerners and Southerners.

Pie has been banished from seven clubs and four hotels in Boston. The consumption thereof has declined 50 to 75 per cent. in the past decade in the ee famous downtown hotels in the city of Boston.

"Parker's," in the days when Daniel Webster taught Harvey Parker how to make fish chowder and Bunker Hill punch, used to list twenty kinds of pie on its bill of fare. In those days a cook was judged on the goodness of his pork and beans, chowder, fried scrod, cream of tartar biscuits and pies.

Nowadays the chef finds no place on his menu for those toothsome delicacies of long ago, except at Parker's or Young's where nine kinds of pie and two kinds of chowder are made. But if old Daniel Webster could rise from the dead and see the pie and chowder of to-day, he would groan in heaviness of spirit.

PASSING OF THE BAD MAN.

His Heyday Was From About 1855 Until Perhaps 1870.

The Courier-Journal says: That far Western character known as the "bad man" is rapidly passing away. Here and there one still lives, flourishing modestly—and harmlessly—on the capital he acquired when laws were without form and void; here and there one makes occasional abortive attempts to retrace his steps, and dance the gay flings of his youth, but the times and the marshals are against him. Somehow he cannot always understand it—the things that used to ennoble a man above all other achievements are more lightly esteemed than they used to be. To his intense disgust, if his heart be yet turbulent, he finds that filling up with wild liquor has become disreputable and the killing of a man unsafe.

From 1855 to 1870 was about the limit of the "bad man" era, and his country was anywhere from the Missouri river to the Pacific coast. Since the latter time no man has enjoyed a long career as a "killer." Even in the newest mining camps and the wildest cattle towns the force of the lawful man has been so early felt that after one or two indulgences in murder, however strong the provocation, the "bad man" has usually "sloped" and left his little reputation to grow up by itself; whereas in the old days he would have steadfastly remained in the region of its birth, cultivating it, and adding to it whenever well, whenever a safe occasion arose.

Lawsuits Fewer in England.

The millennium seems to be at hand in England. Law cases, which have been steadily diminishing in number of late years, were so few at the Easter term of courts that in the Queen's Bench, though three of the Judges were withdrawn for other duties, it was likely that the others would be left with nothing to do before the end of the term, and in the Court of Appeal the Judges could easily keep abreast of their work, sitting only five days in the week.

The Superior Courts give decisions in many instances in from three to five weeks, which is quicker than was possible two years ago, and sooner than a decision can be obtained in the County Courts. In the Equity Court, if cases do not proceed so fast, matters are in such a condition that it is hard to believe there could be a time when the business before the Judges would occupy them "for at least three years to come, though no fresh business were to come before them."

In all the Courts, save the Probate and Divorce Court, there is a penury of suits. There is less to do and it is done more quickly, and the number of applicants for admission to the bar has never been so small.

THE JUMBO OF GAS WELLS.

Blowing Away at the Rate of Eighty Million Feet a Day.

The Big Moses gas well, on the Spencer farm, on Indian Creek, Tyler county, W. Va., struck by lightning the other day, extinguished itself the same evening, after consuming the derrick and all the combustible matter within reach. The pressure was so great that it simply blew itself out, after furnishing the natives of that country with one of the grandest sights ever witnessed. The flames at no time descended nearer than 40 feet of the hole, and the swaying to and fro of the great mysterious invisibly supported flambeau, hundreds of feet high, to which was added a deafening roar, made a spectacle awe-inspiring and terrible.

Nothing had ever before been struck that approached the Big Moses in magnitude. The pent-up pressure, when furnished an avenue of escape through an 8 1-4 inch hole, for three months defied every effort to bring it under control. The earth trembled within 1,000 feet of the well, and the roaring monster could be distinctly heard for a distance of twelve miles. No accurate gauge of this Jumbo of all Jumbos has ever been taken. At one time a partial test was made with an ordinary steam gauge, and it showed a pressure of 44 pounds from an 8 1-4 inch opening. At another time, from a 3 inch opening, it showed a pressure of 600 pounds the first fifteen seconds. Then attempts at a complete test had to be abandoned.

When flowing through the casing its daily capacity was estimated by experts to be from 80,000,000 to 120,000,000 cubic feet a day. It was struck in November of last year and during the time since then the valuable fluid went to waste. Taking the lowest estimate, 80,000,000 feet a day, and compute its value at 25 cents per 1,000 cubic feet, as charged by the city gas companies, for a period of six months, and the result presents an array of figures too great for the comprehension of the human mind, when reduced to the "coin of the realm."

The owners expended $5,000 in shutting the well in, and three months after it broke through and forced its way up through the surface. A powerful pump was then set up near the well, and for five days they pumped water into the monster with the hope that the gas pressure could be crowded back, and give them a chance to put in a packer; but their efforts proved futile, for the water was again forced to the surface from fissures that it made, and the result was dozens of geysers spurting up into the air. Some of them even made their appearance almost a half mile from the well.

Some idea of the noise that it makes may be had when it is stated that two persons standing side by side find it impossible to converse understandingly within a half mile of the well. The owners will not abandon all hope of shutting it in. They expect to begin work on it again shortly.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

ELECRIC MOTORS HAUL FREIGHT.

Nearly 500 Tons in Sixteen Cars Taken at 25 Miles an Hour.

Motor car 2,500 on the electrical branch of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad pulled and pushed between 450 and 500 tons in a haulage trial. From the standpoint of practical railroading, this test was of far greater value than the speed test held a short time ago.

The test gave great satisfaction both to the officers of the road and the representatives of the company which furnished the electrical equipments. For about two hours the inward track between the Old Colony House station and Nantasket was used in experimenting with the new power, the tests all being in the line of haulage. The opinion was expressed by several of those directly interested that the motors could easily handle twice and even three times the tonnage hauled in this trial.

Motor. No. 2,500, a car equipped with four motors, was started by Col. Heft and run to the Old Colony House station.

There a train of eleven heavily loaded freight cars was coupled to the motor car. Those in the motor car hardly noticed a quiver as the car slowly started.

There was nothing in the start demonstrative of power. No. 2,500 just took up its load and ran off with it. There was no effort to make speed, but with lots of power to spare, the train was run at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour or more.

A locomotive then hauled five more heavily laden cars from a siding to the main track and coupled them on the train of eleven cars. The haul was then increased to over 440 tons, but the car took them all down the road and pushed them back again as easily as it did the first haul.

It seemed after the test that the capacity of the motors was almost without limit, but whatever the limit may be the trial satisfied the officers of the road that the electrical equipment was alike practical for passenger and freight service.

PRETTY COTTAGE FOR $1,800.

How a Seashore or Mountain Home Can be Built at Small Cost.

(Copyright 1895 by the Co-operative Building Plan Association, N. Y.)

If there is one thing more than another for which Americans are noted it is that they are practicable. It is not that they are lacking in the finer qualities, but the country is young, and for years they have been forced to wage a constant struggle with the realities of existence. The wilderness and the desert have been conquered and "made to blossom like the rose," and problems are to be met every day that long ago were settled by older countries. Scores of cities can be pointed out that were barren prairies but a few years ago. In all of our settlements there is restless growth and ceaseless activity.

Despite their devotion to business, Americans are finding time for brief sojourns in the mountains and by the seashore. The annual vacation period is increasing in length and Americans are learning to enjoy outdoor life. Hundreds of city dwellers of moderate means have found it possible to build comfortable homes for the summer months away from the heat and bustle of the crowded streets.

What could be more homelike than the cottage pictured here, with its broad veranda, its pleasing effect of roof construction, vieing in artistic appearance with surrounding nature herself? The cost of the house, as shown by the perspective view and the two floor plans, is $1,800, not including mantels and range, which are generally selected after the owner's own taste. The estimate is based on New York prices for materials and labor, and in many sections of the country the cost would be less.

Its general dimensions are: Extreme width, 50 feet 6 inches; depth, including veranda and porch, 48 feet 6 inches; first story, 9 feet high; second story, 8 feet. Exterior materials: Foundations, stone piers; walls of first story, gables, and roof, shingles. Interior finish: Two coats plaster, hard white finish; soft wood flooring and trim; staircase, ash; chair rail in kitchen and dining-room. All interior woodwork finished in hard oil. These general dimensions and materials may be changed, and as to colors, would offer a suggestion: Shingles on first story and gables, pearl gray; trim including water table, corner boards, casings, bands, etc., white; sashes and shingle roofs, dark green; veranda, floor and ceiling oiled.

The principal rooms, their sizes, closets, etc., are shown by the floor plans. No cellar or blinds. Open fireplaces in first story hall, making a cheerful and attractive room in itself. Portiere opening between parlor and hall; servant's bedroom off kitchen; good sized room for storage in second story.

Second Floor

This design is capable of many feasible modifications. A cellar may be put under a whole or a portion of the house with inside and outside entrances and concrete floor; bath room could be introduced in second story, with full or partial set of plumbing. Open fireplaces may be introduced in parlor and dining room. A brick set range may be placed in the kitchen. This design also presents a very attractive appearance if it is run up a half story more, with a mansard roof. Let it be by the seaside or on the slopes of the mountain, with broad veranda inviting repose; everything around is restful, and a man gains rest and strength in peaceful enjoyment.

Last June Dick Crawford brought his twelve-months-old child, suffering from infantile diarrhœa, to me. It had been weaned at four months old and had always been sickly. I gave it the usual treatment in such cases but without benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born, or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25 cent size had been used a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny constitution disappeared, and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by this remedy. J. T. Marlow, M. D., Tamaroa, Ill. For sale by Reyuolds' Pharmacy, Park and North Avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

W. H. Nelson, who is in the drug business at Kingville, Mo., has so much confidence in Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy that he warrants every bottle and offers to refund the money to any customer who is not satisfied after using it. Mr. Nelson takes no risk in doing this because the remedy is a certain cure for the diseases for which it is intended and he knows it. It is for sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North Avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

A horse kicked H. S. Shafer, of the Freemyer House, Middleburg, N. Y., on the knee, which laid him up in bed and caused the knee joint to become stiff. A friend recommended him to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which he did, and in two days was able to be around. Mr. Shafer has recommended it to many others and says it is excellent for any kind of a bruise or sprain. This same remedy is also famous for its cures of rheumatism. For sale by Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

It May Do as Much For You.

Electric Bitters is especially adapted to cure all Kidney and Liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c for large bottle, at L. W. AN EDITOR'S IGNORANCE.

CRITICISES SOMETHING HE KNOWS NOTHING ABOUT.

The Courier-News Rants About the Sewer Bonds Without the Slightest Intelligence of the Facts.

The Courier-News editor waxed warm yesterday in his sheet, the type on which is set by three-dollar-a-week compositors, about the action of the common council and mayor in reference to their action in making arrangements to pay the sewer indebtedness which is now being incurred by the city. He devoted a half column in berating the city officials by arguments so full of errors, and so absurd, that they were ridiculous. A sample of his harum-scarum statements is the one that the city is to pay five per cent, when as a matter of fact the interest mentioned for the proposed loan is four per cent. But a little matter of one per cent out of the way cuts no figure with the collegiate editor. Letting the rest of his statements stand on a par with the above, which for veracity, they do, the fact is the city has no bonds to offer for sale, or invite bids for, at the present time. Not a bond can be issued until the sewers are completed and the commissioners appointed to assess benefits, and their report approved and finally confirmed by the Common Council. Until this is done the amount of bonds to be issued cannot be determined upon. Under the most favorable circumstances this cannot be done under a year, and it may be eighteen months and possibly two years. The effort of the finance commitee has been to take advantage of the present low rates for money to negotiate the bonds to be issued, without risking the changes that may occur in the money market during the next year or two. In the meantime the city has to borrow the money on its notes, having a year to run, to complete the sewers. These notes have been offered to a number of institutions in this city and New York, and four and a half per cent is the best rate of interest that any of them have been willing to take them at. Banks, trust companies and banking houses were applied to but no offer better than four and one half could be obtained, until Messrs. Fisk & Sons sent in their proposition to loan the city what money it needs, up to one hundred thousand dollars, to complete the sewers and take the city notes at four per cent., and to receive payment for them in cash or in the four per cent. bonds of the city when issued, be it sooner or later. The acceptance of this proposition gives to the city all the money that it will be compelled to borrow at four per cent, and guarantees the sale of its bonds when issued on the same basis. That this is a very favorable negotiation for the city no one competent to judge will deny, and The Courier editor who argues to the contrary, only exposes his ignorance.

Very few municipal bonds are negotiated on a four per cent. basis, and then only in States where savings bank and other trust investments are restricted by law, and are consequently very scarce, and where municipal bonds are made available for such purposes.

The city is certainly to be congratulated on the outcome of this negotiation, notwithstanding the foolish attempts of The Courier to have people believe that something is wrong.

A Freak of Nature.

Dr. Branin, of Blackwood, had a most remarkable case of childbirth in his practice a few days ago. He was called in to attend a farmer's wife who was one of his regular patients, and the outcome of the case was a child on the Siamese twins order. There were two perfect heads, two bodies joined together at the side, and four arms, all of which were apparently perfect. There were three legs, one of which was only partly formed, having no foot but ending in a great toe and an ordinary nail. The arms on the side of the bodies that were joined were crossed over the back, and looked as though they would have been useless in further development. The child was born alive, but died in a few minutes. It was photographed and then properly interred. The mother is doing well.

Found Unconscious Beside the Track.

W. Turner, aged nineteen, of London, England, was brought to the hospital in Elizabeth yesterday morning suffering from several broken ribs and two bad scalp wounds. He was riding on top of a boxcar on the fast freight bound for Long Branch on the Jersey Central road, and in some manner was either thrown from or knocked off the car at Port Reading. He was lying unconscious beside the tracks. He will recover. The young man has been a month in America.

TERRIFIC HAIL STORM.

Does Much Damage in Plainfield This Afternoon.

A terrific hail storm commenced at 3:15 p. m. today, during which stones as large as hen eggs fell. Much damage was done.

Horses were unhitched in the street and taken under awnings to escape injury, windows were broken in houses and conservatories.

The hail storm lasted five minutes and developed into a severe thunder shower.

A DAY IN THE WOODS.

Keyser's Woods the Scene of a Grand Family Picnic, Yesterday.

One of the advantages of living in suburbs is that of going picnicing at any time, and yesterday several East Sixth street families took advantage of their opportunities and held a picnic in Keyser's woods, at the corner of Webster place and Putnam avenue. The day was spent most enjoyably in games and other outdoor amusements while the always ready refreshments took the most of the noon hour.

Those who enjoyed this pleasant outing were:

Mrs. Frank S. Templin, of East Sixth street, her mother-in-law, Mrs. Templin, her sister Mrs. Gonegan, Molly Templin, Edmund Templin, Emily Templin, Mrs. Mary B. Hill, of East Sixth street, Oliver Hill, Florence Hill, Juliet Hill, Mrs. Alonzo W. Weseman, of East Sixth street, Margaret Weseman, Edwin Weseman, Elmer Weseman, Ethel Weseman, Mrs. Willard M. Miner, of Ease Sixth street, Beatrice Miner, Vincent Miner, Mrs. Herbert D. Templin, of North avenue, Arthur and Anna Templin.

A Penny Saved

is not always a penny earned, for though you may at first save a penny purchasing a pair of glasses at a cheap John or a general merchandise establishment, the investment will surely cause you increased trouble and expense later on. It will be money in your pocket to have your eyes supplied with glasses that are scientifically adjusted to their requirements, and at Collier's, 103 Park avenue, you will have a gurantee of securing this result.

Secured An Engagement.

Thomas Schaffer, of Somerset street, has secured an engagement with Bentley's old-fashioned one ring circus, which is exhibiting at Seventy-ninth street in New York, to give his club juggling and baton throwing act for two weeks. After this he will go to Asbury Park, where, under the management of Walter S. Gibson, he will perform for the summer season.

Nothing But the Best.

Thomas Parker, who is managing the place kept by the late James Conneely, is an ald resident of Somerville and well known throughout Somerset County. Mr. Parker has kept a wholesale liquor store in Somerville for the past twenty years, and comes to this city well recommended. His experience in this line of trade will guarantee the public that none but the best of goods will be dispensed by him.

Bossy Scared at the Trolley.

A cow walking along Somerset street yestesday afternoon about 5:30, in charge of a small boy, was scared by the trolley car and ran into the office of the large feed store, nearly opposite H. N. Spencer's. The ocw was much frightened, and it was with difficulty that the boy succeeded in getting her home.

Compliment to Daily Press Work.

A member of the Monday Afternoon Club writing to a friend out of town says: "The new calendar is out. It is neatly gotten up, on good paper, and good type, with a corduroy cover that looks both strong and handsome. It is a credit to the club and the printer." The calendar was published by The Daily Press.

Liable to Revoke the Charter.

Unless some communication is received ftom John Kean, who owns the Morris Avenue Railroad franchise in Elizabeth, which has been in operation for the last twenty-five years, the city council will revoke the charter at its next meeting.

A Different Man.

It is George Lewis, colored, who is awaiting action of the grand jury for alleged larceny, and not George Lewis, the former meat dealer of this city.

Some Were Left.

A number of persons who "got left" by the train leaving Asbury Park, on the Baptist excursion Thursday, reached home yesterday after some chequered experiences.

TIE FOR FIRST PLACE.

The Progress of the Tennis Tournament on Henry Ryder's Courts.

The number of matches won and lost are as follows:

	WON.	LOST.
H. Ryder	4	0

G. Ryder	1	1
F. Fish	1	1
F. Goddard	1	1
C. Morgan	1	2
A. Hartley	0	3
R. Simpson	0	2
T. Smith	0	1

It will be hardly possible to complete the tournament by today so it will probably extend into next week.

Mayor Rankin to Move.

Since the Ninth Ward of Elizabeth has got to be too Democratic for Mayor Rankin he has decided to remove to the Twelfth, which is the aristocratic portion of the city. The Mayor has lived in the Ninth ward since he came to Elizabeth, nearly a quarter of a century ago. It was there he gained his first political success. He was called the Boss of the ward for years or until the Democrats by adding a slice of the Third ward upset the Mayor's supremacy. He has purchased the Graves or Kellogg property on the Newark Boulevard. His present residence is now for sale.

J. W. Pitman's Body Found.

The body of James W. Pitman, of 214 Franklin street, Elizabeth, has been found floating in Newark Bay. Pitman was sixty-one years of age, and a ropemaker by trade. He leaves two daughters and a sister, who is the mother of Dr. Fisk, of 258 West Fifty-seventh street, New York. County Physician Converse has refused to grant a permit for burial pending an examination. Suicide is suspected. Pitman had not been seen by his relatives since last Sunday, when he visited his sister.

Will Soon Go on the Warpath.

Miantonomoh Tribe of Red Men met last night. The parade committee made their report and were discharged with thanks for their very efficient service. The committee on the death of Great Prophet Brown also reported. A committee of three, David E. Allen, W. A. Westphal and Charles Holdstein, were appointed to make arrangements for an excursion to Rockaway. It will probably take place on Saturday, August 10th.

Cured at the Hospital.

Harry Seymour, of the street railway, has now fully recovered from the operation which was performed at the hospital. Mr. Seymour wishes to state through The Daily Press columns his hearty appreciation of the treatment and services rendered to him by those in attendance at the hospital, as it was entirely due to them that he recovered.

Not Ready to Close Up.

The executive and financial committees of the Fourth of July celebration met last evening to close up their business, but did practically nothing in that direction, owing to the delay in getting the bills and subscriptions in. Later on a detailed statement will be mode.

For Circulation.

From the Rev. William R. Richards the Public Library has received the volume entitled, "Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church, Plaindfield, N. J., Semi-centennial, March 21, 1894. Lear book." It will belong to the circulating department.

An Expert Amateur.

Edward Hazen, of Watchung avenue, who is one of Plainfield's best amateur photographers, has just purchased a very fine new camera of English make, and has been testing its usefulness.

Broke Out.

A dog belonging to Frank Kesselring, of the borough, was captured yesterday and put in the pound. Last night he got loose and went home.

A NOTED PHYSICIAN DEAD.

DR. CHAUNCEY M. FIELDS PASSES OVER THE GREAT RIVER.

A Man Admired and Loved By All—Democratic in Dispotition—An Extensive Traveller.

Last night at half past nine o'clock in his apartments in the Hotel Grenada occurred the death of Dr. Chauncey Mitchell Fields, whose reputation as a skillful and successful physician and surgeon is world wide. For some time Dr. Fields has been suffering with an internal ailment, and Thursday morning he was found in an unconscious condition in his room by Wallace V. Miller, one of the proprietors of the hotel. Medical attendance in the person of Dr. Davis was immediately summoned. After making an examination Dr. Davis found that the condition of Mr. Fields was precarious and Dr. Keeney, who had attended him in his previous illness, was sent for. These two physicians immediately applied remedies to bring him to a conscious state, but their efforts at first seemed to have no effect. Drs. Woodhouse and Rushmore were also summoned later, and working at intervals, together with a number of relatives and friends of Dr. Fields, who had been apprised of his illness, he was finally brought out of the comatose state at about ten o'clock Thursday evening. From that time up to a short time before he died he seemed to gradually rally from his sudden prostration. Though he suffered intense pain continuously he conversed intelligently and gave orders to those attending as to the treatment they should give him.

About twenty five minutes after nine last night he commenced to again show signs of failing, and at half past nine he rose up in bed, uttered a few words and fell back and expired immediately.

The funeral services will be held Monday afternoon from the residence of his uncle, Isaac N. Field, 244 East Ninth street, at 2:30. He will be interred in the family plot at Bound Brook.

Chauncey Mitchell Field was born in Brooklyn, March 27th, 1850, and was the third son of Richard R. and Margaretta Field. His early life was spent in Brooklyn and when old enough, attended the public school at Clinton, New York State. After concluding his studies there he went to Lawrenceville, this State, where he took a preparatory course for college. He graduated with high honors and entered Princeton college.

While at Princeton he was very active in athletics and especially so in baseball events. In his studies he was quick to grasp and hold the many subjects which he took up and there, too, he graduated with honors, being among the first ten of the class of 1871. His ambition seemed to be in the direction of medicine and surgery and wishing to complete his studies he entered the college of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, where he again graduated with great credit. Upon the completion of the course he went to Bound Brook and assumed the practice of Dr. Smith, where he remained for a time. At this time he had a number of patients in Plainfield and later decided to move here which he did. His practice increased until his business was so great that his health was impaired.

He found it necessary to give up his work for a time, and traveled through Europe for the benefit of his health. From that time he never resumed his regular practice though he did not give it up entirely. He went to Europe three times and traveled extensively. Last fall he visited the West Indies and there he succeeded in reaching a peculiar tribe of natives that he had on several occasions desired to know about. On his return he visited his brothers in Florida, and from there he came to Plainfield, and rented apartments in the Hotel Grenada. He had a small practice and it was his intention of securing a house and resuming full practice. The number of delicate and difficult operations performed by Dr. Field will never be known. He performed operations that other physicians would not, and an old friend remarked today that he had known the doctor to successfully perform four or five delicate operations in one day.

The doctor had a thoroughly democratic disposition and was kind and affable to all alike, no matter what might be their condition or station in life.

There are hundreds of people today who owe their lives to him, and his many charitable acts and attentions exhibited to all with whom he came in contact will never be forgotten. If people called him in sickness and distress he always came, and it made no difference to him whether they were poor or rich, they would receive the best it was possible for him to give or prescribe.

Dr. Field leaves one of the finest records in surgery and medicine in the country. One of the last of his operations, and one which has been called the crowning one of his life was performed in January, 1894, on the three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Runyon, who was named after the doctor.

The operation saved the little one's life, and his careful attention and peculiar interest in little Chauncey was indeed touching.

Dr. Field's mother died Nov. 25th, 1887, and his father, who was so well known here for his Christian work, passed away March 18th, 1892.

There were five children, Chauncey M., Richard, Jacob, Albert and Florence. The first three were born in Brooklyn, Albert was born in St. Louis and Florence in Bound Brook. Richard and Albert are now in Florida, Jacob lives on North avenue in this city. Florence died several years ago.

Think the Plans Were Costly.

There is considerable talk among the contractors who bid on the new State Prison addition a few days ago over the price they were compelled to pay in order to secure a set of the plans and specifications. The contracts were awarded by the State Prison Commission last Monday, and twenty-five bids were considered. Out of this number no less than twenty paid over to the commission the sum of $25 for a set to be used in estimating the cost of the work. For those who did not care to pay the sum mentioned a set of the plans were placed in the office at the State Prison and another set was placed in the office of the architect at Newark, and the bidders could go to either place and look them over. After the contract had been awarded the talk began. The out-of-town bidders freely denounced the whole transaction, but as there was nothing left to do but grin and bear it, it is supposed they are grinning—and bearing it yet.

Fatal Runaway.

A serious runaway accident took place Thursday afternoon about four o'clock, in which Mrs. F. S. Sarboneti, of Westfield township, was killed, and Miss Mary McConn, of Rahway, was dangerously injured by the running away of a horse attached to a vehicle in which they were riding. The horse became unmanageable, and both women were thrown out. Mrs. Sarboneti had her skull fractured, and died about an hour afterwards. Miss McConn is in a critical condition and her recovery is doubtful.

Doane & Edsall Up to Date.

The latest bicycle invention is the bicycle ladder for use in shoe stores. Four wheels support the upper end and run on a circular rail and two wheels on the bottom run on the floor. By this the salesman is enabled to move himself the whole length of the store and still reach the top rows without trouble. Doane & Edsall, the ever-progressive shoe dealers, have just placed two of these very handy ladders in their store.

A Parish Loss.

Scotch Plains Episcopal parish is about to suffer a heavy loss in the removal of Frank W. Quereau and family to New York city. Mr. Quereau's services as organist, and Miss Querau's as the leading soprano of the choir, have been highly appreciated by the rector and his entire congregation, and the best wishes of all the parish will follow them to their new home.

Clerks Will Sue.

Papers are being prepared in a suit to be brought against Newark, for one month's salary by several of the clerks or assessors in the tax office, who were removed by resolution of the Tax Board on June 8th last. James R. Nugent has been retained by the men who propose to sue, and a summons will likely be served on the city tomorrow.

Purple and White Against Blue and Gold.

In the field day, which takes place in the latter part of August, between the athletes of the Monroe Avenue and Hope chapels, the Monroe Avenue boys will wear purple and white as their colors, while blue and gold will designate the Hope chapel supporters.

Pioneer Sunday Closer to Move.

P. M. Decker, the North avenue barber, will remove from the Hotel Grenada to the store recently occupied by Caleb Dickinson on the same thoroughfare next week.

The Bicycle Engine.

The celebrated bicycle engine which has been the subject of much comment, passed through Plainfield yesterday afternoon, attached to a Royal Blue liner, on its way to New York. It was much admired by those who saw it.

THE RACING AT ASBURY

Maddox To Go for the Five-Mile Record To-day.

Many Brilliant Events and Thousands of Enthusiastic Spectators. More Interest in the Races Than in the Numerous Other Attractions and Recreations.

Asbury Park, N. J., July 13.—As the national meet of the League of American Wheelmen draws to a close the attendant crowds increase, and this morning this pretty little seaside resort is more thronged with visitors than ever before in its history. More interest is taken in the racing events than in the other attractions, the twenty-six preliminary events yesterday attracting an audience of fully 5,000 spectators. The trials were for the most part well worth seeing and the scarcity of accident again was as welcome as it was unexpected. Two or three bad tumbles occurred, however, in one of which Frank D. White, of Lynbrook, L. I., got a nasty shaking up.

New Entries in Professionalism.

A big surprise was the appearance in the professional event of Conn Baker, the modest Ohio man, and I. A. Silvie of Staten Island, who have previously figured in class "B." O. S. Bunnell, the veteran promoter of cash prize races, who has been here all the week putting in his most artful work to the end of making professionalism popular and paying. The "B" men, however, were unable to make a showing in the money race owing to the execrable handicapping which put them on scratch, and Alva Stewart on the 130-yard mark.

Race Between Little Boys.

The other features of extraordinary and unusual character were the "quad" race, Zimmerman and Dirnberger's trials against time, and the one-third mile handicap race between two very small boys, Masters Louis Benner, aged 4, and John J. Benner, 6 years old. Louis had a start of 165 yards and this proved just sufficient to see him through to the tape a length ahead of Johnny.

Quad Race Against Time.

The "quad" race was run against time, each team going a mile on its own hook, the one making the fastest trip receiving the prize, this policy being necessary by the danger of starting the two "quads" entered at the same time.

New World's Quad Record.

Peter Berlo's four-seated machine, manned by L. B. Callahan, Nat Butler, A. McLeod and F. Haggerty, went a superb mile in 1:50 3-5, a new world's quad record. Githens, Seavey, Mayo and J. Coburn pushed the Syracuse machine over the tape in 1:55 flat.

Other New Records.

"King" Michael Dirnberger, paced by the latter "quad" established a new track and state amateur record, riding handsomely in 2:01. His fractional times were: Third, 40 3-5; two-thirds, 1:20. But it was lucky that Michael did his little turn before Arthur Augustus Zimmerman, the champion of everywhere, took it into his head to ride a mile behind the professional "quad" manned by Starbuck, Cutler, Baker and Bartholomew.

Zimmerman's Fastest Mile.

"Zim" has ridden fast miles elsewhere at one time or another, but he resolved to give his neighbors and fellow farmers of Squan a little finer specimen of the article than that to which they were accustomed, and he cruised around three times in 1:58 4-5, the third time being made in 39 1-5 and two-thirds in 1:13 1-5. This is the fastest mile ever ridden by the only "Zim" in this country, and considering the fact that the champion is out of condition it is wonderful time.

Red Hot and Uncertain to the End.

The regular racing events brought out much enthusiasm of which the class "B" competition won the most. These were a two-mile handicap, two-thirds mile open, and half mile national championship. These events were red hot and uncertain to the end. Church, the new class "B" man, captured the handicap by a short length from Davidson, the Canadian, with Monte Scott close behind.

A Battle Royal.

The two-third mile open for a trip to Europe and return was a battle royal. Bald, Porter, Murphy, Gardiner, Coulter and Jenny lined up at the start, and gambled for position until the quarter pole was passed. Then Coulters went out and the field scrambled after him. At the head of the stretch Bald was fourth and seemed to be beaten, but Gardiner and Coulter swung wide in turning and the Buffalo boy cut by them at the pole, running home in a driving finish a wheel ahead of Charley Murphy, who had loomed up on the outside.

Half Mile National Championship.

After some trick riding by Sid Black the half mile national championship was called with Murphy, Zeigler, Bald and McDonald on the mark. Just as the bell sounded the fun began. Murphy went ahead and stayed there until the last turn, when Bald and McDonald flashed by him with Zeigler on the outside. Down the stretch came the two Columbia boys abreast straining every nerve.

Bald Given the Race.

At the tape McDonald made a supreme effort, and in trying to fling himself over first raised his front wheel clear off the ground in the attempt. To many in the stand it looked like McDonald's race, and Bald, thinking the same, rode in with his perennial smile for once submerged in grief. But the judges decided on Bald as the winner. Things were so even that none could contradict them.

"A" Events Were Tedious.

In the A events, which grew tedious through their multiplicity, Tom Butler, H. E. Winters and Walter Douglas were the stars. This afternoon Harry Maddox will go for the five-mile record, with quad, triplet and tandem pace.

Blew Open the Safe.

Plattsburg, N. Y., July 13.—Burglars entered Clark Bros. general store at Peru, near here, Thursday night and blew open the safe. They secured a few dollars in cash and considerable clothing. The police are on their trail.

Searching for Missing Students.

Geneva, N. Y., July 13.—The only additional clew to missing students Coxe and May is the finding of the four oars of their boat on the opposite shore from where the boat was discovered.

MILLIKEN INDICTED.

Senator Harris' Private Secretary Accused of House Breaking.

Washington, July 13.—The grand jury has returned a true bill against Benjamin Harrison Milliken, private secretary of Senator Harris of Tennessee, for feloniously entering the house of Hon. Samuel F. Phillips of North Carolina, ex-solicitor general of the United States. The occurrence took place in this city on the 4th of July last.

Caught on the Roof.

Milliken called during the evening to see one of Judge Phillips daughters whom he occasionally visited. She excused herself from receiving him. Later in the night another of Mr. Phillips' daughters, whose room communicated with her sister's, aroused Judge Phillips by stating that there was a man in her sister's room. Milliken was captured on the roof of the dining room annex by a private watchman and was locked up on a charge of housebreaking, but was subsequently released by direction of one of the assistant district attorneys.

Attributed to Too Much 4th of July.

A handkerchief and a broken phial, supposed to have contained chloroform, but labelled "camphor," were found on the grass below the bedroom window next day. Milliken's explanation is said to be that the whole affair was a mistake arising out of too much 4th of July. He has left the city, but it is presumed will return.

TERRIBLE MURDER IN CUBA.

Six Persons, Including a Woman and Children, Killed by Negroes.

Havana, July 13.—Four negroes went to a grocery store at Guanajayabo in the Guanajay tobacco district yesterday and, without warning, overpowered the grocer and his brother-in-law and killed them with knives. The negroes then attempted to assault the storekeeper's wife and his three daughters, aged respectively seventeen, six and four years. The woman and her daughters made a desperate struggle, but the negroes inflicted injuries upon all of their victims from which they afterwards died.

Will Be Cut To Pieces.

The murderers then plundered the store and disappeared. Their crime was discovered by a white man of the district, who found one of the girls still alive when he entered the store, and it was from her that he obtained the details of the crime. The girls died soon afterwards. The countryman reported the murders to the proper authorities. The inhabitants of the country around Guanajayabo and the police have started in pursuit of the negroes. They will be cut to pieces if captured.

NOT TO SAIL TO-DAY.

The Defender Will Meet the Vigilant, However, as Soon as Possible.

Bristol, R. I., July 13.—E. A. Willard, manager of the Vigilant, told a United Press representative this morning that he had talked with Mr. Iselin last evening and that the Defender would not sail for several days yet. He said that the Vigilant would take another spin to-day and would sail for Newport on Sunday. He stated that the Defender and Vigilant would have a trial race off Newport as arranged and that it would occur as soon as the Defender was ready.

LOST DURING THE WAR.

A Medal Bearing a Vignette of Gen. McClellan Unearthed.

Washington, July 13.—A laborer on the farm of Dr. Gustavus Brown, a few miles west of this city, unearthed a gold medal about the size of a $10 gold piece. On one side is a vignette of Gen. Geo. B. McClellan, encircled with the letters of his name, and on the other side appears the name of Franklin C. Pulisipper, company Q, 12th Vermont volunteers. It is supposed that the medal was lost during the late war.

SHOT BY HIS YOUNG GUARD.

A Handcuffed Negro Convict Killed and Secretly Buried.

Raleigh, N. C., July 13.—A man just arrived here from Montgomery county says that a seventeen-year-old white lad named Tucker murdered a negro convict he had in charge, while the latter was handcuffed, by shooting him three times with a rifle. He then buried the body in the sand, and buried the rifle beside the body. The boy said the negro ran and he shot at him, but that the negro got away.

AN ESSAY ON MARRIAGE

The President's Views on the Wedded State.

A Loving and Affectionate Wife Is the Best of All God's Gifts—All Others, Honor, Public Esteem, Etc., Are Subordinate—A Letter to a Prospective Benedict.

Atlanta, Ga., July 13.—A letter written four years ago by President Cleveland to John Temple Graves, of Georgia, on receipt of an invitation to Mr. Graves' then approaching marriage is just made public. When the wedding cards were sent to the then ex-president, Mr. Graves accompanied them with a letter in which he paid tribute to the beauty and tenderness of the president's own domestic life, and the influence of this high example upon the domestic life of the people. The answer came promptly in the letter which follows:

Mr. Cleveland's Acknowledgment.

New York, Dec. 2, 1890.

John Temple Graves, esq., Rome, Ga.

My Dear Mr. Graves: We received the card of invitation to your wedding a day or two ago and I am glad that your letter, received only a few hours ago, justifies me, on behalf of my dear wife and myself, to do more than formally notice the occasion. And, first of all, let me assure you how much we appreciate the kind and touching sentiment you convey to us in our married state.

God's Best of All Gifts.

As I look back upon the years that have passed since God in His infinite goodness bestowed upon me the best of all His gifts—a loving and affectionate wife—all else, honor, the opportunity of usefulness and the esteem of my fellow countrymen, are subordinates in every aspiration of gratitude and thankfulness. You are not wrong, therefore, when you claim, in the atmosphere of fast coming bliss which now surrounds you, kinship with one who can testify with unreserved tenderness to the sanctification which comes to man when, heaven directed, love leads the way to marriage.

"One Grand, Sweet Song."

Since this tender theme has made us kinsmen, let me wish for you and the dear one who is to make your life doubly dear to you all the joy and happiness vouchsafed to man. You will, I know, feel that our wishes can reach no greater sinceriry and force than when my wife joins me in the fervent desire that you and your bride may enter upon and enjoy the same felicity which has made our married life "one grand, sweet song." Very truly, your friend,

GROVER CLEVELAND.

SIX NEW GUN BOATS.

Secretary Herbert Issues a Call for Proposals for Their Construction.

Washington, July 13.—Secretary Herbert has called for proposals for the construction of six light draught composite gun boats which congress authorized at a cost not exceeding $230,000 each, exclusive of armament. Four of these vessels are to be equipped with considerable sail power in addition to steam.

Protection to the Gun's Crew.

The character of the service for which these gun boats are particularly designed requires that they be exposed to musketry fires and the housing of the major part of the battery by an unbroken deck, besides adding materially to the stiffness and strength of the vessel, gives admirable protection to the gun's crew in action.

CORNELL LEAVES HENLEY.

They Will Sail for Home on July 27 and Will Not Row Meanwhile.

London, July 13.—The Cornell crew left Henley last evening. Their boats were loaded on four trucks attached to the train. They have not altered their arrangements to sail for home on July 27. They will not do any rowing meanwhile. The Argonauts of Toronto left Henley during the morning. They visited all of the rowing and sporting clubs at Henley before leaving and received a great ovation. Later they were entertained at dinner by the Leanders.

Unexplained Conduct of a Bellefonte, Pa., Bicycle Dealer.

Bellefonte, Pa., July 13.—Miss Nellie Rodgers, the pretty young daughter of the late inventor George Rogers, was to have been married last night to Roland T. Weyl, a bicycle dealer. At the last moment almost it was announced that the bridegroom had "skipped" for the west leaving no trace as to his intended destination, or no explanation.

Honored for Gallantry.

Washington, July 13.—The acting secretary of war has awarded a medal of honor to George C. Platt, of Boston, Mass., late of Company H, Sixth cavalry, for gallantry at Fairfield, Pa., July 3, 1863, "in seizing the regimental flag upon the death of the standard bearer in a hand-to-had fight and preventing it falling into the hands of the enemy."

Olney Visits Gray Gables.

Buzzards Bay, July 13.—President Cleveland received a call yesterday afternoon from Secretary Olney, who stopped off a train on his way from Boston to his summer home at Falmouth. The call was merely a neighborly one.

Regarding Post Office Money Orders.

JOYFUL PEOPLE THESE

Endeavorers Still Crowding Meeting Places.

Forty-Five Thousand Christians Listen to Eminent Speakers at Mechanics' Hall and Under the Two Big Tents—Banner Presentations—Parliament of Nations.

Boston, July 13.—If the continued fervency of the Christian endeavor multitudes be a proof, the devil is on the run. After the great day meetings of yesterday thousands of delegates last night attended three marvelous gatherings in Mechanics' hall and in tents Endeavor and Williston. Unwearied by the fervor of the huge morning meetings, not tired by the earnest efforts of the noon rallies, and far from satisfied with the encouragement gained at the fifteen general committee meetings in the afternoon the Christians gatered, 45,000 strong, at the big meetings at the three great auditoriums of Mechanics' hall and tents Williston and Endeavor.

Number of Visitors Registered.

The accommodation committee at 9 o'clock this morning had registered 49,362 delegates, from all states and territories, of whom 24,677 were from Massachusetts, 4,174 from Connecticut 3,261 from New York, 2,974 from Pennsylvania and 2,590 from New Hampshire. Twelve came from foreign lands and fifty-six from floating societies.

Addressed by a Chairman.

The evening meeting in Mechanic's hall was in charge of President Francis E. Clark. Percy S. Foster, of Washington, was musical director. After prayer by Rev. Samuel McNaugher, of Boston, Yong Ke, of the Chinese mission in San Francisco, spoke briefly upon the necessity and effectiveness of work among the Chinese.

Mothers or Parents' Societies.

Rev. Henry N. McKinney, of Syracuse, N. Y., made a short address upon senior and mothers or parents' societies. He said that those unable to attend prayer meetings in church might now join the home department of the home society and keep the pledge at home. The mothers' society was first suggested by Mrs. F. E. Clark, and now parents in Chicago and California met in monthly conferences for children.

Banner Presented.

A banner was presented to the Philadelphia local union for best work in promoting fellowship by Rev. U. F. Swengel, of Baltimore, Md., with a few appropriate remarks. This union held the same banner last year. Lewis S. Lee, its president, in receiving the banner, stated fifty-four societies had been added to the union during the past year.

Evening Tent Exercises.

Tent Endeavor was more than three-quarters filled to listen to last evening's exercises. George C. Stebbins, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was the musical conductor for the evening. Rev. E. R. Dille, D. D., trustee, of San Francisco, presided, and a prayer and praise service began the services. A banner to the local union that done the best service in promoting Christian endeavor fellowship was presented by Rev. H. W. Sherwood, of Rondout, N. Y., to the local union of Philadelphia, which also won it at Cleveland last year.

Parliament of Nations.

An address was then made by Rev. G. F. Love, jr., of Rochester, N. Y. His subject was "The Christian Home Bureau." Then followed "The Parliament of Nations" which consisted of four minute greetings on "Our Fellowship," from Alaska, by Edward Marsden; from Wales, by Rev. R. Burgess; from India, by Prabala Ramachandrayya Garu; from Australia, by Rev. W. J. L. Close; from Bermuda, by Rev. A. Burrwos; from North American Indians, by Dalos Lonewolf; from Japan, by Rev. K. Jeunashima; from Persia, by Jesse Malek Yonan, and from Africa, by Miss Anna M. Cummings.

Tent Williston.

At tent Williston the exercises opened with a praise service led by George K. Somerby of Boston. Rev. Mr. Allbright of the Pilgrim church conducted devotional services. Rev. John Pollock of Scotland spoke a few words on the formation of a World's Christian Endeavor union.

Sympathy for Armenian Christians.

The parliament of nations considered in brief sketches Christian Endeavor work in inter-denominational fellowship. Rev. M. Mursel responded for England and Rev. John Pollock for Scotland. Rev. A. M. Boulgourjoo of Armenia said he spoke from the oldest Christian nation now existing, a country where to be a Christian Endeavorer is to be guilty of a crime. A resolution was introduced expressing sympathy with the suffering Christians of Armenia. Rev. S. W. Adriance of Winchester, Mass., first editor of the Golden Rule spoke for the United States. China was represented by Yong Ke of San Francisco. Spain was represented by Miss Catharine H. Barbour and Mexico by Rev. A. C. Wright, who is representative of a union of Christian Endeavor society lately formed in San Luis Potosi.

What Ireland Has Done for America.

Rev. Henry Montgomery of Belfast, Ireland, was given one of the best greetings of the evening. He said that if Ireland made whiskey, Americans drank it. Whiskey was not the only thing Ireland had sent to America. They had sent to America the great Scotch-Irish race that has helped so much to settle and develop this land. Rev. Jas. Douglass a missionary from Trinidad and Martinique pronounced the Benediction.

GEN. HARRISON AT SARATOGA.

He Will Stop over at Albany on His Way to the Adirondacks.

Saratoga, N. Y., July 13.—Gen. Harrison who arrived here last evening spent the evening with Mr. and Mrs. McKee very quietly. Mr. McKee says that Mr. Harrison's plan had been to go to Albany to-day, where he had business which would detain him for a few hours. He would then go direct to Dodd's camp in the Adirondacks. Mrs. McKee has, however, partially persuaded him to remain here until Monday morning.

Will Remain Until September.

The trip to the camp is made by rail to Fulton Chain, then by stage to Old Forge where Dodds camp is located. It is on the road to the Adirondack League club house on Little Moose lake. The camp will be in charge of guide D. F. Speny. Mrs. McKee and children will leave here Wednesday morning next for the camp where the entire party will remain until the later part of September. Mr. McKee states that he will be unable to accompany them.

Paterson, N. J., July 13.—Jacob Weidmann, the owner of the largest silk dyeing establishment in this city, and eight of his workmen were arrested last night charged with conspiracy. The charge against Mr. Weidmann and eight employes is due to complaints made by Carl Starke and Hugo Fishbacker, who have just completed terms of one year in state prison. BUSINESS IS BOOMING

Unusual Activity for the Month of July.

Business That Would Naturally Have Been Finished Before Now Held Back by Frosts and Frights—Demand for Structural Iron Enormous—Big Wool Sales.

New York, July 13.—Dun's weekly review of the state of trade will say today: A business flood so strong and rapid that the conservative fear it may do harm is out of season in July. But the seasons this year lap over and crowd each other. May frosts and frights, it is evident, kept back such business that would naturally have been finished before mid-summer, and the delayed culmination of one season gets in the way of efforts to begin another on time. But the volume of business, however it may be measured, is remarkably large for the month, even in a good year.

Clearing House Exchanges.

Clearing house exchanges for two weeks have been 35 per cent. larger than last year and 6 per cent. large than in 1892. In that year July payments were naturally 15 per cent. less in May, but this year are considerably larger than in May. The exaggerated fears about crops have passed, the syndicate is believed both able and determined to protect the treasury, and the time draws near when the marketing of new crops will turn international balances if speculation does not hinder.

Drop in Wheat.

The week has been notable for a sensational fall in wheat of eight cents in two days, followed by recovery of five cents, though neither accords with any interpretation of the quite disregarded government report. Its estimate of 400 million bushels compares with a like estimate in 1893, which proved 100 million bushels out of the way. This year the discrepancy is not believed to be so large, and commercial estimates range all the way from 420 to 500 million bushels. The sudden drop in prices was the result of speculative rather than commercial influences, though exports not half as large as last year, 2,097,645 bushels, flour included, from Atlantic ports for two weeks of July, against 4,227,915 last year, had their effect as well as western receipts of 1,937,174 bushels against 2,156,918 last year.

Big Crop of Corn.

The latest news indicate an enormous crop of corn, much the largest ever grown if weather favors, but the price is only three-eights cent lower than a week ago. Cotton has not changed, though speculation still turns wholly on prospects, regardless of enormous stocks carried over. In Europe the manufacture lags, but here is satisfactory.

Boom in Structural Iron.

The weekly output of pig iron was 171,194 tons, having risen 13,970 tons in June, and other furnaces have gone into operation since July 1. The rapid rise in prices has brought into operation many additional works, and there is still a rush to buy before prices advance further. Influential manufacturers are sending out warnings that the rise may easily do mischief, and prices have in fact advanced nearly 5 per cent. in two weeks, but are still 15 per cent. lower than in October, 1892. The demand for structural forms is enormous, including 5,000 tons for No. 2 Broadway and as much more here, and as much in Chicago on smaller orders. Bessemer pig has advanced to $14.40 at Pittsburg, and wire nails to $1.55, both higher than in October, 1892.

Wool Sales Enormous.

Wool is still advancing with enormous sales, 12,714,000 pounds for the week, and in two weeks of July 26,497,614 pounds, against 11,886,550 in the same weeks of 1892. As the sales are about four times the weekly consumption, it is obvious that the market is essentially speculative, but the rise abroad has set the country ablaze so that western holders are asking even higher prices than heretofore. Scarcity of domestic wool helps them, and as yet the enormous sales of foreign only compensate for the reported decrease in the domestic clip. But buying by most manufacturers is already affected, and at the prices now asked for wool some manufacturers are doubting whether a corresponding value for goods can be realized.

JACK DEMPSEY VERY ILL.

Fainted Several Times on the Train on His Journey to His Home.

Vancouver, B. C., July 13.—Jack Dempsey, the ex-champion pugilist, passed through this city en route to Portland, Ore. Dempsey is a physical wreck, and looks as though he had but a short time to live. During the journey he fainted more than once. A woman physician, who was traveling on the same train, rendered material aid. The ex-champion had to be carried from the train to the steamboat.

Can't Arbitrarily Refuse Licenses.

Troy, N. Y., July 13.—The prohibition excise commissioners of the town of Brunswick decided lately that they would not issue licenses to saloons. The case was carried to the court. Judge Griffith decided that the commissioners could not arbitrarily refuse licenses, and the people must distinctly vote for prohibition, or applications for licenses must be heard on their merits.

No Corruption at Haverstraw.

Nyack, N. Y., July 13.—The grand jury of Rockland county, which has for two days been investigating charges of corruption against the municipal authorities of Haverstraw village, involving President Zundel and other officials, concluded their labors and dismissed every charge.

Aosta and Bride Leave Rome.

Rome July 13.—The Duke of Aosta and his bride, Princess Helene of Orleans, left this city last evening for Turin. They were accompanied to the railway station by King Humbert, Queen Margherita, the ministers of state and the municipal authorities.

Persons leaving the city for the summer can have The Daily Press mailed to their address for ten cents per week. The address will be changed as often as desired.

Trilby has been to Plainfield and not a toe was shown.

Plainly speaking, Editor Runyon does not know what he is talking about.

Subject for a musee. A high railway official has asked to have his salary reduced.

The collegiate editor doubtless figures that money can be borrowed by the city on the same principle that he pays his compositors three dollars a week.

Oscar Keen, a well-known member of the Essex county bar, names Chancellor McGill as the most probable candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

Newark is going to spend $2,500,000 for public parks. If the Common Council of Plainfield would spend $250 in this direction the taxpayers would throw up their hats for joy.

The New Brunswick Home News innocently congratulates that reform afflicted town on not being politically as bad as Elizabeth. A horse would laugh at that—if he could laugh.

The death of Dr. C. M. Fields removes from New Jersey one of its most talented men, and one who has contributed much to the medical profession of which he was a member.

There will be 809 delegates to the next Republican State Convention says the Elizabeth Journal. The successful nominee will have to get at least 405 of these. The number to come from the different counties is herewith given, so that statisticians and politicians may figure out the winners according to their own foreknowledge:

Atlantic	17	Middlesex	32
Bergen	26	Monmouth	39
Burlington	36	Morris	29
Camden	56	Ocean	14
Cape May	8	Passaic	59
Cumberland	29	Salem	16
Essex	151	Somerset	17
Gloucester	19	Sussex	13
Hudson	123	Union	40
Hunterdon	18	Warren	17
Mercer	50
Total			809

Never was the old adage, that "little knowledge is a dangerous thing," better illustrated than by the Courier-News in its attempt to wrestle with financial problems. The editor of that paper evidently does not know the difference between loans payable on call or demand, and those having a stated time to run. He looks over the money article in some newspaper and sees call money quoted at one and a half or two per cent, and immediately jumps at the conclusion that the city ought to borrow money for forty years at these rates. Let him take a Government bond and step into one of the city banks and try to borrow one thousand dollars for a year. He will learn more about rates of interest in five minutes in that way, than by all his efforts in any other direction.

Fix the Road.

It is now about time that the Street Railway Company did some filling in along their tracks. In some places it is very bad, especially at the corner of Front street and Watchung avenue on the curve. Anyone driving over with a wagon is liable to have a wheel dished.

PUSHING THE TROLLEY ROAD.

Managers Anxious to Get Through Milltown—Gordon's Suit.

A writ of certiorari was issued by Chief Justice Beasley yesterday against the New Brunswick Traction Company. The writ was obtained by Alan Strong, one of the counsel for Mrs. Lydia Gordon, a property-owner of Milltown. The purpose of the writ is to test the validity of the ordinance passed by the Commissioners of the borough of Milltown which gave the Traction Company the right of the road. The justice distinctly states in the writ that it is not to act as a stay. The case will not come up for argument until November.

The work of constructing the road was continued yesterday. Contractor Thomas Murray had over two hundred men at work. Another property owner along the proposed route has raised objections to the trolley. This spurred on the Traction men and the force of workmen was enlarged. Men were brought out from Newark to string the wires. It is the intention of the company to finish the road through the borough of Milltown at once.

The Raritan River Railroad is said to be at the back of the opposition to the trolley.

A GIRL ON THE HANDLE-BARS.

Miss Rollin's Novel Seat on a Bicycle Not Built for Two.

Miss Abbie Rollins was a member of a party of cyclists who rode from New Brunswick to Plainfield on Thursday night. When within five miles of her destination the pneumatic tire of her wheel burst and refused to be mended with chewing-gum, the only material available.

George K. Parsell, in whose office the young woman is employed as a stenographer, offered her a seat on the handle-bars of his machine. She accepted and climbed up on the bars, which she said made a comfortable perch. In that way they rode into the city, and the novel sight took the town by storm.

"La Belle Helene," at Terrace Garden.

"La Belle Helene," Offenbach's pretty operetta, succeeded "The Tyrolean" at Terrace Garden, in New York, last night. Manager Heimann was obliged to make this mid-week change in the bill in order to give some of his overworked artists a rest. The entire company has appeared almost nightly since the opening of the season, and this steady work is beginning to tell on some of the principals. Three nights of "La Belle Helene" will give an opportunity for Fraulein Englaender and Herr Monti to prepare themselves for the production of "Boccaccio" next Monday night.

New Parks at Newark.

The Essex Park Commission, which is to spend $2,500,000 in establishing public parks, has made its first move by formally requesting the Board of Works to transfer to the Commission a tract of land formerly belonging to the old Aqueduct Board, which was set aside some years ago for park purposes. The land will be conveyed to the Commission, and it will probably be added to by adjoining lands, and be the first improvement made by the Commission.

Too Much of a Celebrator.

Formal charges have been preferred against Lewis H. Halsey, assistant foreman of the Hose Company at Cranford. The complaint states that on July 4th he caused the fire alarm to be rung without authority, and admitted to the fire house a crowd of intoxicated persons who broke a hole in the roof and did other damage. These charges are being investigated by the fire committee.

Free Ice Water.

There are a very few places in New York where a glass of ice water can be obtained without going into a hotel or a saloon, but that number has been increased by one John street merchant, who has arranged a tank just inside the window with two faucets outside from which any one can get a cup of ice water for nothing. A sign "Free Ice Water" is painted over the opening.

Malicious Youngster.

Mrs. Fennell, of Watchung avenue, while seated in a car of the first section of the Methodist excursion train last night, was struck in the head with a stone as the train entered Plainfield. The stone was thrown by a boy on Cottage place, but as yet they have not found the guilty one.

Before Justice Nash.

Justice Fash has issued a summons in the case of Veogeler against Harrison, on contract, which is returnable in one week. Lawyer George DeMeza represents te plaintiff.

PITY THE BABIES

They Suffer More from Heat Than Adults.

Digestion, Sleep and Strength Quickly Impaired.

FOOD MUST NOURISH BUT NOT BURDEN SYSTEM.

Lactated Food Expressly Prepared to This End.

Made Under Personal Care of Eminent Prof. Boynton.

It is the plague of summer that it makes babies fretful, sleepless, capricious in appetite and exposed to diarrhoeal disorders whenever their strength is suffered to decline.

It is the father's, the mother's, the physician's care to provide a diet capable of abundantly nourishing, and one that can by no possibility bring contagion with it.

It is not enough to merely select a pure nourishing food. It must be acceptable to the delicate, weakened stomach of the little one. It must be taken in sufficient quantities and with relish to keep the child strong, well and growing.

With all these requirements in mind lactated food is prepared. Under the advice of the professors in the medical department of the Vermont University, more especially that of Prof. A. P. Grinnell, dean of the university, and Dr. S. M. Roberts, professor of diseases of children, and under the investigation and direct supervision of Prof. C. S. Boynton, the manufacture of lactated food was begun. It has saved thousands of babies' lives and enabled thousands more to grow up strong and big and blessed with sturdy constitutions.

The use of lactated food does away with any anxiety regarding cholera infantum. Lactated food is as pure as mountain air. It agrees with children's stomachs even when they are made sensitive by summer heat.

A host of mothers have to thank lactated food for the joy of seeing their drooping, silent, white-faced little ones turn to bright-eyed, charming babies, that eat, and sleep and grow in a way to delight any mother's heart. Great numbers of such mothers have written that nothing else would agree with their children but lactated food.

A trial of less than two weeks will tell its own story in baby's weight, eyes, cheeks and spirits. Nursing mothers find lactated food just adapted to their peculiar needs. It nourishes both mother and child. And this is what one would expect from a knowledge of its rich, blood-making ingredients, using pure milk sugar as a basis, because it is also the basis of mother's milk; there is added the richest gluten flour of wheat and oats. These are subjected to high steam heat under pressure, and while in constant motion and perfectly cooked the extract of the finest malt barley is added, making this a partially digested food that is easily assimilated by the feeblest stomach.

Invalids and aged persons find lactated food the most grateful to their weak stomachs of any nutriment they can take.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Runious Compitition.

John L. Derby, a grocer, who is postmaster of Cranford, made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors. The assignee is John W. Whelan of Elizabeth. The reason of Mr. Derby's failure is the runious competition of out-of-town hucksters and grocers who do the bulk of the cash trade while the local marketmen keep book accounts. A movement to compel hucksters to pay a license fee was defeated by the Township Committee two months since.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The New York Tribune this morning published a portrait of Plainfield's great rider, Monte Scott.

Walter N. Martin, of Grove street, will take a cycling trip to Coney Island tomorrow if the weather permits.

Mrs. R. Tibbitts, Mrs. G. Johnson and Harry J. Palmer, of New York, came to Plainfield yesterday on their wheels to visit Johnsey Wilson, of West Front street.

Walter S. Gibson and Harry Milligan left this morning on their wheels for Boynton Beach, where they will spend the day and from there go to New Brunswick by boat, and from there they will wheel home.

Walter B. Rittenhouse, of East Sixth street, one of Plainfield's best road riders, has just purchased a new nineteen-pound wheel. It is a Wolfe American Special and Mr. Rittenhouse claims it to be the best on the road.

Thomas Potter, of St. Louis, and Israel Jones, captain of the Victor Wheelmen, took a run to Bound Brook yesterday. Potter says that if the roads near St. Louis were like those of Union county, everybody would be a rider there.

Manager R. I. Tolles and Harry Vail, of the Union Beef Company, have been riding considerable on their wheels for a week past. Mr. Tolles has covered over 100 miles while Mr. Vail has also succeeded in reaching the century mark.

Charles Hall, of Reynolds' Pharmacy, was one of the many who rode to Asbury Park on Thursday. He was accompanied by John Rickert as far as Matawan where the former stopped to meet some friends who had ridden from Perth Amboy. They continued the journey. Charles rode back to Matawan and from there came home by train.

When it is stated under oath that a cycle manufacturing company in this vicinity has cleared $50,000 up to date this year on $100,000 capital stock, and that amount not all subscribed for, it looks as if our manufacturers will not have to forego their annual outing this summer. Before '95 is over this company should have made another $25,000 if the demand keeps up. This will encourage the new concerns that propose to make wheels for the '96 trade.—American Wheelman.

The livery stable proprietors would do well to get a supply of bicycles for hire instead of bolstering up their courage and trying to stem their receding earnings by saying the bicycle is only a temporary rage. Noah of old told the people to get in out of the wet for many days, but the warning did little good, so will it be with the livery men if they don't look out. The Sun in speaking editorially said: "Accordingly, the assumption of horse dealers that bicycle riding is a mere fad, an ephemeral hobby, does not seem to be justified. Evidently the machine has come to stay. It may be that its use simply for sport and recreation will diminish hereafter, something else coming up to replace it in the popular fancy, but before that deline sets in, if it does occur, the passion for bicycle riding will doubtless increase and extend greatly. Multitudes of people yet remain to be affected by it; but as a machine for various uses as a means of necessary transportation it must continue to be employed permanently by greater and greater numbers of people. Very many of them, it is true, have never been horse buyers, but the machine will enable thousands of people in all parts of the Union who have depended on horses to get along without them wholly or in part."—American Wheelman.

Anxious to Keep the Sabbath.

A petition is in circulation among the tonsorial artists of this city asking the Common Council to close up the barber shops on Sunday. The pioneer of the movement of Sunday closing was P. M. Decker, who adopted the plan without consulting others.

Westfield in Trouble.

George Ely, of Cranford, has given notice that he will commence suit against the township of Westfield for damages sustained by Mrs. Ely Wednesday through the frightening of their horse by a laborer's climbing out of the sewer ditch.

Signal Works Sold.

The Johnson Signal Works have been sold by Receiver Savage to the National Switch and Signal Company, of Easton, Pa., for $52,500. A previous offer of $65,000 was made by the Hall Switch and Signal Company, of Garwood, but with a stipulation that the mortgage of $50,000 would be accepted, which was unsatisfactory to the creditors. The sale was confirmed by the Chancellor, and H. T. Tatenall appointed superintendent. The works will remain in Rahway, and operations will be begun at once.

Tried to Rob a Hotel.

Another attempt was made to rob the Washington Hotel, at Washington, Thursday night. The thieves kindled a fire outside of the kitchen with the intention, it is thought, of getting the inmates out of the barroom to fight the flames and then rifle the safe. As soon as the fire was discovered robbery was suspected. This is the third attempt made to rob the place in a few weeks.

Westfield Man Hurt.

As Charles French was driving around the corner of Elm and Broad streets, Westfield, Thursday, he was thrown from his wagon and struck on his head. He was picked up unconscious and taken to the room over Gelby's store, where he was attended by Dr. Cooper. Upon his regaining consciousness he was removed to his home. It was impossible, the physician said, to state just how badly he was injured.

YOUR SCALP! During the heats of summer does it become irritated and invite an occasional friendly scratch? To wash it is well, but not too often, lest your hair become "brash" and stiff. But treat it twice or thrice a week with our Petroleum Hair Tonic—a little rubbed in with your finger ends, and you will find the feeling of comfort and coolness truly delightful. Positively nothing equals it as a balm for the woes of your scalp. Sprinkler bottles 50c. Only at

MILLIONS GREET HIM

TRIUMPHAL RETURN OF JAPAN'S EMPEROR FROM THE WAR.

Scenes Along the Road from Yokohama to the Capital. Masters of the Art of Decorative Displays. Friendly to Americans.

A Tokio dispatch of the Chicago Record says the Emperor of Japan returned to Tokio yesterday, and more than 2,000,000 of loyal subjects were here to greet him. Last September, when the Japanese army embarked for China, he went to Hiroshima, one of the most easterly ports of the inland sea, so that he might be 700 miles nearer the seat of war and communicate more conveniently with his officers.

There is an impression among the people, which is not shared, however, by all the foreigners, that his Majesty took personal direction of the movements of the army, and that he had at one time an intention of exposing his sacred person to the hardships and dangers of the field.

But, however, this may be, he has been at Hiroshima ever since last September, and now comes back to the capital in the midst of a great demonstration, in which all parties and factions and all classes of people join with equal enthusiasm.

The Japanese are masters of the decorative art, and their taste and skill was most lavishly displayed in adornment, not only on the buildings and streets of the cities, but in the fields and farms and paddy fields along the line of the railway.

The distance from Yokohama, the principal seaport, to Tokio, the capital, is eighteen miles, and almost the entire distance, on both sides of the track, was a continuous display of bunting and garlands of green. The railway stations, the switch houses, and the telegraph poles, were laden with color, and where the highways cross the track arches of cryptomeria—a sort of soft leaved fir—were erected and inscribed with white designs presenting the Emperor's initials; the chrysanthemum, which is his crest, words of welcome and pledges of loyalty. In the bunting only the national colors were used—red and white—but there were a great many large white flags bearing inscriptions in Japanese characters, which are very decorative of themselves.

And from one city to the other the entire population were gathered along the hedges and fences that separate the railway right of way from the little toy farms, so that his Majesty actually passed between two solid walls of his subjects for at least eighteen miles. And he was received with absolute silence, which seemed strange to us Westerners, but until recently the Emperor has never been cheered.

This people, who do almost everything in a manner the opposite to what we are accustomed, have always considered silence the highest form of respect. But after his train had passed out of hearing their pent up emotions found relief in shouts and caperings, the waving of handkerchiefs and the flaunting of flags.

When he reached Tokio, however, where the people have acquired modern ideas, there was a shout of welcome that came from 100,000 throats. It was the single word "Banzai," which means literally "ten thousand years," and is used as an equivalent for the old salute that you read in the Scriptures, when subjects shouted to their sovereign: "Oh, king, live forever!"

Nor is it proper to look down upon the sacred person of the Mikado. You must always look up to him. Therefore the upper windows of the houses on the streets through which he passed were closed and curtained. There might have been some peeking from behind, but it was the height of disrespect.

The expense of the decoration was met by popular subscriptions. Each person who paid one dollar was given a medal of brass bearing the Emperor's name, the date and a description denoting the occasion.

Only those who wore such medals were admitted to the enclosure to witness the ceremony, and the natives could procure them at the City Hall upon the payment of the subscription. Those who wanted to pay a little more could get medals of silver, and those who were very liberal could get them of gold. Foreigners were not invited to participate, and several Europeans were refused medals. But any American citizen could get one.

The antipathy of the people towards Europeans is illustrated by a little incident. A gentleman stopping at the Grand Hotel, went down to the headquarters of the committee at the City Hall, and throwing down his dollar asked for a medal, which was refused him.

"No foreigner; no Englishman; he can'it come," said the man in charge. "Only Japanese."

"I am not an Englishman," was the reply, "I am an American."

"Oh! Melican, he all light," and he handed out one of the souvenirs.

Property for Children.

Mr. Ruskin has written a letter in reply to the question, ought parents to leave a fortune to their children? He says parents ought to educate and maintain their children until they reach maturity. "Moderation," he adds, "eats its children young. When they are strong throw them out of the nest, but let the nest be always open to them. No guilt should ever stand between child and parent. The doors should be always open to a daughter who is a harlot or a son who is a thief, if they return, but no fortune should be left to them."

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
Dr. G. C. Osgood, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
Dr. J. F. Kincheloe, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.
"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. Archer, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria have won us to look with favor upon it."

RUSSELL SAGE TALKS

THE GREAT FINANCIER TELLS HOW TO GET AHEAD IN THE WORLD.

Hard, Steady Work Wins. Neither Genius Nor Dishonesty Requisite for Money Making. Right Doing Will Always Pay.

There is so much advice given to the young man about to start out in business that one feels as though the scriptural admonition of the evil of "too many counselors" were dangerously near being his portion. But in all this great bulk of advice there is, singularly enough, little or no mention at all of the greatest element to be found in any life, business or otherwise—the element of Providence itself.

When a young man starts out in business he has a stout heart, a little capital, good wishes and the world before him. The other possessions that belong to him, but which he does not always claim, are honesty, industry and real worth. With these three factors united to those that he had before, his chances for success are a thousand fold greater.

To be more explicit. Suppose a young man starts out in business for himself. Everybody wants to give him a helping hand. No one offers him charity, but if he is in trade people drop in to see him, willing to leave their dollars with him in return for something good, and business men smile upon him more indulgently at first, and offer him more privileges than they would accord those longer in business.

This is Providence! The Lord plans matters in such a way that those who walk uprightly find all the "plums" of the earth, and those who walk the wrong path pick up the stones and thorns. Occasionally something good will appear to fall to the lot of those who are dishonest, but mark my words!—the words of a man who has fought the world and walked in the world the best part of a century—this success is as ephemeral as the brightness of the spring leaves, or the coldness of the snowball. All will fade away before another season has visited it!

It is commonly supposed that to make money in this world a man must be one of two things. Either he must be a genius or a dishonest man. He must make his money by sparkling brilliancy that few can imitate, or he must steal it so slyly that none can see him.

An examination of the great fortunes that have been made will show this to be absolutely false. Was the first Rothschild to carve his name upon the world of finance a genius? Did he "coin" money in his laboratory or flash it forth by electricity or cause the wheels of newly discovered patents to grind it out?

No! He was a hard, steady worker. A man to whom after you had intrusted $100, you would go again with another hundred. And again! And again! He kept his friends in finance. He gave them a good return for their money, and if by hard study he discovered and planned ways for investing that money so that his percentage as caretaker was worth his while, why so much the better for him, and the whole world, too.

To particularize. Suppose you take, for example, some struggling Western city. Nothing moves in it except the people. They are working early and late for a pittance. Their horses are drawn to the bone and their animals are thin from poor food and weather hardships. It is walk, walk, walk! work, work, work! drive, drive, drive!

In that city lives one man, a real man! He says to himself:

"We should have steam power here! We should have cars that run themselves! We should have mills to grind our corn! We should have power for little factories to keep our girls and women busy. Their money now goes away from us when they want dresses. It is pay out and pay out! Nobody buys anything of us! Oh, Providence, show me a way!"

With all his saved capital—not very much—with all the money he can borrow—and oh, what interest they ask him—he gets a few thousands together. He builds a little railroad. He puts up a small factory. He starts numberless little home industries. The hum of the wheel is heard in the town and there are people going quickly and cheerily from one place to another—there is business in this town!

But the man who planned it all! He has worked and worried. He has seen the sun rise over the hills many a night before he has sought sleep. He has seen himself beggared and dishonored a thousand times. But now success is his. His little investments are paying him money. He has paid back what he owed. He has drawn others in the business with him. He has made "capitalists" of men who never thought to own a dollar unhampered by thoughts of the morrow. He is the rich man of the town! Now, who, who of all those who have watched him, will begrudge him one iota of his rest? But back of all this the man himself sees a Providence! He sees Providence as certainly as he sees the fruit of his works.

Without having had this Providence to guide him he would have floundered at some point in the race. The temptation to step aside from the right path, when dollars in plenty lay to the left of it, would have been too great for him without Providence. This, then, is Providence in business.

If I had to take my choice of beginning again either with a million dollars or with Providence I should choose the latter. The million would last not much longer than a ten cent piece, but with Providence to look out for me and suggest ways and means, I should soon be able to look a roll of money squarely in the face. RUSSELL SAGE.

The good husband always dies. At least such is the opinion of a gentleman of our acquaintance who has married a series of widows.—Boston Transcript.

HE DID THE WASHING.

His Wife, with a Whip, Made Him Do It, and Now He Goes to the Island.

Mrs. Catherine McIlvaine, 40 years of age, of 33 Columbus avenue, New York, got a warrant for the arrest of Alexander McIlvaine, her husband, 50 years old, in the Yorkville Court on Wednesday. Mrs. McIlvaine charged that her husband contributed nothing to her support, that he drank, and continuously ill-treated her. Policeman Smith of the court squad executed the warrant, arresting McIlvaine at his home yesterday morning. Mrs. McIlvaine told Police Justice Ryan when in court that she kept a news and stationery store at 35 Columbus avenue, and that her husband, whom she thus supported, heaped abuse upon her and wasted her substance in riotous living.

"What have you to say to your wife's charges, asked the justice.

"Just this, your honor," said McIlvaine: "My wife had me arrested because I was man enough to refuse to do the washing and ironing!"

"What!" exclaimed Justice Ryan, becoming interested; "were you asked to do the washing?"

"Asked, did you say? Why, your honor, you ain't much acquainted with my wife. She doesn't ask, she commands, and backs up her order with a horsewhip. On last Thursday I did a whole week's washing, and she stood over me on Friday and Saturday with a horsewhip and made me do all the ironing. And this was only one of a good many times, your honor, that she has done the same thing. She doesn't ask, she doesn't; she just sails in with that big snake whip of hers and makes you do it."

"How about this, Mrs. McIlvaine?" said Justice Ryan, looking at the woman.

"Oh, that's so, what he says," was the reply. "That's all he's good for. I'll tell you, judge, how it was. You see, I can't keep a girl to help me; they won't stay when he's around, and I don't blame 'em. So I just made up my mind I'd get some good out o' him. I told him I wouldn't pay to have the washing done and him loafing around and said for him to take hold and do it.

"'I wont,' says he.

"'Won't ye?' says I, and I got the whip."

"Then he did it?"

"Yes, judge, he did; but it costs more'n it's worth to keep him at it."

"And so you want him punished?"

"Yes, judge."

"Well, we'll try him with a month and see if it will help him."

"Thank you, judge," and Mrs. McIlvaine whisked out of court, well pleased, and Alexander went down to prison.—N. Y. Sun.

UNOCCUPIED PUBLIC LANDS.

Great Areas in the United States Which Have Not Been Developed Yet.

The Governor of Wisconsin was recently in New York on a visit, undertaken with the object of promoting the settlement of some unoccupied parts of Wisconsin. He made the statement that there are 25,000,000 acres of land in the State unoccupied and unimproved and suitable to the requirements of settlers having some knowledge of agriculture.

When compared with the acreage of some other States in unused land, Wisconsin's figures are almost insignificant.

It is a fact that no one knows exactly how much unoccupied land there is in the United States. All the figures on the subject are conjectural. There are in the United States 1,000,000,000 acres of surveyed public lands and about 1,000,000,000 acres of unsurveyed, undeveloped, and Indian lands and reservations. The greater part of the mountainous region of the Rockies has never been accurately surveyed, and recent figures from the State of Nevada show the unsurveyed portion to be in excess of the surveyed part by over 6,000,000 acres. In California, too, there is a very large amount of unsurveyed land, and in all the Territories millions of acres of the same kind.

This Dog Buys Oranges and Eats Them.

"Do you want a good story?" asked a well known man the other day. "Well, here's one about a dog, and it's a true one, too.

"The dog's name is Sam. He's a setter, and belongs to a man named McCormick, who keeps a restaurant down at Atlantic City. I was in that city a short time ago and saw the dog going through a remarkable performance.

"A man in a crowd of six or eight people will take a nickel from his pocket, wrap it in a piece of paper and give it to the dog. Sam then trots off to the corner, where an Italian keeps a fruit stand. The Italian places an orange in a paper bag and pretty soon Sam comes trotting back with his purchase, wagging his tail and tickled to death. He will then hunt out the man who gave him the nickel, never making a mistake, apparently wishing to show that he hasn't squandered the money foolishly.

"After that he takes the orange from the bag and plays with it until he gets tired. Then he eats it. He first bites a piece out of the skin, just as a man who has no knife might do, and then breaks it in two pieces. He is fond of oranges, but although he managers to get the most of the fruit, he will never swallow even a morsel of the skin."—Philadelphia Record.

Advantage of Experience.

The son of a lottery man has married the granddaughter of the Vanderbilts. There's nothing like knowing the ropes in the trade. One less familiar with the mysterious operations of lotteries in general would probably have failed to get out the $10,000,000 prize with his wife's money.—Chicago News.

Psychologists now aver that the reason a young fellow holds his arm around the girl's waist in a hammock is to keep her from falling out with him.—Philadelphia Times.

Last June Dick Crawford brought his twelve-months-old child, suffering from infantile diarrhœa, to me. It had been weaned at four months old and had always been sickly. I gave it the usual treatment in such cases but without benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born, or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25 cent size had been used a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny constitution disappeared, and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by this remedy. J. T. Marlow, M. D., Tamaroa, Ill. W. H. Nelson, who is in the drug business at Kingville, Mo., has so much confidence in Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy that he warrants every bottle and offers to refund the money to any customer who is not satisfied after using it. Mr. Nelson takes no risk in doing this because the remedy is a certain cure for the diseases for which it is intended, and he knows it. It is for sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North Avenues. Chamberlain's is the best of all. Vincent S. Barkl, of Danbury, Iowa, has used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy whenever in need of a medicine for coughs and colds, for the past five years and says: "It always helps me out. If anyone asks me what kind of cough medicine I use, I reply, Chamberlain's, that is the best of all." 25 and 50c. bottles for sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North Avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

A horse kicked H. S. Shafer, of the Freemyer House, Middleburg, N. Y., on the knee, which laid him up in bed and caused the knee joint to become stiff. A friend recommended him to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which he did, and in two days was able to be around. Mr. Shafer has recommended it to many others and says it is excellent for any kind of a bruise or sprain. This same remedy is also famous for its cures of rheumatism. PECULIARLY SAD DEATH.

PREPARING FOR HER WEDDING MISS VAN WINKLE STRICKEN DOWN.

Frightened at the Storm Her Nervous Condition Suffered a Collapse Which Resulted in Her Demise.

Sad indeed were the hearts of the people of Plainfield yesterday morning, when they learned of the death of Miss Susan R. Van Winkle, only daughter of Jacob R. and Edith R. Van Winkle, of Elm place, which occurred from a nervous attack and shock, caused by the severe hail storm Saturday afternoon.

Previous to the storm Miss Van-Winkle was as well as usual, and nothing was noticed to indicate illness.

Leonard Smith, her fiance, had arrived from New York just ahead of the storm, which fact had pleased Miss Van Winkle. He had brought envelopes with him with which they intended to send out the announcement of their marriage after the event had taken place. They were seated at a table addressing them when the severe hail storm came. It affected Miss Van Winkle very perceptibly, and she was seized with nervousness about the open windows up stairs. Mr. Smith wanted to go through the house and close the windows, but she objected to being left alone. They both then went to the upper part of the house, and Mr. Smith closed the windows. They returned to the front part of the house and looking out of the window witnessed Joseph Blimm's delivery horse, driven by Will Swick, attempting to runaway, owing to its fright at the storm.

During the fractious actions of the animal Miss Van Winkle was hysterical, and Mr. Smith had difficulty in pacifying her. She kept saying that the man would be killed, and nothing seemed to quiet her. To add to the fright she had already experienced by the runaway horse and the terrible noise of the falling hail on the tin roof of the piazza. Mr. Smith attempted to draw down the window shade in order to cut off the view outdoors, when the roller gave way from its fastening, and shade and roller came crashing down to the floor at her feet. The result was that she fainted, and Dr. Jenkins was sent for, but not being at his office, Dr. Hallock answered the call. After an examination he decided that she would recover, but soon after he left she gradually grew weaker, until two o'clock yesterday morning, when Dr. Jenkins was summoned. He prescribed for her, and felt confident that she would rally from the shock. The doctor remained at the house for some time before going home. By her bedside sat her father, mother, brother, and Mr. Smith watching tenderly and anxiously over the young lady. About 4:30 she became worse, and asked that her head be raised and that someone fan her. In a few minutes it was noticed that her eyes were set. Mr. Smith at once hastened for Dr. Jenkins, and by the time he arrived she had expired.

Miss Van Winkle had grieved and mourned over the death of litttle Edith, her brother's child, who died recently, and that undoubtedly had much to do with her death.

She was engaged to Mr. Smith, and was to have been married quietly on Thursday afternoon next. It was their intention to spend the honeymoon with Mrs. E. T. Van Winkle and Mrs. E. H. Bird in the Adirondack Mountains, at the same time giving them a surprise, as they knew nothing of their plans.

Miss Van Winkle was a faithful member of Trinity Reformed church and Sunday-school, the Christian Endeavor society, and also the Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters, and her death leaves a vacancy that will be felt by church workers.

Her intended is heartbroken, and words cannot express the affliction that so suddenly blighted his prospects. Mr. and Mrs. Van Winkle are bowed down with grief over their loss.

They all have the deep and sincere sympathy of the people of Plainfield.

The funeral services over her remains will be held at the home of her parents, 27 Elm place, on Tuesday afternoon at half-past two o'clock. The remains will be interred in the North Plainfield cemetery.

Pastor O'Donnell in Paris.

Druggist J. Howard Leggett has received a letter from Rev. Wm. C. O'Donnell, pastor of Monroe Avenue chapel, which was mailed from Paris. Mr. O'Donnell states that he is having a delightful time and enjoying the trip much more than he expected. The ocean voyage he states was exceedingly pleasant and he experienced no seasickness.

FOR THE FRESH AIR FUND.

Private Theatricals Increase the Funds of This Worthy Cause.

The Fresh Air Fund has just gained over $6 and the young people of West Seventh street have had lots of fun and, perhaps, gained some experience. The cause of these advantages for both was the private theatricals and tableaux held in the barn of Samuel Q. Lawson on the corner of Grant avenue and West Seventh street, Saturday evening.

The principal part of the programme was the play, "Pull Back." The characters were played by the following: Mrs. Oldstyle, Miss Marion Egan; Henrietta Pride, Miss Amy Burt; Lulu Pride, Miss Marion Woodcock; Gertrude Plain, Miss Florence Taylor; Lu, the waitress, Miss Cassie Lawson; the housekeeper, Miss Ada Woodruff. The plot was the old story of the rich but unknown aunt who is abused by the proud nieces. Then followed the tableaux. The first was "Faith and Hope," and Miss Amy Burt and Miss Marion Egan made a pretty picture together. "Grandma's Story" was well acted by the Misses Cassie Lawson, Marion Woodcock, Blanche Woodruff and Florence Taylor. Miss Ada Woodruff and Miss Cassie Lawson formed a beautiful tableax. The next was "Blacking Shoes" by Miss Florence Taylor. "A Train of the Nineteenth Century" was not the kind that runs upon rails but was represented by Miss Marion Egan in a dress with a very long train. "Trilby" was a large shoe in the centre of the stage. The last scene was a very pretty group entitled "America, Peace and Plenty," and the parts were respectively taken by Miss Amy Burt, Miss Marion Egan and Miss Ada Woodruff. It was a fitting close to a most enjoyable evening.

At the conclusion of the entertainment, on a motion by William C. Burt, the audience passed a unanimous vote of thanks to Mr. Lawson for his great kindness to the young people in furnishing the barn, stage, scenery, curtains, and all the necessary arrangements. Miss Edith Burt acted as stage manager and assisted generally behind the scenes. Lester Woodruff announced the names of the tableaux, and James Taylor made a very efficient doorkeeper.

GASOLINE STOVE EXPLOSION.

North Avenue the Scene of a Small Saturday Fire.

The screams of a woman, apparently in distress, were heard on North avenue Saturday afternoon about 4:30. A little later Whitfield Frazee was seen running down the avenue towards Park avenue, at the same time calling to Sergeant Kiely to pull box 13. All the above was sufficient to draw a large crowd, when it was learned that there was a fire on the top floor of the building occupied by Lawrence Paoli, the fruit dealer. Wm. Addis, Jr., rushed into the building and discovered that Mrs. Kinnell had lighted the gasoline stove and the blaze had frightened her. She then tried to extinguish the flames with a bed quilt, and not succeeding, her husband attempted to put them out by stamping a five-gallon can of gasoline over the stove. Mr. Addis wrapped the stove in the quilt and threw it out the window and the gasoline can soon followed. By this time the department responded and two lines of hose were laid to the building but the water was not needed, though it was turned on.

Famous as a Skater.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thompson and son Harold, of Elizabeth, came to Plainfield yesterday and visited relatives in the borough. Mr. Thompson will be remembered as one of the fancy skaters who delighted Plainfield with his performances on roller skates in the old Casino rink on Grove street corner of Craig place.

A Touching Tribute.

Yesterday morning Mr. J. S. Cutter and her Sunday-school class of young woman of Trinity Reformed church, of which Miss Van Winkle was a member, called at the bereaved home, a touching tribute to the memory of the dearly-beloved one just passed away.

From Boys to Girls.

Miss Lucretia Clarke, who will conduct Harned Academy the coming year, has changed the name of the institution to "Stratford," and only girls will be admitted. Heretofore the school has been conducted for boys. Miss Clarke has issued a neat little folder announcement.

BALL GAME FULL OF FUN.

THE Y. M. C. A. TEAM ADD ANOTHER VICTORY TO THEIR RECORD.

Cranford Boys Are Fair Players, But Lack Team Work—Several Players Were Storm Bound.

Although the Y. M. C. A. baseball nine at Cranford, Saturday, saw nothing of the hail storm, they felt its effects severely for McKelvey, Freeman and Dupee, were all stranded somewhere along the road to Cranford on which they had attempted to ride their wheels when the hail appeared. Cranford got only a heavy shower which stopped in time for the game, but left a field fit more for swimming than playing ball. After waiting until past four o'clock to allow the absent Plainfielders to appear and the ground to become less like a swamp, play began. With a worse mixed up team than last Saturday's, the Y. M. C. A. boys set the pace for the Cranfords all the way and won easily by a score of 15 to 11. The Cranford team was all there except their pitcher and one fielder, but a crack from Pennington Seminary was put in the box, and a substitute placed in the field. And how the Plainfield boys enjoyed that pitcher! He spent most of his time in trying to see how far he could make the catcher jump to catch the ball and incidentally giving the batsman his base on four bad balls; but when he did condescend to put the ball over the plate, the visitors pounded it all over the field. Then Frank Cox, the crack twirler, of Cranford, appeared and was substituted for the Pennington man, but the Y. M. C. A. team had their blood up and their eye on the ball, and batted him about worse than his predecessor.

The general dampness of the ball and the ground had something to do with the bad pitching, for Burt felt its effects too, and was hit repeatedly, but somehow Cranford was not in the chase any time during the game.

In the last part of the game the visitors merely contented themselves by keeping in the lead and enjoying the fun, for the ozone in the air seemed to have effected the entire audience for they shrieked and yelled and squealed until they had to stop for lack of breath.

Both Cox and Burt started in to pitch a good game but the difference between them was that Cox got rattled and Burt did not but put up a very fine game, especially in his fielding.

In the first inning Corey hit for one base. Townley walked to first on four balls, forcing Corey to second. Davis followed with a pretty hit that sent Corey and Townley to the home plate and he around to second. Schenck, after vainly waiting for a chance to strike at the ball, took his first on four poor ones. Bosterli hit for one base, advancing each of the others a single base, and then Lederer knocked a fly to right field. It was caught all right, but the fielder threw it to no one in particular allowing Davis to score the third run and Schenck and Bosterli each to take a bag. Burt got to third on a dropped throw by the first baseman, but Schenck was forced out at home by an infield hit of Kurzhals. The pitcher next presented Neal with his base, forcing Bosterli in, but Corey on his second time at bat ended the fun by sending a grounder to first. The other innings were like this one with slight variations. The Cranfords batted well and seemingly fielded well but a lack of team work and continual scrapping among the players saved the Y. M. C. A. boys from a tight squeeze, for, against the rather loose fielding they put up, a strong team would have enjoyed themselves. Nevertheless, considering that most of the infield were new to the position, they played very well.

The score of the massacre by innings was:

Y. M. C. A.	4	1	2	0	0	5	0	2	1—15
Cranford	2	0	3	0	1	0	1	3	1—11

The record of the individual playing was as follows:

HAIL SWEPT PLAINFIELD.

SATURDAY'S STORM THE MOST SEVERE KNOWN IN YEARS.

Great Amount of Damage Done All Through This Section—Hail Stones as Big as Hens Eggs Fell With Great Force.

Plainfield was storm swept Saturday afternoon in a manner that not even the "oldest resident" can ever remember having witnessed before. About three o'clock in the afternoon big black clouds gathered in the north and west, and ten minutes after hail the size of kernels of corn began to play a tatter on roofs, awnings, walks, etc. It continued coming harder and bigger and in less than a minute hail stones as large as hens eggs were falling with such force as to create havoc with every frail thing with which they came in contact.

Almost every inhabitant witnessed some damage little or great, and everyone was more or less frightened.

From all over the city came reports of runaway horses, broken glasses, etc.

At Geo. Moore's store on East Front street, the hail made a hole in the roof through which poured a stream of water.

On North avenue there was a panic among the horses and the drivers were obliged to take them from the wagon, and lead them under shelter.

Albert Demarest, while trying to cover a horse with a blanket on North avenue, was hit on the hand with a stone with such force as to bring blood.

The stones penetrated wagon tops and umbrellas, leaving largh holes as souvenirs. An amusing incident was witnessed on Park avenue, where a dog was seen running down the street, and thinking that someone was throwing stones at him, kept up a continual howl.

There were several runaways on Front street, and one very exciting was a young girl alone in a wagon and the horse running at a rapid gait through the street. The girl kept hold of the reins though she could not stop. Joseph Gavett saw the affair and heroically ran out and caught the frightened animal.

Fred Dunn, the grocer, had a half dozen eggs in a box in his wagon in front of his store and they were broken.

At Miles's greenhouse on Somerset street, 1000 double panes of glass were broken and at Peterson's the florist, his loss of glasses number 1,200.

In a large number of private yards, vegetables and flowers were completely destroyed.

Charles Wilson, the contractor, was working at the home of Mrs. Wm. Lowe on Park avenue, and Mrs. Lowe picked up a hail stone which Mr. Wilson measured and it was 1¾ inches long and ¾ inches thick.

At a West Seventh street residence a number of chickens started for cover as soon as soon as the storm commenced, but before all could reach it, a large stone fell and struck a chicken on the topknot with the result of killing it instantly.

Denton's greenhouse on Prospect Hill did not escape, and almost every glass was shattered.

Several runaway horses made a most exciting time on Somerset street as they were seen running in different directions, some with drivers and some without, but luckily in all cases there was no serious damage.

At C. W. McCutchen's greenhouse the majority of the glasses were broken, and being larger ones than is usually used the loss is much greater.

Langhorn, Monfort, and Thorn's photograph galleries all suffered from the hail storm, and in each case the glasses in the skylights were almost a total loss. Langhorn's loss was $150 and Thorn's $100.

Two delivery wagons belonging to George W. Rockfellow were standing before his store when the first hail stone arrived. A succeeding one struck one horse and he started to run and was soon joined by the other. Mr. Rockfellow grabbed one of the frightened animals by the head and the clerks secured the other and all remained there until the hail storm was over and the rain had come.

A. M. Griffin lost nearly 200 panes of glass in his building on Front street from the effects of the storm.

Hail smashed 135 lights of glass in Roberts' stables.

The horses of the hackmen at the North Avenue station held a dance of their own when the hail came, but none ran away. Many of the tops of the carriages were punctured by hail stones. Among those who suffered in this way were Henry Hansen, the top in whose carriage will have to be replaced, Wm. Callahan, Patrick Keeley and Patrick Lynch.

A horse and wagon from the bakery of Stephen Giles, the successor of Compton, ran away on Somerset street and returned to the stable, where he stopped.

Mrs. A. M. Vanderbeek, of Duer street, was caught out doors in the storm, and before she could get under shelter on Somerset street, two holes were cut through the rim of the sailor hat she wore.

The tin type gallery on Somerset street was badly wrecked by the storm.

The hail did one good deed at any rate for it furnished enough ice for Tier to freeze an eight-quart can of ice cream with it.

Three lights in the photo skylight in the Babcock building were smashed as a result of the frozen rain.

Frazee's horse was standing in front of the store when an immense hail stone struck him on the back. He reared and then ran to his stable on Chatham street.

Six panes of glass was the total of Justice Newcorn's loss in his store on West Front street.

ZEB'S "CULID" POKER PARTY.

And Now Zeb Goes to Jail for Thirty Days.

It was nearly three hours before Judge Coddington could get rid of the batch of offenders that came before him this morning.

Mrs. Katy A. Burke was the first to come before the Judge. She was charged by Mr. Smith with allowing her cows to trespass on his property. Ex-Judge William R. Coddington acted as her counsel and after a few remarks showing that it was through no fault of hers, and that she always tried to obey the law, the judge suspended sentence.

Zebeadiah Freeman, colored, was the next victim, and his trial occupied the greater part of the time. The charge was for keeping a gambling den on the Boulevard, and was brought forward by Officer Vanderweg. George W. DeMeza represented the defendant and argued his case with much vigor. "Zeb" invited some of his friends to come to his home on the night of Saturday, July 6th, and spend a social evening. According to "Zeb" and his friends, the evening was spent in playing such innocent games as euchre and seven-up, while beer and whiskey kept them from getting too sober. But Adam Smith, an employe of Charles Potter, took the stand and swore that he went there and lost all the money he had, between $4 and $5, at playing poker, and that "Zeb" got that lucrative little pile called the "kitty." His companions in the game were, he said, "Zeb," Leander Brown, who is a cousin of "Zeb's," Fleming Wade, colored, Dave Hooper, colored, and a white man whose name he did not know. Officers Vanderweg, Fredrickson and Cooney all testified that they had heard the shuffling of cards and the rattling of chips in the upper room of "Zeb's" house where the party congregated, and that such remarks as "I'll raise you a quarter," "I've got three of a kind," "I've two queens," had floated out onto the midnight air. The door was locked but about half-past two Smith went out and later returned. Then the party broke up and Smith was caught at the front gate. Smith said that his reason for going out was to get $5 from his sick wife to try and win back his losses.

After much arguing and testifying the Judge came to the conclusion that the negroes were a set of cheerful liars from certain inconsistencies and contradictions in their story. He therefore decided that Zeb was guilty and gave him his choice between a fine of $25 and thirty days in the county jail. The money was not forthcoming so down he went to Sheriff Kyte's boarding house at Elizabeth.

Those who next came before the Judge were Michael Muldowney, James Shannon, John Kline, Morris Barry and Michael Ginnea, on the charge of fighting and swearing. The Judge imposed a fine of $3 or ten days in the county jail. All paid their fine.

Louis Wilson, of West Fourth street, was charged with being drunk and disorderly on the night on July 6th. He pleaded guilty and paid a $5 fine.

Reckless Boy, Dangerous Air Gun.

A nine-year-old son of Policeman Frederickson while on his way to Sunday-school at Jackson school house yesterday afternoon was shot in the right leg above the knee with a bullet from an air rifle in the hands of a small boy who lives opposite the school house. Fortunately the bullet did not enter the flesh very far and in consequence it was very easy to get out.

—Ireaneus P. Allen, Michael Seader and the Mobus boys, Gus and Frank, with their teams, are carting crushed stone for the new Morris county roads, near Summit. Morris county is building twenty-eight miles of macadam roads.

TRANSFERRED THE CHECKS.

A CLEVER FRAUD WORKED AT THE NORTH AVENUE STATION.

A Shyster Secures a Valuable Trunk By Shifting the Baggage Checks From a Worthless One.

A very clever game was worked at the baggage office of the North avenue station between Friday night and Saturday morning, which is puzzling those in charge at the station. Two trunks, one a large canvas-covered one, and the other smaller and made of iron, had been received at the baggage room. On the latter was several pasters which gave it the appearance of having traveled a considerable distance. Both arrived in Plainfield Friday night. Some time later a strange man, to whom the iron trunk belonged, was at the station. It is supposed that the baggage check from the latter was transferred to the canvas-covered one. He then held the duplicate check which called for the canvas-covered trunk.

Between five and six o'clock Saturday morning the man called at the baggage office and presented his check to the night man, James Wagner, and secured the trunk, leaving the old one at the station.

The large trunk belonged to a woman on West Seventh street and was filled with valuable jewelry, diamonds and clothing. Saturday morning she sent for the trunk when it was discovered to be missing. The old trunk was opened and found to contain a lot of old clothes and nothing of any value. The matter was at once placed in a detective's hands, but as yet not the slightest clew can be found of the man who was the perpetrator of the fraud.

ONE RACE ONLY.

Storm Brought Events at the Driving Park to a Sudden Close.

A large crowd of people met at the gentlemen's driving park Saturday to witness the horse races. On account of the storm only one race was run off, but that was a close and exciting one. Those who entered were J. B. Brown, of Rahway, with Roy B; C. B. Demarest, of Woodbridge, with Golddust; F. F. Annesley, of Woodbridge, with General Benhem; and B. Carpenter, of Woodbridge, with Prince Milks.

After scoring several times they finally got off, each horse holding his place, but when about half way around the track General Benhem got the pole and held it as far as the quarter-mile post when Golddust pulled in ahead of him and won the first lap easily. In the second lap General Benhem again made a spurt ahead, but Golddust held his own and won the race by a length, General Benhem coming in second while, Prince Milks got third with Roy B a poor fourth. The time was 2:36.

Just as the second race was about to be started the storm came on and the horses were quickly taken to shelter.

SERVICE OF SONG.

First Baptist Church Attendants Enjoy Sweet Music.

The evening song service at the First Baptist church last night was largely attended and thoroughly enjoyed.

The choir was increased in numbers for the occasion and under the efficient direction of organist E. J. Fitzburgh gave an admirable rendition of the entire programe, the features of which was the contralto solo by Miss Krymer of Brooklyn, in Mendelssohn's Anthem from thirteenth Psalm, and the soprano solo by Miss F. May Grant, entitled "Hear My Prayer;" Miss Krymer also sang "Eye hath not seen from the Holy City by Gaul," as an offertory, in a very pleasing manner.

The choir sang as a response to the benediction, "Now the day is over."

Those in the choir were:

Mrs. Harold Serrell, and the Misses Swain, Krymer, Thompson, Spear, Grace Bonny, Bertha Needham, Florence Kline, Nancy Randolph, Jessie Runyon, F. May Grant, Flora Petrie, Bessie Blair, Emma Case, and Mr. Smith, Edward Ryder, L. H. Biglow Jr., C. W. McCutchen, B. T. Barnes, Wm. Holmes, Stacy Raynolds, Nelson Hull, and George Snediker.

To Rid the Lake of Carp.

It is understood that the State Game and Fish Commissioners have given out the permission for dragging New Market pond to rid that body of water of its over supply of carp.

Injured at Scott's.

J. Motley, an employe at the Walter Scott Printing Machine Works, was injured very severely this afternoon while working around a piece of machinery. He was taken to the hospital for treatment.

DEFENDER IS A WONDER

She Outpoints and Outfoots the Vigilant.

She Is Also Very Quick in Her Stays—Puts Out to Sea To Meet a Squall—Her Race Yesterday Off Newport Satisfies the Syndicate and Delights Captain Haff.

Newport, July 15.—Defender outsailed the victorious Vigilant in a fair and interesting trial contest yesterday afternoon off the Rhode Island coast. Messrs. Iselin, Morgan and Vanderbilt, the members of the syndicate, who follow every movement of both boats, said they were well pleased with the result. The new yacht again behaved admirably, and both outfooted and outpointed her opponent. The crew of Defender made quick time in bringing her about, it only requiring eighteen seconds to change her course.

The Yachts Sighted.

Soon after 11 o'clock the boats were sighted off Castle Hill, their sails taking a good breeze which came from the northwest, and which was sending them along at a lively rate. The spinnaker booms were then run out to starboard on both yachts. Vigilant broke her spinnake, but the sydicate boat waited for her to come up. At 11:15, when both yachts were half a mile north of Beavertail light, Defender broke her spinnaker, and both started on an even line, heading south by east.

Trouble with Her Spinnaker.

For the next few minute Defender had considerable trouble with her spinnaker, and it was taken in three times before it fell properly. On this account she lost ground. Vigilant's spinnaker was much larger but did not draw as well as defender's after the latter was adjusted. At noon Vigilant hauled in closer to the other yacht, and it was seen that Defender was a trifle ahead. At 12:06 p. m., after having run eight miles in fifty-one minutes, Vigilant took in her spinnaker and headed toward the Narragansett shore. Defender immediately followed.

Vigilant Two Lengths Ahead.

Vigilant was two lengths ahead, with the wind on the beam. Defender at once began to crawl ahead from leward, soon opening a space of two lengths between her and the Gould boat. In a few minutes more the distance was doubled. Both boats were then carrying balloon jibs. At 12:20 Defender came about and set her jib and skysail and hauled down the balloon jib. The baby jib topsail was also set.

Defender Far in the Lead.

Vigilant went about seven minutes later, and set the same sail. Her jib topsail was nearly twice the size of Defender's. Both boats pointed well, but Defender showed superiority in this respect as well as in speed on this tack. At 12.48 they went about on the port tack, Defender far ahead and well up to windward. The latter went about and pulled away in eighteen seconds. Both continued on the same leg until after 1 o'clock, when a squall was seen coming from the southward.

Sailed Well in a Squall.

Vigilant's commander at once went about, took in her head sails and was taken in tow by her tender, which headed for New London. With the squall came a shift of wind from the south. Defender took in her club topsail and set her working topsail, went about and put to sea in a twelve-knot breeze. In order to show Messrs. Morgan and Vanderbilt what she could do, after making a long reach she headed for Point Judith, which Vigilant was about rounding in tow of the tender. Vigilant was soon overhauled and, apparently anxious for another brush, again set sail.

Vigilant Gives Up the Race.

After a short trial, in which she was again beaten, Vigilant gave up the race and Defender returned to Newport, casting anchor at 6 p. m. Captain Haff was fairly elated with her work, and all who observed the yacht express confidence in her ability to compete with anything in her class afloat. The syndicate is entirely satisfied with the boat's performance.

MRS. CHASE IN NEW YORK.

She Is Trying To Raise Money To Save Edgewood.

New York, July 15.—Mrs. Kate Chase, the daughter of Salmon Chase, one of the foremost figures in the history of this country, is in this city trying to raise money enough to save Edgewood, her father's old home, on the outskirts of Washington, D. C., from lawyers who have foreclosed a mortgage on the place. The lawyers have granted an extension of the time of payment to Mrs. Chase, who believes that she can manage to ultimately retain the paternal estate. For obvious reasons the amount of the mortgage has not been divugled by Mrs. Chase.

Colored Republican Convention.

New York, July 15.—About fifty leading colored republicans, representing the numerous colored republican organizations in this city, held a caucus yesterday afternoon, and a committee was appointed to confer with the local organizations as to the advisability of forming a state club and sending delegates to a colored men's republican convention to be held probably at Saratoga at some future date.

Run Down at a Crossing.

Rahway, N. J., July 15.—Robert Robinson and his grandson, Robert Wyman, of Brooklyn, were run down at Garwood on the Central railroad of New Jersey by the Royal Blue line Saturday evening. Both horses were killed, the furniture van was totally demolished and the occupants are lying unconscious at the home of Mr. Robinson's sister in Garwood.

Preparing for Fights at Dallas.

New York, July 15.—A special from Dallas, Tex., says: President Stuart, of the Flordia Athletic club yesterday instructed Manager Vendig to sign Steve O'Donnell and Peter Maher, and George Dixon and Billy Plimmer. These events will take place Friday, November 1.

Big Leather Dressing Mills Burned.

Gloversville, N. Y., July 15.—The leather dressing mills of John Q. Adams, located in Johnstown, were totally destroyed by fire Sunday afternoon. The loss will amount to about $15,000.

64 STRANGERS LEFT.

Although Several Bicycle Races Are To Be Run at Asbury To-day.

Asbury Park, N. J., July 15.—The sixteenth annual national meet of the League of American Wheelmen officially ended when the clock struck twelve Saturday night, but many conditions conspired to carry the affair over Sunday and to-day. In the beginning there was the postponement until to-day of the final heat of the two mile Class B handicap races rendered necessary by the terrfiic hail, thunder and lightning outbreak which struck town just before the men were put on their merits Saturday. Then came the announcement that Harry Maddox, the pride of Asbury Park, would ride to-day for the five mile record and, on top of this, the race committee yesterday opened entry lists for a number of events for to-day.

Few Strangers Left.

But these races must derive their spectators for the most part from the summer guests at the various hotels and the local population rather than from the L. A. W. members who have been present as delegates to the meet, a majority of the latter having been compelled by arrangements previously made to leave for their homes.

Too Sedate a Spot.

There was, on the whole, not so much real fun at the meet of '95 as is usual at league affairs, and this lack is attributable to the fact that Asbury Park is a more sedate spot than any heretofore selected for the annual round-up. The restrictions of this seaside town chafed upon the free-and-easy inclinations of the visitors, and the sacred composure and reserve of Ocean Grove annoyed them greatly.

Worried the Visitors.

One is not permitted to drive a carriage, or ride a bicycle, or smok a cigarette in Ocean Grove between midnight Saturday and the same hour of Sunday. This sort of thing naturally worried the worldly-wise visitors intensely, and racked the Denverites especially, they constituting the only real live large delegation in attendance.

BURGLAR IN HIS BEDROOM.

Stone Was Ordered To Produce His Valuables, But Got His Revolver.

Newark, N. J., July 15.—Alfred J. Stone, upholsterer, of No. 913 Broadway, New York city, and living on North Arlington avenue, East Orange, was awakened at 3 o'clock Sunday morning by a burglar in his bedroom. The burglar struck a match and held a pistol over Mr. Stone and his wife in their bed. He ordered Mr. Stone to get up and hand over his money and watch.

Fired in the Dark.

Stone arose and went to the bureau, but instead of getting his money got a revolver. In the meantime the match had gone out. Stone, however, fired in the darkness, but missed his mark and the burglar fled from the room and got away. The intruder effected an entrance to the house by cutting a pain of glass with a diamond in the piazza window and pushing back the catch.

TO MAKE DAMASCUS STEEL.

A Des Moines Man Claims To Have Discovered the Process.

Des Moines, Ia., July 15.—S. R. Dawson, of this city, has discovered a process of making Damascus steel. The best skilled metal workers declare his edge instruments to have even every property of the old Damascus blades. He keeps the process a secret, but says it is cheap. A company has been organized by local capitalists, with $500,000 capital, to develop the industry. The steel made by this process is flexible and holds an edge longer than that made by any other method. Mr. Dawson has worked on the matter for years.

DID NOT GO TO CHURCH.

Ex-President Harrison Spends a Quiet Sunday at Old Forge.

Old Forge, N. Y., July 15.—Although Rev. A. F. Earnshaw, a Presbyterian clergyman of Lowville, conducted services here yesterday, ex-President Harrison did not attend them as his camp is over two miles from here. General Harrison spent a very quiet Sunday. He was at breakfast early and after that meal was eaten he went out on the veranda and sat there until late in the evening.

Killed by Lightning.

Punta Gorda, Fla., June 15.—Late Saturday night lightning struck a tent here in which there were seven persons. George Carter, a young man, was instantly killed, and the others knocked senseless. Two of the injured, Messrs. Mansfield and Gillis, may not recover. The sight of one of Mansfield's eyes was destroyed.

Printing Office Burned Out.

Hartford, Conn., July 15.—Fire last night in the printing house of R. L. Peck & Co., on the fifth floor of 14 Ford street, destroyed that floor and the goods on the lower floors were soaked with water. A lot of expensive catalogues and the entire edition of the Connecticut Quarterly were burned.

To Ask the Pope To Mediate.

Paris, July 15.—The Matins Constantinople correspondent telegraphs that the Sultan thinks of sending Galilee Bey, introducer of diplomats, to Rome to ask the pope to mediate in the questions that have arisen between Turkey and the powers in connection with Armenian.

Salisbury and Armenian Question.

London, July 15.—The Post to-day will say it believes that Prime Minister Salisbury is about to lead the Armenian negotiations into a channel which will neither compromise the integrity of Turkey nor afford Russia occasion to effect her design.

Brought in by a Prize Crew.

Picton, N. S., July 15.—The Austrian bark Redento was brought into port yesterday by a prize crew from the Chezzetcock fishing schooner, Maggie May. The Redento is a bark of 640 tons, loaded with seals.

Big Blaze at Scranton.

Scranton, Pa., July 15.—The grocery and drygoods store of Luce Brothers was burned yesterday. The fire is believed to have been caused by exploding gas. The loss is $15,000; covered by insurance.

Nicaragua Commission Returns.

Key West, Fla., July 15.—The United States steamer Montgomery, having on board the members of the Nicaraguan canal commission, has arrived here and is lying at the quarantine station.

VERY "WET" AT CONEY

540,000 Glasses of Beer Sold There Yesterday.

But in New York City the Excise Law Was Again Rigidly Enforced, and There is No Indication That Present Orders Will Be Changed. Soda Water Stands Undisturbed.

New York, July 15.—This city passed through another dry Sunday yesterday, and from the low, deep growls emitted by the enforced "drys," it is a mistaken idea to suppose that the people who want their Sunday drink are getting used to the prohibitive state of affairs. However, it is certain that yesterday was a counterpart of its predecessors since the Roosevelt fiat went forth, and there is every indication that its successors will be the same. Since the decision of Judge McAdam, which was rendered a few days ago, in which it was held that the sale of soda water on Sunday was illegal, there has been much speculation as to the course the police would pursue in regard to that kind of traffic. The druggists and soda water dispensers, however, were not interfered with yesterday, and the soda fizzed as merrily as ever.

One Soda Water Arrest.

Charles Zitfuss, a druggist at No. 2 Dock street, Morris Heights, was arrested late last evening for selling soda water on Sunday. A policeman went into the drug store, and after being served with the beverage arrested the proprietor.

Coney Island's Greatest Day.

The strict enforcement of the excise law in this city drove a large number of persons out, and there were more than 110,000 visitors at Coney Island, the largest crowd since the island was annexed to the city of Brooklyn.

540,000 Glasses of Beer Sold.

According to a high authority more than 3,600 kegs, or 540,000 glasses of beer were drank by the thirsty crowd there during the day. Among the visitors at Manhattan beach yesterday was supreme court judge William J. Gaynor. After luncheon he took a stroll and passed ex-Senator Platt, who is spending this season there, but neither saluted as they passed by.

ENDEAVORERS REST.

Spend Sunday at the Churches, but Refuse to Use the Street Cars.

Boston, July 15.—The programme of the Christian Endeavorers yesterday included work only for the visiting clergymen. The local ministers in general gave place to them, and it is doubtful if every before in the history of Boston its pulpets were supplied with such an array of eminent preachers on the same day. To the more than 50,000 members of the Y. P. S. C. E., the day came as a literal "day of rest."

A Day of Rest Truly.

Wearied as they were by continued convention session, they seemed glad to be able to attend service in the localities in which their headquarters were located, instead of having to undergo the crowding and hustling necessary to get to the tent meetings and the Mechanics' hall sessions.

Refused To Travel on Sunday.

But yesterday's programme was not primarily prompted by the desire for rest. "Lord's Day" is one of the fundamental principles of the Christian Endeavor element. True to this principle the members refused to travel on Sunday and the distribution of clergymen was so planned that the delegations quartered in the suburbs could attend worship in their districts.

Thronged with Pedestrians.

Several delegations located down town emphasized their ideas on the matter of Sabbath observance by meeting Saturday and passing resolutions pledging themselves not to use the street cars or other conveyances on Sunday. As a result the streets, just prior to the commencement of regular church services, were thronged with men and women wearing endeavor badges, proceeding on foot to the convenient churches.

No Singing on the Streets.

They had already begun the day with the usual 6:30 a. m. prayer meetings, at their various headquarters, but in contrast to their practice on other days there was no singing on the streets as the delegations passed to and fro.

"MINNIE" JILTED HIM.

So Young Lev Endeavored To End His Life.

Philadelphia, July 15.—Benjamin Lev, a particularly bright but romantic boy of 19, shot and probably fatally wounded himself in Fairmount park yesterday because a girl, with whom he was in love, had jilted him. Lev chose a spot in the park where he and the girl had exchanged vows of love and unalterable devotion, and, lying on the ground, sent a bullet through his heart. The boy's aim for his heart was good, but the bullet struck a rib and passed round his body and lodged in his back.

A Letter for "Minnie."

On Lev was found a long letter addressed to "Minnie," deploring her faithlessness. On the way to the hospital Lev recovered consciousness, and repeatedly expressed regret that he had failed to kill himself.

A Young Inventor.

Lev had a strong mechanical bent, and was the inventor of a number of small but useful articles. He was employed by the Philadelphia Traction company to superintend the equipment of its trolley cars with fenders, and is said to have been the inventor of the fender the company has adopted.

Mrs. Stevenson Is Improving.

Bloomington, Ill., July 15.—Mrs. Adlai E. Stevenson continues to improve. She was confined to her bed last night, but all alarming symptoms have disappeared.

Little Girl Killed by Lightning.

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 15.—Winney Davis, a six-year-old girl, was struck and killed by lightning yesterday while standing in the open door of her home.

Race Horses Burned.

Kawanna, Ind., July 15.—Hendrickson's stock barn burned yesterday. The trotting stallion Newsboy perished, and Tycho, the trotter, was badly injured.

AMBITIOUS WOMEN

MAKE HEROES OF MEN.

She Will Brave Anything for the Man She Loves.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

When an ambitious woman loves a man she will spur him to heroic efforts. She will dare with him the rigors of the frozen North, and encourage him in daring dangers almost unsurmountable.

Women are by nature ambitious according to their physical and mental strength. Hope and ambition come with perfect health, but vanish before sickness and despair.

American women are, unfortunately, particularly subject to those painful female diseases that are the cause of so much hopelessness and misery.

Could all women realize the undeniable fact that they suffer unnecessarily, how much brighter life would be!

Lydia E. Pinkham devoted her life to the study of female diseases and their cause; and she discovered in the Vegetable Compound an absolute remedy. It succeeds in removing the cause of the trouble.

Women who rely more upon their own natural common-sense, rather than on the theories of their physicians, write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., and are soon restored to health.

Here is a living example: "Four months ago I was unable to stand on my feet. I had falling of the womb, kidney trouble, and inflammation of the bladder; the backache and bearing-down pains were dreadful.

My physician could give me no relief. A friend said, try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Well, I did. Oh, if every suffering woman would do the same, they would be cured, cured absolutely and entirely, as I am!" MRS. WM. M. MOREY, 20 Seymour St., Pittsfield, Mass.

FOUGHT FIRE AT SEA

Normandie's Hold Ablaze Twenty-four Hours.

No Panic, However, Occurred Among the Passengers—One of Her Firemen Killed by an Explosion—A Birth in the Steerage—Decidedly Eventful Trip of the French Liner.

New York, July 15.—The French liner La Normandie which arrived from Havre yesterday had a decidedly eventful voyage. Just after her departure from Havre one of the firemen, Francois Laflam by name, was instructed to open one of the coal bunkers. He did so, using a naked light.

Killed by Explosion.

As soon as the hatch was opened there was a rush of gas instantly igniting by the lamp flame which exploded with tremendous force, instantly killing Leflam and doing more or less damage to the fittings. Leflam was only 19 years old and was a native of Brittany. He was buried at sea.

Fire in the Forehold.

On July 9, just after the passengers had seated themselves at dinner, fire was discovered in the forehold and a fire alarm was instantly sounded. The crew ran to fire stations and lines of hose were stretched along the decks. The passengers were quiet and orderly under the circumstances and there was no panic. Officers and crew worked systematically all night long and towards morning had the fire well under control.

Burned All Night.

At 9 o'clock on the morning of the 10th the fire was entirely out. The passengers, headed by Bishop O'Connell, James Campbell, Mrs. Henry M. Sanders and J. Bussat, drew up a set of resolutions thanking Captain Deloncle, his officers and crew for their bravery and energy.

Birth in the Steerage.

La Normandie made port without further incident except a birth in the steerage. On July 6, off the Lizard, the St. Louis passed in sight of the French steamer and quickly drew ahead and out of sight.

Its One Hundred and Sixth Anniversary Celebrated in France.

Paris, July 15.—Yesterday was the 106th anniversary of the fall of the bastile, and falling on Sunday the holiday was more generally observed than usual. All the public buildings and many private residences were decorated and the day was celebrated in the most fervid manner. Tens of thousands of persons strolled about the streets, while thousands of others visited the various resorts in the vicinity of the city. Many Parisians went in carriages or on bicycles to Longchamps in the afternoon to witness a review of troops. In the evening the city was brilliantly illuminated. The chief open air resorts were crowded with dancers and onlookers, and the merriment lasted all night.

Despondency was the cause of the suicide.

BAPTISTS Y. P. U. UNION.

A Large Gathering Predicted at Their Meeting in Baltimore.

Baltimore, July 15.—It is evident that the fifth session of the international convention of the Baptist Young People's union of America is to mark an epoch in Baltimore; for it is predicted that it will be the largest gathering of Baptists that the world has ever seen, and, numerically, the greatest convention ever held in the Monumental city. Within the next three days 15,000 of the flowers of young Baptist manhood and womanhood will have assembled in the city, where everything is in readiness for their monster convention.

Rallies and Prayer Meetings.

The convention will be in session four days, during which time there will be rallies and prayer meetings in all of the Baptist churches of the city and houses of worship of other denominations, besides the gatherings in the mammoth tent specially erected near the main entrance to Druid Hill park. The tent will comfortably seat more than 10,000 persons.

Chorus of 500 Voices.

The platform from which the speakers will address the audiences is provided with seats for two hundred. Behind the platform six tiers of seats will be used by a chorus of five hundred voices and an orchestra of fifty pieces, under the direction of Prof. H. W. Porter.

Twenty-two Simultaneous Meetings.

Twenty-two simultaneous preliminary meetings in Baltimore churches and missions will be held Wednesday evening to pray for the Divine Spirit to rest upon the deliberations of the convention. Over one hundred separate meetings will be held in four days.

Opening Exercises.

The convention will be opened on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock by President John H. Chapman, of Chicago. After devotional exercises, lead by the Rev. C. A. Hobbs, of Delavan, Wis., the address of welcome will be made by Eugene Levering, on behalf of the Baltimore churches. Dr. H. M. Wharton, of Brantly church, will deliver the welcome of the Baltimore Young People's societies. The response will be made by the Rev. Dr. A. C. Dixon, of Hanson place church, Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Minute Gun" Speeches.

A feature of Friday morning's convention session will be the salutation of state flags and "minute guns," by representatives of state and provincial unions. Preceded by young ladies bearing banners, the chosen speakers from the state unions will march to the platform to the air of a stirring march hymn. After the flags have been arranged across the platform, the speakers will deliver "minute gun" speeches reviewing the work of their unions.

Washington, July 15.—The British colony of Victoria has been revising its tariff, and proposes to admit the following articles, among others, free of duty: American miners' gum boots; horses; carpeting and felt druggeting; certain drugs; bleached Hessians (boots); military hosiery; India rubber gloves and skin rubbers, special preparations of infants and invalids foods; breast drills and bucket ears; numerous articles of iron hollowware; parts of pneumatic tires; catridge paper; brown rock salt; rough and unbent hickory; staves, dressed but not shaped; sycamore, not cut into sizes for boxes or packages; toe tips; cotton twine; wine presses; elm hubs and wooden buckets. A reduction is proposed by both the government and tariff board on the duty now assessed on nearly every article in the present tariff law. RUIN AT CHERRY HILL

Cyclone's Work Viewed by Thousands of Visitors.

Three Deaths and Another Victim May Be Added to the List—Relief Measures Begun—Tents for the Homeless—Dangerous Wrecks Pulled Down.

Cherry Hill, N. J., July 15.—Three dead and about six seriously injured is the result of Saturday afternoon's tornado, not including the homeless condition of about fifteen families. The dead are Conrad Friedman, the hotelkeeper; Anton ——, one of August Mund's laborers, and William Ahrens's eight-months-old baby. Six persons were taken to the Hackensack hospital, but two have since been discharged. Edgar Chinnock, the decorative artist, whose skull was fractured while he attempted to save his brother Frank's horses, is still in a critical condition. He was able to recognize his mother yesterday afternoon, but his recovery is doubtful.

Relief Fund Formed.

The Cherry Hill relief fund was formed at Hackensack yesterday, with Jacob L. Vanbuskirk as president; E. M. Sturm, vice-president; A. R. Beatly, secretary, and John O. Grode, treasurer. Cigar boxes were displayed on all the prominent thoroughfares and collections taken at Cherry Hill all the afternoon from the mass of visitors. About $1,000 was collected.

Thousands Visit the Scene.

Upwards of 25,000 persons visited the scene of destruction Sunday, some driving from New York, Jersey City, Long Island and Nyack. Rev. A. Duryee, pastor of the Reformed church, which was blown off its foundations, held services in the open air yesterday afternoon and fully 3,000 persons attended.

Clearing Away Dangerous Wrecks.

To-night a mass meeting will be held in the Hackensack opera house to devise means of establishing a fund for the relief of the needy sufferers at Cherry Hill. All the churches have promised to combine in the work. The Bergen hook and ladder company of Hackensack was on hand yesterday and cleared away the dangerous wrecks. Curio seekers and camera fiends were out in full force.

Tents for the Homeless.

The damage to property will reach about $75,000. No insurance policies cover damage by tornado. Tents have been sent here from neighboring towns. About ten families are in dire circumstances through the loss of their new houses, and prompt attention will be paid to these.

Injured by a Falling Tree.

William Hudson, employed in the statistical department of the Fidelity and Casualty company in New York, was rowing on the Hackensack river near Cherry Hill when the tornado struck this place. He got out of the boat and attempted to reach the outskirts of the woods, but a falling tree struck him and severely injured his spine and head. His friends put him into a boat and rowed him to Hackensack, where his home is located.

APPEAL FOR AID.

Fifteen Houses Wrecked by the Tornado at Woodhaven, L. I.

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 15.—At a meeting yesterday of the citizens of Woodhaven, L. I., which was badly wrecked by the tornado Saturday afternoon, an appeal was issued to the people of Brooklyn, New York and elsewhere for funds to help repair the damaged dwellings.

Poor People the Sufferers.

The appeal says that fifteen houses are demolished and twenty-five or thirty others were badly damaged, all homesteads of poor working men who are not only homeless but helpless. A conservative estimate fixes the amount needed to rebuild the wrecked houses at $50,000. The Woodhaven bank, William F. Wickoff, president, is authorized to receive any donations for the sufferers.

There were no passengers on board.

They will be released this evening. Among them are twelve ballet girls, mostly New Yorkers, who left this city about two months ago to join the Louis Calderone Dramatic Company in Havana. The venture was not a success from a financial standpoint and the ballet girls were left stranded in Havana with little besides their return tickets.

The minister who preaches against the extravagance of the rich is on the wrong track. It is impossible for the rich to be too extravagant. The money they spend to gratify their whims is of much greater benefit to the world than it would be if hoarded. The miserly rich are the ones who ought to be preached at.—Exchange.

The Essex Trades Council meeting at Newark have passed a resolution instructing its delegates to the Anti-Contract League to vote against any plan that may bring hardship upon union workingmen of any nationality. Delegate Connelly declared that the principle of the Anti-Contract League was wrong, for no public body could legally bind itself to refrain from giving contracts.

A Lucky Escape.

Dr. Jenkins and his colored man escaped serious injury yesterday noon while out riding. They passed under the Central avenue railroad bridge just as a Blue Line train went by. The horse was frightened and Dr. Jenkins was unable to hold him. When Second street was reached the doctor turned in by a telephone pole in front of Manning's flats and thus stopped the runaway. Both the doctor and his man were thrown out, but fortunately neither received the slightest injury. The horse succeeded in breaking the harness and escaping. The left front wheel was demolished and the wagon otherwise damaged.

Look Out for the Test.

Citizens must not be alarmed if they hear the fire alarm tomorrow noon at 12:05, for at that time Chief Doane is going to test one or two of the boxes to discover, if possible, a grounded wire that has been causing trouble for some time with the fire gong. If more than four rounds of any one box is blown that will signify that there is a fire and not a test.

Discovered the Fire.

Peter B. Wright arrived in New York yesterday morning on the steamer Normandie, after a most exciting voyage, in which a fierce fire blazed in her merchandise for fifteen hours. Mr. Wright was the first to discover the fire. The particulars of the accident are published in the telegraphic columns of The Press.

SEYMOUR SMITH'S DEATH.

He Was Shot Through the Heart Causing Instant Death.

The Otsego Farmer of Cooperstown contains the following accurate account of Seymour Smith's sad death:

Our quiet town was terribly shocked on Monday of this week about five o'clock p. m. by the occurrence of a very sad and fatal accident, in which Seymour, the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Seymour G. Smith, of Plainfield, N. J., lost his life. He with a friend of his from the city, was here for the summer, having arrived only a few days ago. While the two boys were in swimming with a number of other lads, Fred Sternberg, with a Winchester repeating rifle, stopped on the bank of the creek. One of the bathers wanted to see how the cartridge was brought into position for firing, and in showing this the gun was accidentally discharged. The bullet of 38 calibre struck near the left arm, passing through the heart and coming out through the right shoulder blade, killing him almost instantly. Mr. and Mrs. Smith were at once notified by wire, and reached Hartwick Tuesday afternoon.

Coroner T. S. Blodgett, of Cooperstown, impaneled the following jury Monday evening: H. O. Branch, J. M. Bush, R. W. Gardner, E. N. Higbie, George McC. Augur, G. W. Porter, F. F. Harrington and H. S. Bradley. H. O. Branch was appointed foreman. They viewed the body and adjourned to nine a. m. Tuesday. Witnesses sworn were Fred Sternberg, George Bowler, Dr. J. M. McClellan, Lester Baldwin and Leon Porter. After hearing the evidence the jury rendered a verdict of accidental shooting.

Young Smith was sixteen years of age, an exceptionally bright boy and of good habits. His parents and two older brothers are stricken with grief; and the whole village is in sadness over the terribly sudden sorrow. Another sad lesson for boys, to be careful with firearms.

The funeral services and interment were held at Hartwick on July 11th.

CYCLING COMMENT.

William Hartpence and William Wenzel took a ride on their wheels to Neshanic yesterday, stopping on their way at Somerville and South Branch.

Good roads and a clear day always bring the bicyclists out in full force and yesterday was no exception. Out-of-town riders passed through here all day, many of them stopping at McVey's restaurant and the Revere House for refreshments.

Yet another victory for the bloomer girl, and in a new field. At the Retail Grocers' picnic, in San Francisco, last week, one of the athletic events was a "young ladies' race." When the word was given and the girl sprinters skurried across the line, with skirts swishing and hair flying, Miss Juanita Smith was seen to grab the hem of her dress and gather her skirts high up under her arms, revealing her lower limbs clad in not too tight fitting bloomers to the knee, and stockings thence down. She quickly forged ahead of all the other racers, and came in winning handsomely, with "the rest nowhere." The crowd wildly cheered the bloomers, and the wearer afterward frankly attributed her victory to her improved clothes.—American Wheelman.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

FAILED TO DRAW THE MONEY.

J. E. Ross Arrested, Charged With Impersonating a Fireman.

James E. Ross was arrested in Elizabeth Saturday charged with trying to impersonate a fireman on the Central railroad and draw his month's pay. Ross bears a marked resemblance to Fireman Dunham, of the Central railroad, who lives at Dunellen.

When the pay car stopped Saturday at Elizabeth Ross dressed himself in a jumper and overalls such as are worn by firemen and got into line with the other men who were awaiting their turn to get paid.

When he asked for the money one of the clerks, who knew fireman Dunham intimately, detected him and paymaster Hess called a special officer, who took Ross to Police Headquarters. He was arraigned yesterday in the Police Court and committed to the county jail in default of $500 bail.

The notice was served by Frank Bergen, the lawyer for the old telephone company, on William H. Rankin, president of the Mutual Company. The third or midsummer excursion to Mauch Chunk, Glen Onoko and the Switchback Railroad that will be be run by the Central Railroad of New Jersey, on Wednesday next, the 17th inst., promises to be one of the most enjoyable outings that the company have yet arranged. It will combine one of the real romantic touches of country outing in a region at once varied in character and sublime beyond description. While old Mauch Chunk itself is always interesting in its surroundings and the Switch back gravity railroad is shown to afford a ride full of excitement and exhilarating tendencies, the ride itself through the green cultivated acres of New Jersey is well worth the taking and will serve to enlighten those who do not know that the railroad does actually run through the "Jersey Central" section, and that the name is aptly applied. Glen Onoko, always fresh, cool and beautiful awaits the visitor, and the grand Lehigh River whose placid surface reflects the bold mountains hanging o'er it, sings the same old song as though to welcome the stranger to its shores. A lunch car will be attached to the train. The low rate brings this outing within the reach of all.

Dougherty Released.

James H. Dougherty, a law student at Elizabeth, who was charged with embezzlement, was released yesterday on his own recognizance in Police Court, Elizabeth. He denies the accusation which was made against him by Justice Charles Jacobs. The latter seemed disposed to withdraw the charge yesterday, but Justice Neill said he would have to send the papers to the Grand Jury, and if Justice Jacobs had any explanations to make he could do so before that body.

Stepped on a Rake.

The tine of a rake is a dangerous instrument to step on, as Miss Lucy Swalm, who is employed by Mrs. C.E. Rocap, has found out to her cost. Sunday morning she went out in the yard and, not seeing the rake, stepped directly on it. Dr. Hedges was sent for and bandaged the injured foot.

Hop Lung's Corner in Pigs.

An attempt on the part of a mysterious Chinaman to corner the local pig market caused a great deal of comment among commission merchants along Light street wharf yesterday and a sharp advance in the price of juvenile porkers. The Chinaman, who said his name was Hop Lung, was not communicative about the object of his purchases, but he seemed to have all the money he needed and bought nearly all the pigs that were offered on Light, Camden and Charles streets, and secured options on most of those that are expected to arrive to-day.

Hop Lung arrived on the wharf early in the morning. He was accompanied by another Chinaman, who acted as an interpreter. They began buying at once, taking almost everything that was offered. The news of the buyer's presence in the market and his evident anxiety to acquire the entire visible supply of shoats soon became known, and prices advanced. Before Hop had gotten a third of those on the market he found that prices had gone up over 60 per cent. Porkers, which before he arrived were selling at about 75 cents each, were held as high as $1.25.

The interpreter made the bargain for the sales, which Hop Lung carefully entered in his book in mysterious characters, and then paid for his purchases from a big roll of money. He carried a big fan, which he would stick down the neck of his blouse while examining the pigs.

He said he intended to take a car load of pigs to New York and raise them, intimating that he ran a pig farm somewhere near New York City. His purchases amounted to about 100 pigs.—Baltimore Sun.

Close Figuring in Kansas.

It is said that a man who won't buy a paper because he can borrow one has invented a machine by which he can cook his dinner by the smoke from his neighbor's chimney. This same fellow sits in the back pew in a church to save interest on contributions, and is always borrowing a ride to town to save the wear and tear on his own horseflesh? Yes, you know him. He's a first cousin to the man who never winds up his watch for fear of breaking the spring. He undoubtedly was a near relative to the man who went into the back yard during the recent cold snap, soaked his hair in water, let it freeze, and then broke it off in order to cheat the barber out of a haircut.—Topeka Daily Capital.

Slobbs—I didn't know that.

Hobbs—Yes; I saw him in a Turkish bath the other night, and he was taking off everything.—Philadelphia Record.

YOUR SCALP! During the heats of summer does it become irritated and invite an occasional friendly scratch? To wash it is well, but not too often, lest your hair become "brash" and stiff. But treat it twice or thrice a week with our Petroleum Hair Tonic—a little rubbed in with your finger ends, and you will find the feeling of comfort and coolness truly delightful. Positively nothing equals it as a balm for the woes of your scalp. Sprinkler bottles 50c. Only at

CAPT. ROBT. COOK, Camden, N. J., says: "I had been seriously troubled for some time with indigestion, constipation, and a weak stomach, my system becoming all run down, and losing fifty pounds in weight. I had about given up hopes of again being a well man, when I came across which soon restored me to health, I gaining twenty-five pounds in three weeks. Give them a trial and see what they will do for you."

Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills,
